Many hundreds of strikers accompanied by women marched to the Latimer mines, and, though they did not attack the workmen or commit any violence, they marched back and forth on the public road near the mines in such a menacing manner that the Pardee employes feared attack should any emerge from their homes to go to work. In this way the strikers effectually prevented the starting of operations, and Mr. Pardee's decision to close the mine followed.

The Delaware & Hudson Company joined with the other operators and posted notices offering the 10 per cent increase. The Pennsylvania Coal Company is the only other large operator that has not posted the notices, but President Thorne has been quoted as saying his company will agree to whatever the others do.

A DESTRUCTIVE TORNADO

Kills Two People and Destroys $800,000 Worth of Property.

One of the fiercest tornadoes that ever visited northern Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin struck the edge of the Mesaba range town of Biwabik Saturday, killing two persons, injuring eight and doing damage variously estimated at from $800,000 to $850,000.

Dead—John Moriarity, crushed by falling wall; Mrs. John Moriarity, blown against tree, head crushed.

The principal damage consists of the destruction of shaft houses, dwelling and business houses. The Austrian settlement at Biwabik suffered severely. Twenty houses were blown down.

Slim Chance for New Election Law.

The Kentucky senate Saturday passed a substitute for the house election bill. The substitute is virtually a return to the law which was in force when the Goebel law was enacted, and under which the county judges appoint the election officers. The house will almost certainly reject the substitute, and the chances are for the passage of a new election law at the present session are not flattering.

Germans Had to Retreat.

The London Standard has the following from Tien Tsin:

"A German force came into collision with 8,000 Chinese, described as 'Boxers,' a few miles south of Tien Tsin, Friday morning. The Germans were checked and compelled to retire to Tien Tsin. There is reason to believe that the Chinese in this case were not 'Boxers,' but were Li Hung Chang's veterans."

Surprised the Celestials.

A Shanghai dispatch says: The astonishment of the Chinese was great when they received official notification from the Viceroy to the effect that foreign pressure had necessitated the degredation of prominent members of the court. The new German cable from Che Foo to Tsin Tau has been opened. It is reported that the allies will demand an indemnity which will aggregate 200,000,000 taels.

INDUSTRIAL CONVENTION.

An Important Meeting to Be Held at New Orleans.

N. F. Thompson, secretary of the Southern Industrial Convention, says the next session of that body, to be held in New Orleans December 4-9, promises to be an important industrial meeting.

Governor Heard, of Louisiana, has issued invitations to the governors of each southern state to attend the opening day of the convention, and many have already signified their acceptance.

It is designed to devote the first day to the consideration of the Nicaragua canal. In addition to the governors, the superintendents of educations and commissioners of agriculture of every state are expected to be present, together with representatives of every railroad system in the south. Invitations are also extended to manufacturers, commercial bodies, mayors of cities, business firms and corporations, and any others interested in the objects of the association or any object to be discussed before it.

BRYAN TALKS TO INDIANIANS

Large Crowds Greet Him All Along the Line.

Hon. W. J. Bryan, the democratic presidential candidate, Saturday concluded his tour of the state of Indiana. He made fourteen speeches during the day before crossing the Ohio river. The speeches were made at Plainfield, a small station a few miles out of Indianapolis; Green Castle, where the Depauw University is located; Brazil, an important mining center; Terre Haute, Lewis, Linton, Elnorona, Washington, Shoals, Mitchell, Rylans, Salem, New Albany and Jeffersonville. His audiences were all large, except at the very small towns. At such places as Terre Haute, Linton, Salem and Washington there were great multitudes of people. At all the stopping places great enthusiasm was displayed.

MAINLAND SUFFERERS.

Governor Sayers Takes Steps for Their Relief.

Gov. Sayers, of Texas, has concluded to turn over $80,000 cash to Judge Talliaferro, chairman of the relief committee, for the mainland sufferers by the September gulf hurricane.

The conditions are particularly bad around Alvin and Hitchcock. A movement has been started at Dallas by Aaron Coffee, the well known agricultural writer, to have mass meetings held in every county seat in Texas and petition Gov. Sayers to use $150,000 cash of the $2,000,000 surplus in the state treasury to aid Galveston and coast sufferers generally, and to petition the legislature at the session to open in January to indorse this action of the governor if he takes it.

Pork Goes Up $4 a Barrel.

October pork jumped to $17 per barrel in Chicago Saturday on the board of trade. The close was at $14.50, and the opening was at $14.25. The market went from the opening in half-dollar leaps to $16, and from the last given figure jumped a dollar on a single trade.

Sir Thomas Lipton is said to be "long" 75,000 barrels, having cornered the visible supply in Chicago, as well as 40,000 barrels not yet in sight.

Roberts Will Soon Start Home.

Lord Roberts, the London Daily News announces, will leave South Africa during the last week of October.

Rebuilding Homes.

By action of the central relief committee of Galveston Saturday $50,000 was appropriated for repairing wrecked homes and $100,000 for building homes for those whose residences were completely destroyed. The recipients of this assistance are to be determined by the building committee.

A receiver has been appointed for the Cumberland Building and Loan Association at Chattanooga. Liabilities are stated to be about $144,000. No statement of the assets was made.

Alabama Internal Revenue Receipts.

The internal revenue collections in Alabama for the month of September, as shown by reports from the office of Collector J. H. Bingham, amounted to $44,249.50. Collections for August were $45,656.64. Total collections for the first quarter of the fiscal year were $175,462.56.

Campaign Lies.

What is the purpose of the campaign lie? Is it to amuse the people? It certainly does not influence voters. As a general thing it is so easily detected that no one regards it seriously.

Doubtless campaign committees se... cure the services of those who have a talent for manufacturing lies re... specting the opposing candidates or the opposing party, and pay them in accordance with the success with which they discharge the duties re... quired of them. Now and then a cam... paign lie is set afloat that is really injurious to the opposite party, and then there is a great effort to coun... teract its effect. Usually, however, no attention is paid to campaign lies, and they are forgotten almost as soon as they appear in print.

One was published the other day that attracted some attention for the reason that the Republican campaign managers doubtless made a special effort to have it circulated.

The purport of it was that ex-Gov... ernor Stone, of Missouri, had made a bargain with Mr. Croker, in which the latter agreed to raise a campaign fund of $2,000,000, to be used in car... rying the State of New York for Mr. Bryan, on condition that Mr. Croker was to have absolute control of Fed... eral patronage of New York and ex-Senator Edward Murphy, Jr., was to be made Secretary of the Navy in the event of the success of the Democrat... ic ticket.

It is not necessary to say that Mr. Stone and Mr. Croker made no such bargain. It is doubtful if Mr. Bryan has discussed the question of patron... age, or Cabinet positions, with any... body. Not long ago he said that if he were elected President it would be without pledges or promises of any kind other than those contained in the Democratic national platform. He is not the sort of man to make prom... ises of places and patronage to get campaign funds or votes.

TRUSTS AND THE LAW.

HANNA HAS LET THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG.

His Ridiculous Effort to Explain an Unfortunate Campaign Utterance — No Trusts "in the Meaning of the Law"—Why Griggs Cannot Find Any.

Mark Hanna has demonstrated an ability equal to that of Roosevelt in putting his foot further into a mess when attempting to explain an un... fortunate campaign utterance. When the rough-riding orator tried to ex... plain the meaning of his declaration that "all Democrats are cowards" he made a bad matter worse, and now comes Hanna with an amendment to his Chicago pronunciamento that "there are no trusts in this country," which puts his party in a hole from which it will not be likely to extract itself even by the most desperate clawing.

Hanna "explains" the naive declar... ation that what he said was not "there are no trusts," but that "there are no trusts in the meaning of the law." The difference between these two as... sertions is evidently very great to the astute mind of Mr. Hanna, but to the average citizen they mean about the same thing, except that the amended statement is much stronger and more significant than the one which it seeks to excuse. The plain English of it is that Hanna has let the cat out of the bag. True is it, indeed, that there "are no trusts in the meaning of the law"—that is of the law as defined and executed by the Republican party.

If any one disputes Hanna he can call to his support as witness Attor... ney-General Griggs. This function... ary will swear till he is blue in the face that there is no such thing as a trust under his interpretation of the law. Despite the fact that his home State of New Jersey is the wholesale incubator of trusts this man Griggs cannot see one. He knows that there is an anti-trust law on the statute books, a law which the Su... preme Court declares is fully compe... tent to provide a remedy for trust evils. Griggs knows the law, but he is trust blind. "In the meaning of the law" to him there are no trusts. And this is just where the trouble is. As long as Griggs is Attorney-General—and he or some man equally blind will be Attorney-General as long as McKinleyism is maintained at Washington—there will be no trusts "in the meaning of the law."

Hanna's tongue is befuddling his brain. He says there are no trusts, and in the next breath makes the re... markable statement that "what anti-trust laws have been enacted have been enacted by the Republicans." Why, if there are no trusts? If Han... na is not choked into silence he will be the best Bryan orator on the stump, for he is so steeped in his own conceit and so porcinely belligerent that he tells the truth without know... ing it.

The "Full-Dinner-Pail Argument."

The American workingman who be... lieves that the injunction is used to oppress labor is expected to dismiss all his fears in consideration of three meals a day. The man who regards the Constitution as a sacred instru... ment, not to be tinkered with by self... ish politicians, is urged to surrender all his convictions for the gross de... lights of a full dinner-pail. The "sen... timentalist" who dreams of equal rights, the brotherhood of man and free institutions, is to confess that he is an impostor if thereby he can be sure that his pantry will be well stocked. Heretofore orators have ap... pealed to the reason of their hear... ers, to their convictions of what was right, but Senator Hanna bases his appeal upon the lowest conceivable considerations. The American voter, from his point of view, lives only to eat, not to think.—Baltimore Sun.

One Point of Difference.

One point of difference between the letters of acceptance of President Mc... Kinley and Mr. Bryan is worthy of notice. Mr. Bryan says:

"If elected I shall appoint an At... torney-General who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws."

He is discussing the trust question. Mr. McKinley very wisely says noth... ing about his Attorney-General—the very clever gentleman who comes from the trust-breeding State of New Jersey, and who is eminent princi... pally for his friendliness toward the great corporations and trusts.

It is a point of difference which it will be worth while for the people to remember.

Bryan Counters on Hanna.

The Charleston Post (Dem.) says: "Colonel Bryan made a good point in answering Senator Hanna's diatribe against him. He declared that he would very gladly meet the Republi... can candidate for President, and if the National Committee would certify that Hanna was to be President in event of Republican success at the election, Bryan would be happy to debate with the Ohio Senator. Now it is up to McKinley to take up the cud... gels in debate or for Hanna to declare that he keeps the conscience of the administration and so is qualified to meet Bryan."

Roosevelt Should Be Muzzled.

What do our colored friends think of Governor Roosevelt's latest charge of cowardice against the colored troops that fought at San Juan Hill? Colo... nel Roosevelt will not bring many col... ored votes to the Republican ticket by such speeches as that, the more espe... cially when he has no foundation whatever for his assertion of coward... ice. Before he gets through with his campaign he will have lots of explain... ing to do. No wonder Mark Hanna wants the rough rider muzzled.

"It is, therefore, recommended that an International and Metallic Exposition, to show our raw materials and finished products, be held at the city of Birmingham during the fall of 1902, and that a committee be appointed, composed of fifteen members (of which the president of this club shall be chairman) to devise the best methods of carrying out this idea and also to consider the advisability of seeking aid for this great enterprise, in the shape of appropriations from the state and federal governments."

STRIKE NEARING AN END

President Mitchell of Mine Workers to Call a Convention.

A FAVORABLE DECISION IS PROBABLE

In Regard to the Operators' Offer of an Increase in Wages—Strikers Close Two Large Collieries at Latimer.

A Philadelphia special says: President Mitchell has at last announced his intention to call a convention to decide what move shall be taken in the 10 per cent increase in wages. He made the announcement at a miners' meeting at Shenandoah. He said he would issue a call in a few days, and the belief is general that the men will give a majority vote in favor of accepting the concession made by the operators, which include a reduction in the price of powder.

All the collieries were closed Saturday, the most important being the mines of Calvin Pardee & Co. at Latimer. Mr. Pardee announced that work would be suspended at the mines until further notice because, as he said, the authorities did not afford sufficient protection to his employes from intimidation by marching mobs of strikers, and he therefore would cease work to prevent injury to property and possible loss of life.

Many hundreds of strikers accompanied by women marched to the Latimer mines, and, though they did not attack the workmen or commit any violence, they marched back and forth on the public road near the mines in such a menacing manner that the Pardee employes feared attack should any emerge from their homes to go to work. In this way the strikers effectually prevented the starting of operations, and Mr. Pardee's decision to close the mine followed.

The Delaware & Hudson Company joined with the other operators and posted notices offering the 10 per cent increase. The Pennsylvania Coal Company is the only other large operator that has not posted the notices, but President Thorne has been quoted as saying his company will agree to whatever the others do.

Why ...k of Asiatic degradation, when ... purse-proud looters boast that the sub... mergence and pauperization of the masses for the benefit of the classes is prosperity, and when the mouthpiece and conscience of the Republican party lifts its brazen, brutal front to heaven and asks God to forbid any change?

A million of white men died to free four million of slaves. A few hundreds of plutocrats are holding to-day 4,000,000 of white men in a slavery worse than that of the negro chattel; for the latter was always sure of enough to eat, of medical attendance when sick, of clothing enough to hide his nakedness, and of fuel enough to keep him warm. The negro had no vote; the industrial slave of trusts and commercialism has, but if he exercises it honestly, the threat of starvation accompanies his ballot. The reign of terror in France was an open and noisy one; that of our plutocratic spoilers and industrial barons is a secret and silent one. The ballot box can always create a revolution in this land. Will the people use it to release from their throats the slimy tentacles of the trust devil fish?

It takes a shock of some kind to awake the average man to helpful action. Most people, in their mental laziness, are disposed to think that "whatever is, is right." The pitiful conditions of industrial slavery exposed in the mines of Pennsylvania may arouse them. "A nation cannot exist half free and half slave," said Lincoln. Nine-tenths of the American people will not always submit to be exploited by one-tenth. These barons of greed ought to realize that fact before the day of reckoning dawns. New thoughts and impulses are abroad and change will come despite of Hanna's hosannahs and prayers. There are to-day fewer white men of intelligence fawning at the feet of wealth and power than there was yesterday, and there will be still fewer to-morrow. The common people, that is, the best of American manhood, are beginning to see that the invasion of the rights of one is the invasion and ultimate destruction of the rights of all. The factory hand cringed and the drummer shouted and spouted throughout the land in 1896; they are not doing so to-day. The prosperity they were promised has come only to magnates. The money safes of the rich are fuller than ever greedy anticipation hoped, while the pocketbooks and cupboards of the masses are emptier than ever. The dinner pail is becoming rare, for the idle do not need one and the comparatively few at work have little to put in it.

As a pertinent addition to the foregoing and timely comment on the struggle now beginning in the Pennsylvania coal regions the following, from Father Ducey, the gentle and sympathetic, but morally courageous, priest, of New York, may be quoted:

"It is the greatest crime of modern society which compels children of eight years of age to work for thirty cents a day in those dark mines. All this in order that their taskmasters may live lives of luxury and refined ease.

"Any man who raises his voice against these wrongs will be proclaimed a demagogue. Jesus Christ in His day was called a demagogue and an imposter because He was the friend of sinners and consorted with the common people.

"But the anarchists are not the men who protest. The real anarchist in this case are the mine owners, who constitute the greatest danger to modern society."

Campaign Lies.

What is the purpose of the campaign lie? Is it to amuse the people? It certainly does not influence voters. As a general thing it is so easily detected that no one regards it seriously.

Doubtless campaign committees secure the services of those who have a talent for manufacturing lies respecting the opposing candidates or the opposing party, and pay them in accordance with the success with which they discharge the duties required of them. Now and then a campaign lie is set afloat that is really injurious to the opposite party, and then there is a great effort to counteract its effect. Usually, however, no attention is paid to campaign lies, and they are forgotten almost as soon as they appear in print.

One was published the other day that attracted some attention for the reason that the Republican campaign managers doubtless made a special effort to have it circulated.

The purport of it was that ex-Governor Stone, of Missouri, had made a bargain with Mr. Croker, in which the latter agreed to raise a campaign fund of $2,000,000, to be used in carrying the State of New York for Mr. Bryan, on condition that Mr. Croker was to have absolute control of Federal patronage of New York and ex-Senator Edward Murphy, Jr., was to be made Secretary of the Navy in the event of the success of the Democratic ticket.

It is not necessary to say that Mr. Stone and Mr. Croker made no such bargain. It is doubtful if Mr. Bryan has discussed the question of patronage, or Cabinet positions, with anybody. Not long ago he said that if he were elected President it would be without pledges or promises of any kind other than those contained in the Democratic national platform. He is not the sort of man to make promises of places and patronage to get campaign funds or votes.

Either They or Hanna Lied.

In his speech before the Merchants' Commercial Club, in Chicago, Mr. Hanna said there are no trusts. Now will the poor fellows do who have been accusing the Democrats of being members of trusts? Will they admit they lied or will they charge Hanna with having lied?—Dubuque Herald.

TRUSTS AND THE LAW.

HANNA HAS LET THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG.

His Ridiculous Effort to Explain an Unfortunate Campaign Utterance — No Trusts "in the Meaning of the Law"—Why Griggs Cannot Find Any.

Mark Hanna has demonstrated an ability equal to that of Roosevelt in putting his foot further into a mess when attempting to explain an unfortunate campaign utterance. When the rough-riding orator tried to explain the meaning of his declaration that "all Democrats are cowards" he made a bad matter worse, and now comes Hanna with an amendment to his Chicago pronunciamento that "there are no trusts in this country," which puts his party in a hole from which it will not be likely to extract itself even by the most desperate clawing.

Hanna "explains" the naive declaration that what he said was not "there are no trusts," but that "there are no trusts in the meaning of the law." The difference between these two assertions is evidently very great to the astute mind of Mr. Hanna, but to the average citizen they mean about the same thing, except that the amended statement is much stronger and more significant than the one which it seeks to excuse. The plain English of it is that Hanna has let the cat out of the bag. True is it, indeed, that there "are no trusts in the meaning of the law"—that is of the law as defined and executed by the Republican party.

If any one disputes Hanna he can call to his support as witness Attorney-General Griggs. This functionary will swear till he is blue in the face that there is no such thing as a trust under his interpretation of the law. Despite the fact that his home State of New Jersey is the wholesale incubator of trusts this man Griggs cannot see one. He knows that there is an anti-trust law on the statute books, a law which the Supreme Court declares is fully competent to provide a remedy for trust evils. Griggs knows the law, but he is trust blind. "In the meaning of the law" to him there are no trusts. And this is just where the trouble is. As long as Griggs is Attorney-General—and he or some man equally blind will be Attorney-General as long as McKinleyism is maintained at Washington—there will be no trusts "in the meaning of the law."

Hanna's tongue is befuddling his brain. He says there are no trusts, and in the next breath makes the remarkable statement that "what anti-trust laws have been enacted have been enacted by the Republicans." Why, if there are no trusts? If Hanna is not choked into silence he will be the best Bryan orator on the stump, for he is so steeped in his own conceit and so porcinely belligerent that he tells the truth without knowing it.

The "Full-Dinner-Pail Argument."

The American workingman who believes that the injunction is used to oppress labor is expected to dismiss all his fears in consideration of three meals a day. The man who regards the Constitution as a sacred instrument, not to be tinkered with by selfish politicians, is urged to surrender all his convictions for the gross delights of a full dinner-pail. The "sentimentalist" who dreams of equal rights, the brotherhood of man and free institutions, is to confess that he is an impostor if thereby he can be sure that his pantry will be well stocked. Heretofore orators have appealed to the reason of their hearers, to their convictions of what was right, but Senator Hanna bases his appeal upon the lowest conceivable considerations. The American voter, from his point of view, lives only to eat, not to think.—Baltimore Sun.

One Point of Difference.

One point of difference between the letters of acceptance of President McKinley and Mr. Bryan is worthy of notice. Mr. Bryan says:

"If elected I shall appoint an Attorney-General who will, without fear or favor, enforce existing laws."

He is discussing the trust question.

Mr. McKinley very wisely says nothing about his Attorney-General—the very clever gentleman who comes from the trust-breeding State of New Jersey, and who is eminent principally for his friendliness toward the great corporations and trusts.

It is a point of difference which it will be worth while for the people to remember.

Bryan Counters on Hanna.

The Charleston Post (Dem.) says: "Colonel Bryan made a good point in answering Senator Hanna's diatribe against him. He declared that he would very gladly meet the Republican candidate for President, and if the National Committee would certify that Hanna was to be President in event of Republican success at the election, Bryan would be happy to debate with the Ohio Senator. Now it is up to McKinley to take up the cudgels in debate or for Hanna to declare that he keeps the conscience of the administration and so is qualified to meet Bryan."

Roosevelt Should Be Muzzled.

What do our colored friends think of Governor Roosevelt's latest charge of cowardice against the colored troops that fought at San Juan Hill? Colonel Roosevelt will not bring many colored votes to the Republican ticket by such speeches as that, the more especially when he has no foundation whatever for his assertion of cowardice. Before he gets through with his campaign he will have lots of explaining to do. No wonder Mark Hanna wants the rough rider muzzled.

ALABAMA NEWS ITEMS.

Sunday night the engineer of a freight train on the Central of Georgia railway discovered a body on the track near the passenger depot in Opelika. It proved to be Morris Hill, a negro, who had been murdered by being shot in the back of the head. William Nelms, a negro, has been jailed, all indications pointing to him as the murderer.

Charles Barnes, a young white man of Opelika, was assaulted and knocked in the head by negroes near the fertilizer factory last night and his body placed on the track of the Western railroad. A passing train ran over him and ground one of his arms off at the shoulder. He will probably recover.

Desires List of Soldiers.

The society of the Daughters of the Confederacy at Talladega desires to obtain a list of all the soldiers enlisting in the various companies that served in the Confederate war from Talladega county. Persons having rosters or lists of any of these companies, therefore, will greatly serve the noble work by sending them to Mrs. J. H. Johnson, president of the Daughters of the Confederacy, Talladega, Ala. The rosters will be carefully used and returned to the persons sending them.

A New Town.

Altoona is the name given to W. T. Underwood's new mines in Blount county. He has a contract to furnish 50,000 tons of coal to the Louisville and Nashville railroad. Operations have not fairly begun there, yet his pay roll for last month amounted to over $2,000. The coal is of superior quality, abundant in quantity and is easily worked. The railroad extension built by the Louisville and Nashville from Oneonta to Altoona is about completed.

Body Identified.

The identity of the young man who was found in Avondale park, near Birmingham, Saturday afternoon in a dying condition from the effects of an overdose of morphine, has been established, or it is believed that it has. The body was seen by W. C. Leggett, a clerk in the Alabama Great Southern freight office, who recognized it as that of an old schoolmate of his, J. Ernest Barbour by name, of Thomasville.

H. S. Folds, a Montgomery boy, a private in the Thirty-eight infantry, died in the Philippines. Of him his captain, Claude E. INSURGENTS ARE ACTIVE Rebels Are Concentrating in the Mountains of Iolio Province.

REGIMENT SENT TO MARINDUQUE ISLAND

To Stamp Out the Insurrection There. No Further News Received From Captain Shields and Men as to Their Fate—Revenues.

A Manila dispatch says: Four troops of cavalry and two companies of infantry have recently reinforced General Young in northern Luzon, where the insurgents are concentrating in the mountains of north and south Iolio provinces, with the excommunicated priest and renegade.

General Lino and General Villanueve, who have been quiet for some time, are now showing signs of becoming active as the end of the rainy season appears.

Of late there has been considerable scouting and skirmishing in the provinces of Abra and North Illocos, without any actual results. It is obvious, however, that the maneuvers of the Filipinos are more skillful than formerly and that the field tactics of the Americans are being followed by them.

This week the commission will begin the work of revising the tariff, making use of the results of investigation of the army board in this direction. It is the intention of the commission to give the Americans a better chance than they have hitherto enjoyed.

WHOLE REGIMENT

Sent to Stamp Out Trouble on Marinduque Island.

The following cablegram has been received at the war department from General McArthur at Manila:

"Firt Infantry to Marinduque, October 6, on Sumner. General Hare to command island, with orders to push operations until insurrection is stamped out absolutely. He will have twelve full companies of infantry for the purpose. Anderson's first operations developed nothing. No report since October 2."

The above dispatch relates to reinforcements sent to the island of Marinduque, where Captain Shields and fifty-one men of the Twenty-ninth Volunteer Infantry were either killed or captured by the insurgents.

Philippine Revenues.

The revenue in the Philippines for the first seven months of 1900 were $4,782,080, an increase over the corresponding period of 1899 of $2,258,228. The custom receipts were $3,362,245, and the internal revenue receipts $336,101. The postal receipts for July were $110,845.

Unique Strike in Kentucky.

The striking miners at Baskett, near Owensboro, Ky., won their strike for recognition of their union, carrying with it a reduction of their wages. T. C. Blakler, former owner of the mines, never recognized the union, but paid wages averaging 5 cents more than the union schedule. The union has been recognized and the Pittsburg scale signed. This is probably the first strike for lower wages ever made.

Minister Takes His Own Life.

Rev. B. J. Pirtle, a Cumberland Presbyterian minister, committed suicide Saturday at Jasper, Tenn., in the Presbyterian church, by hanging himself to the bell cord. Despondency owing to lack of work is supposed to be the cause.

Conductor Fatally Shot.

New Hampshire's Population.

As officially announced by the census bureau, the population of the state of New Hampshire is 411,588. In 1890 the population was 376,530, the increase being 35,058, or 9.3 per cent.

Leaving Towns for the Cotton Fields.

The high prices being paid cotton pickers in Texas have caused an exodus of servants from the towns. Men and women have gone to the cotton fields by hundreds. The shortage of help has caused several hotels to close their doors to guests. All the hotels and boarding houses in Georgetown, Tex., have temporarily suspended business.

MARCHING CLUBS ATTACKED.

Organized Gang Charged a Political Parade in Chicago.

Bloodshed followed in the trail of Chauncey Depew and his three-mile escort of republican marching clubs in Chicago Monday night. Just as the last company in line turned the corner of Sedgwick street and Chicago avenue, it was charged by an organized gang of men, who had concealed themselves in the dark recesses of an unlighted alley.

The rioters were repulsed finally by the marchers, but not until four or five of the republican marchers had been injured, some of them quite seriously:

REPORT CONFIRMED.

All Traces of Captain Shield's Company are Lost.

A Manila dispatch says: The report of the capture of about sixty men of the Twenty-ninth Infantry on Marinduque island, is confirmed through communications from MacArthur and Kempff from Marinduque Island, but details are lacking. The Yorktown's relief column landed at Torrijos on the Marinduque coast, and marched to Santa Cruz, which was the proposed route of the captured party, without encountering the enemy or learning anything definite regarding the captives except that they had already disappeared.

Marinduque is a small island within forty miles of Luzon. It is possible that the rebels have conveyed the captives to Luzon.

CALL ISSUED.

Pennsylvania Miners Will Meet to Consider Question of Increase of Wages.

The issuing of the call Monday by President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers of America, for a joint convention of the anthracite miners, to be held at Scranton, Pa., beginning next Friday, for the purpose of deciding whether to accept or reject the 10 per cent. net increase in wages offered by the operators is a long stride in the direction of bringing the great coal miner's strike to a close. Genuine satisfaction was expressed by both miners and persons not directly connected with the coal industry that the contest was approaching an end. Business throughout the entire anthracite coal field is practically at a standstill.

Youtsey on Trial.

The Youtsey trial began in reality Monday at Georgetown, Ky., and remarkable progress was made when the examination of witnesses began. The jury will be taken to Frankfort to view the scene of the tragedy. The most important witnesses were M. R. Todd, Frank H. Johnson, J. B. Matthews, Louis Smith and Wade Watts. Their testimony was circumstantially strong against Youtsey, but his attorneys are confident of disproving any presumption of his participation in the murder of Goebel. Culton and Golden have yet to testify to Youtsey's talk about steel bullets and his receiving the keys from John Powers.

Money for the South.

The shipments of money to New Orleans and St. Louis and Chicago sub-treasurers for the movement of the cotton crop continued from the treasury at Washington. The shipments Monday were $400,000.

On Saturday last the total shipments for this season amounted to $10,440,000 against $5,425,000 for the same period last year, showing an increase to nearly twice the former amount. Of the total amount New Orleans has received $6,340,000. The treasury officials regard the turns as showing unusual prosperity in the south.

A Startling Story.

A startling story is received from Galveston of a man buried beneath the wreckage caused by the gulf storm of September 8, who when taken out was still alive and is now in the hospital. The information is given in a letter from James Broughton to M. D. McNeilly of Fort Worth.

Peace Proclamation.

A dispatch from Pretoria says: "A proclamation of peace in South Africa is expected to be issued by Field Marshal Roberts on Thursday next, that being the anniversary of the declaration of war."

To Survey Cuban Coast.

In compliance with the instructions given by Rear Admiral Bradford, Chief of the bureau of equipment, an extensive survey of the south side of the island of Cuba is to be begun the coming winter. Beginning at Cape May, the survey vessels will carefully chart the coast of the island to Cape Antonio, the extreme westerly point of the island.

FOR PRESIDENT:
WM. J. BRYAN,
of Nebraska.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT:
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
of Illinois.

FOR MEMBER OF CONGRESS FROM THE FOURTH DISTRICT:
SYDNEY J. BOWIE,
of Calhoun.

Bryan and Bowie is the rallying cry until the 6th of November.

We are requested by Judge Adams to say that he has received the warrants for Confederate pensioners, and they can be obtained by those entitled to them on application at his office.

THE Fourth Congressional District of Alabama has for several years past been notorious for its political contests. It is now famous for its unanimous and hearty support of the Democratic nominee, Sydney J. Bowie, who is the acknowledged choice of the entire district.

WE rejoice to see our Populist friend, the People's Advocate of Columbiana, join the procession and stand out heartily for Bowie's election. This makes Bowie's nomination unanimous on all sides, and emphasizes his great popularity.

The State Executive Committee, after considering the controversy between Colonel Willis Brewer and Colonel C. W. Thompson in the Fifth Congressional District throughout the entire day, adopted a resolution at 8:30 o'clock last night ordering another primary election to be held in the district on October 20. This action of the committee was had in executive session in the City Court room, and the vote was unanimous.

The resolution adopted by the committee directs that Colonel Brewer and Colonel Thompson are to be the only candidates in this primary election; they are to select managers, clerks, and returning officers for each precinct, and shall equally participate in the selection of the election machinery throughout the district. The resolution further directs that all votes challenged shall be deposited in a separate box for this purpose; that the managers shall certify the count of votes to the County Democratic Committees, who shall certify them, in turn, to the chairman of the State committee. The resolution also directs that whichever candidate is successful, the District Committee selected by his friends at Goodwater, shall stand, and that the candidate nominated in the primary election shall be considered to stand upon his certificate already filed with the Secretary of State, the other candidate withdrawing his certificate.

Bimetallists believe in the old ratio, because we believe that legislation should restore to silver the value which legislation has destroyed, and because we know that the adoption of any higher ratio would necessitate the recoinage of all existing silver coins and proportionally lessen the amount of silver to be added to the currency in the future. But if the currency demands of the United States failed to restore silver bullion to its coin value, the bimetallists in Congress would accept the ratio which the equal treatment of both metals established. Not one bimetallist in five wishes a silver currency that will not, in all ordinary transactions, be at par with gold; and it is folly to fear that bimetallist Congressman will force upon the country what their own constituents do not want.—From "Bryan's Fincial Policy: A Democratic View," by Charles B. Spahr, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for October.

The Fourth Congressional District of Alabama is now represented in Congress by W. F. Aldrich, a Republican, but after the November election Sydney J. Bowie, Democrat of Anniston, will take his place.

Mr. Bowie was born and raised in Talladega, Ala., which is in the district and is without doubt one of the most brilliant young men the south has ever produced.

Unless some unforeseen circumstance comes up he will enjoy the distinction of being elected to Congress as the choice of the Democrat, Republican and Populist parties.

In August the Democrats of the Fourth Alabama District, in convention assembled, nominated Hon. Sydney J. Bowie by acclamation. In the primaries he had carried every county in the district with one exception, and carried every precinct in the counties with the exception of three of four although two other very able men were contesting for the place.

On the 15th of Sept. the Republican convention in the Fourth Alabama District nominated Hon. W. F. Aldrich the present Congressman of the district, but believing that conditions were not so good for success as formerly, Mr. Aldrich declined the nomination. The convention thereupon appointed a committee of three to confer with a similar committee of the Populist party, with instructions to put out a candidate as the joint nominee of both parties.

This committee met on the 27th of September and though there were two or three men anxious for the nomination, a majority of the committee preferred Hon. Sydney J. Bowie to any of them, and by a vote of five to one declared it unwise and inexpedient to make a nomination.

Probably never since the day of Washington, has any one man enjoyed the distinction of being the choice of the entire population including all parties.—From the Sherman Texas Democrat.

At our mast head will be found the name of Hon. Sydney J. Bowie candidate for congress from this district. If the joint committee of Populists and Republicans, which met recently at Calera had made a nomination the Advocate would have given him its hearty support, but as no nomination was made, and a resolution adopted, that it was inexpedient to make a nomination, the Populists are without a candidate, and left free to support Mr. Bowie if they see fit. The Advocate, of course, would prefer a Populist for congress, but is willing to yield to the combined wisdom of the party as to the expediency of putting a candidate in the field.

Mr. Bowie is in thorough accord with the Populists as to the leading demands of the party. He favors the free and unlimited coinage of silver, is in favor of municipal ownership of public utilities and telegraph. He is considered one of the ablest lawyers in the State, and The Advocate is of the opinion that he would make the Fourth District a good representative. The Populist party is not narrow constructed, they are willing to get relief through any channel; they believe in the fundamental principles of self government; that parties are instituted for the purpose of having enacted into law such measures as a majority of the people desire. Believing these things The Advocate will give Mr. Bowie its hearty support, not because he is a Democrat, but because he advocates the principles that the Populists believe in.—Columbiana People's Advocate.

While the farmers are rejoicing over the prevailing good prices of cotton, the manufacturers are very unhappy. The cotton seed oil manufacturers say they will have to close down their mills if they cannot get seeds at reasonable prices. They say there is absolutely no profit in the manufacture of cotton seed oil at presens prices for seed.

The reason so many men have red noses is because they are less interested in the crop of wheat than in the crop of rye.

Banker Routs A Robber.

J. R. Garrison, Cashier of the bank of Thornville, Ohio, had been robbed of health by a serious lung trouble until he tried Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption. IN THE FAR EAST.

Constantinople, Aug 18, 1900

I am compelled to write you another letter from this point, as the quarantine against Smyrna and Beirout compells us to spend a week here, much to our regret, but I am happy to say this is our last day here. We sail for Joppa this evening in a round-about way that will keep us at sea seven days, when three days is the usual time. There were enough passengers on the steamer to make it pleasant and not crowded. I think seven languages were on board. We passed the old battle ground of Mirathon soon after leaving Piracus and then arrived at above place at 6:45 a.m. on the 13th. Captain Byeres had told us that it was not all smooth sailing in the Ottoman empire. We were soon convinced by the arrest of our genial and weighty friend Mr. Reid, of Texas, land and picture fame, as well as our minister, Mr. Ellis, of Sinarobia Miss., who were put in the house of detention in the police department as men of suspicious character, pending investigation. We suppose (do not know yet) that since the assassination of the king of Italy, all monarchical governments are more apprehensive of the Nihilists. Our conductor Captain Byeres, hurried away to our consul here and by time lunch was ready, had them out again; none the worse except the loss of friend Reid's pen knife and all of his good nature for several days.

Constantinople differs from Rome in that; the former has soldiers and dogs, and Rome has soldiers and priests. Hundreds and hundreds of them. They are intended to serve as scavingers for the city, and maybe they are but I would prefer the filth to the mangey, dirty, hungry, stenching things, and take the chance on having the streets cleaned by men, as in all civilized countries. The much spoken of and dispised ass is the main avenue by which farm products are brought into this city. Sometimes you see a large stack of hay moving along, or a couple of baskets filled with fruits, and no earthly thing moving it, by looking real close you will find a little donkey way down at the bottom of the motion. Here again you find the French tongue and French money the prevailing ones, while all hotel cutlery and things of that kind show old John Bull in the lead.

Just in front of our hotel is a garden in which a French theater is in full blast. It seems that they alternate in the use of the three tongues—French, Italian and Greek at the French theater, so as to give all a chance to enjoy an evening. We saw Mosque Sofia that Constantine the Great built for the Christian church. They make us put on slippers over our shoes before they let us enter. Mr. Reid and I quit after seeing two of the mosques.

These porters here can carry loads on their backs that would be a good load for a single horse wagons. I never saw men carry such loads.

They have a fine tower here from which the watchman can see over the city and report a fire by signals. We had a fire last night, and saw the fire company pass our hotel in full tilt. They are compelled to carry loaded on two poles and borne by four men the Sultan's ensignia. I thought it was a machine with chemically fixed water for putting out the fire until I was told better. It is only one of the many useless things done in this strange country. There is quite an influx of Germans here sinc

Nerve Food

If you have neuralgia, Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will feed the nerve that is crying for food—it is hungry—and set your whole body going again, in a way to satisfy nerve and brain from your usual food.

That is cure.

If you are nervous and irritable, you may only need more fat to cushion your nerves—you are probably thin—and Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will give you the fat, to begin with.

Cure, so far as it goes. Full cure is getting the fat, you need from usual food, and Scott's Emulsion will help you to that.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample. Its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Burwell

Health is still good.

Mr. J. C. Mims, of Prattville, was a pleasant visitor here last week.

Mr. P. H. Connell and brother and J. P. Jones of this place gathered 1,056 pounds of cotton in one day last week Who can beat that?

Some of our neighbors have gathered corn and say it turned out well.

It seems to me that if a few more would take the Banner they would get the news more regular. Try it just three months and see how you will like it. YOU KNOW.

With a co fish in his stomach and a rubber coat on his back a man can keep dry on a rainy day.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by Clanton Drug co., and D. I. Deramus, Verbena.

ACT OF A JAPANESE HERO

WONDERFUL DEED OF COURAGE AND SELF-SACRIFICE.

Gave His Life to Open a Way For the Allies Into Tien-Tsin—Awful Scenes at the Capture of the City — Terrible Effects of Lyddite.

The most realistic description of the horrors attending the battle of Tien-Tsin, and the only account so far published of the heroism of the Japanese soldier who blew up the wall of the city and blew himself up at the same time, comes in a letter from Corporal John E. White, of the Ninth United States Infantry, written from Tien-Tsin on July 20, when he was acting sergeant-major of the Third Batallion, says the Atlanta Journal.

After the awful experience of the battle in which Colonel Liscum and Captain Austin Davis were killed, this regiment moved on Pekin with General Chaffee and participated in the brilliant forced march through extreme heat and the subsequent storming of the gate and the reduction of the city.

His letter was written to his brother, Mr. Lewis White, of Atlanta, Ga. The letter follows:

"Tien-Tsin, China, July 20, 1900.

"Mr. Lewis White, Atlanta, Ga.:

"Dear Brother—I wrote you about the 18th of May from Conception, P. I. Since then a great many things have transpired that have been very interesting and exciting to me. My regiment received an order about June 20 to proceed to China. We went to Manila and from there to Nagasaki, Japan, and reached China July 10.

"Tien-Tsin is a large city, a million and a half population. It is divided into several parts, according to the creed of the inhabitants.

"The foreign population have a concession and live apart from the Chinamen. There are some magnificent buildings in this part of the city.

"The main part of Tien-Tsin has a huge wall around it, thirty feet thick and fifty feet high. This wall is built in the form of a square, and is about two miles long on each side. Quite a wall, isn't it?

"The Chinese bombarded the foreign part of the city from these walls, and most of the fine buildings are in ruins.

"The big battle occurred on the 13th, and it did look silly to run infantry up against those walls, but it was done and at a frightful cost.

"The British used their forty-five-pound Lyddite gun with terrible effect. In fact, I don't think we could have run them out of there without that gun.

"The Japs were next to us, and they fight like demodns and can outdrill any troops I ever saw. There is not two inches difference in the height of any of them. They lost heavily and stood it bravely. One of them volunteered to blow up a part of the wall with gun cotton, and blow himself up with the wall (it could not be done otherwise), and he was allowed to try it, so that the troops could get into the city. How he ever got to the wall nobody knows, but a few minutes after he left an awful explosion occurred, a big part of the wall was down, and the brave little Jap went with it. How is that for heroism?

"The Russians also lost heavily, and they are a class of men who have my deepest sympathy. Some of them could speak German, and as we had a good many Germans in our regiment, we learned a great deal about them.

"Their salary amounts to about thirty-five cents in our money per month, and it was disgusting as well as pitiful to see soldiers of a great nation like Russia walking around picking up little scraps of hardtack that we had thrown away. We fed quite a lot of them, and a more grateful set of men you never saw. I don't mean by this that they had no rations. Oh, no! But you should see their bread. It is cooked in large round loaves, looks like burnt gingerbread and cannot be broken in your hand. And just think of it—we were the first to tell them of the Spanish-American war and the Filipino insurrection, as they were just from Siberia, where no newspapers or anything to read is allowed!

"We went into the walled city on the 14th, and the sights there were sickening. Without any exaggeration, there must have been anywhere from ten to fifteen thousand dead Chinamen all over the city. Most of the place is in ruins from the bombarding and is on fire, and thousands of bodies are burned.

"The Chinamen never touched their dead and wounded, and no matter where you look it is nothing but dead bodies in all stages of decomposition, and a common occurrence to see a dog chewing on one. It was awful! Horrible! We had to stay in there two days, and I had charge of a fatigue detail who were forcing the Chinamen at the point of the bayonet to bury their dead. I had two severe vomiting spells before I go through with that job.

"I helped to pick up eleven of our own men the day before who had lain on the field all night. Our regiment got into a tight place, had to lie there all day and wait for night to escape, as the instant you raised your gun you would get the stock shot off or the gun shot out of your hands before you could raise yourself up to fire! This may sound like an 'Arabian Nights' story, but it is an honest one, and will be sworn to by most any American soldier here, and there are plenty of guns to show for it that have bullets in the stock. I was right between two men that got shot 'in the rifle,' and the splinters from one of them struck me.

"The Chinamen are certainly dead shots, and there were fully 100,000 of them making targets of us, but we were too well intrenched for them. Our loss in the regiment was ninety-eight men and eight officers, killed and wounded.

"You could tell a Lyddite victim as soon as you saw him, and there were thousands of them. They were black in the face and splotches of green were on their bodies, with long strips of skin torn off and bleeding at the mouth, nose and ears.

"The women and children did not escape. Mothers with babes in their arms and children of all ages were scattered all around. The stench from the bodies in the burning buildings was simply unendurable.

"There was a mint here, containing million of dollars' worth of silver bullion, and all troops were allowed to take all they wanted of it except the Americans. It finally caught fire and that stopped it. I stood guard there in charge of a squad one night, and it was quite a job to protect it, as there are several fortunes there yet, and the bullion is plainly visible among the bricks of the fallen walls.

"All troops except us were allowed to loot, and there was plenty of it. Magnificent furs and robes that would easily bring from $150 to $300 in the United States were plentiful.

"The grandest sight was when their magazine was exploded by one of our shells. There was a cloud of smoke fully a mile thick that was blown two miles high in about a second. The explosion was terrific. It broke all the window panes in the new city (foreign) and killed over seven hundred Chinamen. There are seven arsenals here valued at over $20,000,000, and the enemy left them behind. I haven't time to write more, as I am acting sergeant-major of the Third Batallion.

"When this reaches you write me, wherever I am, as you can find out where I am by the papers.

"JOHN E. WHITE.

"Corporal Company I, Ninth Infantry."

Quite Different.

"An increase of salary!" exclaimed the pompous manager of a small omnibus company to a clerk who had just made that request. "I am afraid, sir, that you are extravagant!" He toyed with his heavy watch chain and looked severely at the young man, who returned his stare boldly. It was the set phrase on such occasions, and the applicant had heard it all before. He meant to have that rise or—go somewhere else.

"Excuse me, sir," he replied respectfully, "I haven't any chance to be extravagant on what I earn."

"Young man," continued the pompous gentleman, "I have risen from the ranks. How? By being careful. When I was young I made money by saving bus fares."

"Ah, that was in the old days," said the young man, with a knowing wink. "But with the bell punches and the present system of inspection, you would find you couldn't save sixpence without being collared, however careful you were." The manager nearly fainted, and the young man had to seek other employment.

Golf in Mexico.

Golf has found a lodgment in Mexico City. It has been many years in finding its way from the United States to the republic in the south, as there has been a feeling that it was more of a fad than a serious and engaging occupation. Besides, it has in its practice a little more freedom than has been considered consistent with social ideas in the semi-triopical city.

Persons courageous enough to tell of the witcheries of the sport and to follow their convictions have been found, however, and after much trouble links have been laid out at San Pedro. Americans and English-men resident in the city are the principal movers in a club that has been formed, and they intend to put up a club house at San Pedro and make it rival the clubs in America.

Mexicans did not take kindly to the idea at once, but some of them have ventured to play, and the game promises to take hold among them as it has in the United States. There are now nine-hole links that are pronounced to be very sporty.

Hemp Industry of the Philippines.

The entire hemp industry of the Philippines is still worked by primitive methods and with simple contrivances. The native, though unambitious himself, is jealous of the Chinaman, and is averse to the Celestial getting control of the plantations or contracts, while scorning up-to-date methods himself. The "Cheno," however, has made inroads in this industry, as well as in others in the Philippines. Had he not, the development would not have been as rapid as it has. The native is thoroughly capable and understands the treatment of the plant and its harvesting and could he be induced to work with regularity would be as good a laborer as the Chinaman, but the Celestial usually controls the baling and local marketing of the hemp.—Edwin Wildman, in Harper's Weekly.

Harvesting by Moonlight.

The London Mark Lane Express remarks that the rather unusual sight of harvesting by moonlight has been witnessed every night during the last week in South Lincolnshire. Labor is so scarce in the district that the men cannot be spared to secure their own allotment crops, and some have consequently gathered them by the light of the moon. Many men have been seen working in the fields until nearly midnight. On some farms, too, harvesting has also been carried on at night; many of the crops are dead ripe, and there is not much liability of the wheat shaking out when gathered with a dew upon it. This scarcity of labor is mainly due to the draft of the military reserve force.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A man never learns true economy until he trains himself to change his mind before he changes a $5 bill.

The suggestion that the "shirtwaist man" will have to wear corsets finally reduces that individual to complete absurdity.

The South African war being practically over, some of the military critics could, without loss to the public, be mustered out.

Spain is managing to keep out of international discussion with all the persistent discretion of a government that has had trouble enough.

If the average man were to attempt to read everything the Government publishes in one year he would have to devote about half a century to the task, taking eight hours a day.

The new French duel code provides that in the future no duel can end without the shedding of blood, and no account of the proceeding shall be published if the insult causing the duel was not made public.

The manufacture of glass in Germany is becoming a very important industry. There are 400 factories operated, and they give employment to 35,000 workmen. The industry is one of the youngest established in the empire.

When nature exhibits the might of her destructive forces how puny the greatest efforts of human rage seem by comparison. Galveston's list of killed in a single night exceeds that of the Spanish-American and Anglo-Boer wars added together.

A London newspaper is responsible for the statement that the army of sandwich advertising men in that city numbers about seven thousand, and is recruited from all classes in society, even members of the nobility having been reduced on rare occasions to this method of making a shilling.

The soil of Peru contains a large number of mineral species. At the present time the number of mines in exploitation is 2,500, employing 70,000 workmen. The value of ore has increased by more than fifty per cent. within the las two years over that in 1898.

The cutting of the river weed known as sudd on the Upper Nile has had remarkable results. The operation has set free such an extraordinary amount of stagnant water that the river has been poisoned as far down as Assouan. Millions of fish have died from the want of free oxygen, but, strange to say, though the water is disagreeable to the smell and taste, the people who are compelled to drink it, in the absence of any other supply have experienced no ill effects.

Of all the marvellous aspects of the allied expedition to Pekin the most remarkable is that the palm of military supremacy should by common consent and without question have been awarded to Japan. Never in history has there been a transformation of a nation of forty millions of people so complete and accomplished in so short a time as the transformation of Japan, emphasized by its high military efficiency on the advance to Pekin. The capacity for cultivation which it attests is marvelous, and the Japanese are as patriotic as they are capable. Their latest achievement is enough to furnish the military powers of Europe with food for serious thought.

The opening up of a bog deposit at St. John, New Brunswick, reveals the fact that the region was swept by a forest fire about 2,000 years ago. The important question is, if there was such a fire as the remains indicate, by whom or what was it kindled. Some suggest that it was from the heat developed by a lightning stroke, but to this it is replied that growing trees which are often struck seldom take fire, and if they do the fire is usually extinguished by the rain accompanying a thunder storm. Nevertheless fires from lightning are well known. In the south of France forest fires have been known to originate from the drops of balsam which exude from pine trees, these drops forming natural lenses which concentrate the rays of the sun and lead to ignition of the wood. Deposits of charcoal are not uncommonly found below glacial clays, proving that there must have been forest fires when the world was yet young, whatever their source.

The laws of Argentine compel every business man to render statements of his accounts to proper officials, and if he is indebted more than he can pay, his business is at once supervised or investigated. If he willfully goes into debt with the view of wronging creditors he receives punishment. The business standing of every merchant can at any time be ascertained, and credit in Argentina is as safe as cash. To make it plainer, the creditor is so well protected that for a manufacturer to receive cash is really a drawback, as he loses the discount. The large German houses will always prefer the credit customer to one paying cash, as the profits are larger, and it is rare for loss of any kind to occur. Business, as a rule, is done on credit, and the dealer not only expects to receive credit but is also willing to extend it to his customers. Credit is given for from six months to a year, but at the end of the period the cash is paid, sometimes with interest added.

The report made by the committee appointed by the British Dental Association to investigate and report on the condition of the teeth of school children contains some interesting points, says the Philadelphia Medical Journal. It appears that only about ten per cent. to thirteen per cent. of school children from six to sixteen years of age have "sound dentition," that is, a condition in which no permanent tooth had been attacked by caries at any time. This appears significant, and it would lead to the conclusion that the average child knows little of the toothbrush, and that proper instruction from parents and others whose duty it is to teach along this line has been sadly neglected. For, notwithstanding the influence which heredity, the constitution of the individual, the character of the food, etc., undoubtedly have upon the teeth, surely no one will assert that all these causes combined could cause ninety per cent. of growing, and presumably fairly healthy, children to have defective teeth if proper care was observed in keeping them clean.

The notable fact in the report of the Chief Fire Warden of Minnesota is that whereas in other States having no fire-warden system vast areas were burned over and many millions of dollars in property destroyed by forest fires in 1899, in Minnesota only ten insignificant fires occurred, covering an aggregate area of only 2,325 acres and causing a property loss of only $1,541. Of those ten fires all but three were controlled by a fire warden or his helper; and that the number occurring was reduced to such insignificance as compared with former years is fairly attributable, at least in part, to the diligence with which warning notices have been posted up all over the forest sections of the State, calling attention to the liabilities incurred by those who carelessly start fires in the woods, or neglect them when started. Regarded in the light of a fire-insurance premium only, the State's expenditure for its fire-warden service is a good investment, but the prevention of fire is only a small part of the good work done by these conservators of forest growth.

A medical controversy, growing out of the willingness of certain doctors to treat the members of fraternal and benevolent societies at reduced rates, is about to be carried into the courts of Massachusetts at Springfield. The Hampden County Medical Association has expressed its disapproval of this practice, insisting that no special arrangements for charging less than the ordinary fees should be made with these organizations, but the societies seem to have found no difficulty in securing the services of other physicians who agreed to treat their members for a stipulated sum per annum. Thus far, there was no room for litigation. It appears, however, that a patient who was sent by one of these so-called contract physicians to the Mercy Hospital in Springfield was refused admission to that institution unless the doctor in attendance withdrew from the case, which he finally consented to do for the sake of the patient who required treatment which could be afforded only at a hospital. A suit will now be brought to ascertain whether the hospital staff could lawfully take this action under its charter, which provides that all patients shall be treated there who are brought to the institution by reputable physicians.

The criminal statistics of the Dominion of Canada for the year ending September 30, 1899, show that twenty-five persons were charged with murder during the period covered by the report. These cases resulted as follows: Eleven convictions, all followed by the infliction of the death penalty, nine acquittals, three prisoners detained as insane and two cases in which the prosecutions are still pending. The proportion of murder cases in the United States is so much larger as to justify the Canadian newspapers in congratulating themselves on the comparative freedom of their country from crimes of violence. The Ottawa Journal attributes the difference largely to the lax laws and the lax administration of the law in the United States. "In Canada," we are told, 'there are practically no delays. There is no appeal to a second court. No stop is possible except by the action of the Minister of Justice, which is rare and to which the majority of Canadians strenuously object under any circumstances. Of twenty-five accused murderers in Canada last year, eleven were hanged, or nearly one in two. Of the 7,840 accused murderers in the United States in partly the corresponding year, 109 were executed or one in seventy-one."

Water as a Fuel.

Next to making water run uphill, is that of the invention of a gentleman in Montreal. A. G. Ingalls, a graduate of McGill University, in that city. His invention is a process by which water may be used so as to effect an immense saving in the consumption of coal. In fact, it may be said that water practically is the fuel and coal is merely an auxiliary. The method is such that a thin spray of water is spread over a coal flame in such a way, and with such auxiliaries, that the heat of the flame is wonderfully augmented. The full details of the secret are not yet made public by the inventor. The discovery, it is alleged, can be applied to gas and other flames.—Home and Farm.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: Spread the Gospel—Efforts of the Churches Should Be Directed Toward Saving Sinners—They Should Get in Sympathy With Strangers.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage points to fields of usefulness that are not yet thoroughly cultivated, and shows the need of more activity. The text is Romans xv. 20, "Lest I should build upon another man's foundation."

In laying out the plan of his missionary tour Paul sought out towns and cities which had not yet been preached to. He goes to Corinth, a city famous for splendor and vice, and Jerusalem, where the priesthood and the sanhedrin were ready to leap with both feet upon the Christian religion. He feels he has especial work to do, and he means to do it. What was the result? The grandest life of usefulness that a man ever lived. We modern Christian workers are not apt to imitate Paul. We build on other people's foundations. If we erect a church, we prefer to have it filled with families all of whom have been pious. Do we gather a Sabbath-school class, we want good boys and girls, hair combed, faces washed, manners attractive. So a church in this day is apt to be built out of other churches. Some ministers spend all their time in fishing in other peoples' ponds, and then throw the line into that church pond and jerk out a Methodist, and throw the line into another church pond and bring out a Presbyterian, or there is a religious row in some neighboring church, and a whole school of fish swim off from that pond, and we take them all in with one sweep of the net. What is gained? Absolutely nothing for the cause of Christ. What strengthens an army is new recruits. While courteous to those coming from other flocks, we should build our churches not out of other churches, but out of the world, lest we build on another man's foundation.

The fact is this is a big world. When in our schoolboy days we learned the diameter and circumference of this planet we did not learn half. It is the latitude and longitude and diameter and circumference of want and woe and sin that no figures can calculate. This one spiritual continent of wretchedness reaches across all zones, and if I were called to give its geographical boundary I would say it was bounded on the north and south and east and west by the great heart of God's sympathy and love. Oh, it is a great world! Since 6 o'clock this morning (9,000) persons have been born, and all these multiplied populations are to be reached by the gospel. In England or in our Eastern American cities we are being much crowded, and an acre of ground is of great value, but in Western America 500 acres is a small farm, and 20,000 acres is no unusual possession. There is a vast field here and everywhere unoccupied, plenty of room more, not building on another man's foundation.

We need as churches to stop bombarding the old iron-clad sinners that have been proof against thirty years of Christian assault. Alas for that church which lacks the spirit of evangelism, spending on one chandelier enough to light 500 souls to glory, and in one carved pillar enough to have made a thousand men "pillars in the house of our God forever," and doing less good than many a log cabin meeting-house with tallow candles stuck in wooden sockets and a minister who has never seen a college and does not know the difference between Greek and Choctaw! We need as churches to get into sympathy with the great outside world, and let them know that none are so broken-hearted or hardly bestead that they will not be welcomed. "No," says some fastidious Christian; "I don't like to be crowded in church. Don't put any one in my pew."

My brother, what will you do in heaven? When a great multitude that no man can number assembles, they will put fifty in your pew. What are the select few to-day assembled in the Christian churches compared with the mightier millions outside of them? Many of the churches are, like a hospital that should advertise that its patients must have nothing more than toothache or "run rounds," but no broken heads, no crushed ankles, no fractured thighs. Give us for treatment moderate sinners, velvet-coated sinners and sinners with a gloss on. It is as though a man had a farm of 3000 acres and put all his work on one acre. He may raise ever so large ears of corn, ever so big heads of wheat—he would remain poor. The church of God has bestowed its chief care on one acre, and has raised splendid men women in that small inclosure, but the field is the world. That means North and South America, Europe, Asia and Africa and all the islands of the sea. It is as though, after a great battle, there were left 50,000 wounded and dying on the field and three surgeons gave all their time to three patients under their charge. The major general comes in and says to the doctors, "Come out here and look at the nearly 50,000 dying for lack of surgical attendance." "No," say the three doctors, standing there fanning their patients, "we have three important cases here, and we are attending to them, and when we are not positively busy with their wounds it takes all our time to keep the flies off." In this awful battle of sin and sorrow, where millions have fallen on millions, do not let us spend all our time in taking care of a few people, and when the command comes, "Go into the world," say practically: "No, I cannot. I have here a few choice cases, and I am busy keeping off the flies." There are multitudes to-day who have never had any Christian worker look them in the eye and with earnestness in the accentuation say, "Come!" or they would long ago have been in the kingdom. My friends, religion is either a sham or a great reality. If it be a sham, let us disband our churches and Christian associations. If it be a reality, then great populations are on the way to the bar of God unfitted for the ordeal. And what are we doing?

In order to reach the multitude of outsiders we must drop all technicalities out of our religion. When we talk to people about the hypostatic union and French encyclopedianism and Erastinianism and Complutensianism, we are impolite and as little understood as if a physician should talk to an ordinary patient about the pericardium and intercostal muscle and scorbutic symptoms. Many of us come out of the theological seminaries so loaded up that we take the first ten years to show our people how much we know and the next ten years to get our people to know as much as we know, and at the end we find that neither of us knows anything as we ought to know. Here are hundreds of thousands of sinning, struggling and dying people who need to realize just one thing—that Jesus Christ came to save them and will save them now. But we got into a profound and elaborate definition of what justification is, and after all the work there are not, outside of the learned professions, 10,000 people who can tell what justification is. I will read you the definitions: "Justification is purely a forensic act, the act of a judge sitting in the forum, in which the Supreme Ruler and Judge, who is accountable to none, and who alone knows the manner in which the ends of His universal government can best be obtained, reckons that which was done by the substitute in the same manner as if it had been done by those who believe in the substitute, and purely on account of this gracious method of reckoning grants them the full remission of their sins."

Now, what is justification? I will tell you what justification is—when a man believes, God lets him off. [illegible] in Connecticut I went to a [illegible] and I saw over the door [illegible] words, "No Admittance." I saw over the next door "No Admittance." Of course I entered. I got [illegible] found it a pin factory, and [illegible] making pins, very serviceable [illegible] useful pins. So the spirit of [illegible] has practically written over the door of many a church, "No Admittance," while the message in the pulpit hammering out [illegible] niceties of belief pounding [illegible] cavities of religion making [illegible]

[illegible] sentiment [illegible] set the soul to [illegible] based the [illegible] and to love [illegible] all the understanding [illegible] and all the strength [illegible] burnt offerings and [illegible] Jesus saw that [illegible] said unto Him [illegible] the kingdom of [illegible] saved in one [illegible] man people treat the [illegible] Instead of taking [illegible] gentle hand of [illegible] him with the [illegible]

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 14.

Subject: Parable of the Great Supper, Luke xiv., 15-24—Golden Text: Luke xiv., 17 — Memory Verses, 21-24 — Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

This parable was spoken while they were still reclining at the table. See last lesson.

15. "One of them." One of the rich friends of the Pharisaic host, whose remark gave the Saviour occasion for delivering the parable of the great supper. "Heard these things." The recompense at the resurrection of the just (v. 14) suggested to this guest a great banquet in the kingdom of the Messiah. "Blessed is he." He extols the greatness of the privilege. In the parable that follows Christ warns him and the others that the privilege will by no means be so generally recognized or embraced by the Jewish people as was commonly thought. "In the kingdom of God." The kingdom of God, here, does not signify the kingdom of heaven in the highest sense, but only the kingdom of the Messiah, of which the carnal Jew here speaks, according to the received sense of his nation, as of a glorious temporal kingdom, in which the Jews should lord it over the Gentile world, enjoy their wealth, and be provided with all temporal blessings and delights, in which they place their happiness.

16. "Then said He." He delivered the following parable to show that the Messiah's kingdom would be offered to them under the most favorable circumstances, yet they would reject it, preferring carnal to spiritual blessings, while, in the meantime, the Gentiles would embrace the gospel with cheerfulness and thereby be prepared to sit down in the abodes of the blessed. "A great supper." Representing the rich and abundant provisions of the gospel. The use of this emblem to denote spiritual blessings is rooted in Old Testament prophecy. The blessings of salvation are compared to a feast. 1. Because of their rich variety and abundance. 2. Their suitableness to our spiritual wants. 3. The high satisfaction and enjoyment which they yield. "Bade many." The Jewish nation. This general announcement was made in the Old Testament institutions and prophecies.

17. "And sent his servant." The commission to all who hold office of summoning the world to enter the kingdom of God is the same, hence but one servant is referred to. John the Baptist, Christ, the apostles and disciples all delivered the gospel message and issued a call to the Jewish people. The same call was afterward given to the Gentiles, and such is the invitation now extended to us. "That were bidden." The Jews to whom the gospel was first offered, especially the scribes and Pharisees. "Come." The invitations of the gospel are full and complete. Matt. 11:28; Rev. 22:17. "All things are now ready." Now is the accepted time. Every provision is made for the redemption of a lost world; not one thing is lacking. The plan of salvation is perfect. Come, now, and be saved.

18. "They all." But few of the scribes and Pharisees responded to Christ's invitation. "Began to make excuse." In worldly affairs people would be anxious to accept an invitation to such a "supper," but in religious matters it is very different. Men are unwilling to accept the offers of salvation. "The first said." When the time came they all refused to enter in, each having some excuse. The ultimate ground of their refusal was that they felt no real desire, and saw nothing attractive in such a feast, and had no reverence for the host. "Have bought." The purchase may not have been unconditionally made (Lange), but probably it that very moment it depended upon the viewing of the land whether it should be made definite. "Must needs." These excuses were all trivial, and yet they appeared to those making them to be real reasons why they could not possibly attend the feast.

19. "I go to prove them." Mark the increasing rudeness of the speakers. The first pleads a "must needs;" the second merely states his intention—"I go;" the third says bluntly, "I cannot," and omits the courtesy of asking to be excused. The true lesson from all three is that innocent and right things keep men away from the gospel feast.

20. "Married a wife." He should have said to his wife, "Come, let us both accept the invitation to this gospel feast, at once." "Therefore I cannot come." This was just the reason why he should have gone. We should invite the Saviour to enter our homes and dwell with us there. 1. When young people ehter upon the active duties of life they need the help and guidance of the Holy Spirit. If they lean to their own understanding and trust to their own efforts for success they will ultimately fail. 2. No home is a truly happy home without Christ. It is only when His love fills the soul and when He controls our affairs that real joy and peace exist. 3. We need Christ to bear our burdens with us and help us through the hard places. He will be a shelter in the time of storm, and a solid rock in the hour of affliction. 4. A Christian home is a power for good in the community, while a Christless home is as great a power for evil. 5. The influences of the home mold, to a great extent, the characters and lives of the entire family.

21. "Go out quickly." There is no time to be lost. The feast is ready. "The streets and lanes." Extend the invitation to the publicans and sinners—the outcasts, who were despised by those to whom Jesus was speaking.

22. "It is done." God's true ministers carry the gospel to the worst classes. They frequently enter the slums in order to point those who are deep down in sin to the Christ who is able to save them. "Yet there is room." The lord of the house has prepared a very great feast for very many. Provisions are made for all. "Whosoever will let him come."

23. "The highways and hedges." Outside of the city. By this is meant that the gospel would be preached to the Gentiles. When rejected by the Jews Paul turned to the Gentiles. "Compel them to come in." Not by force, but by an earnest entreaty. "That My house may be filled." How anxious the Lord is to save every person. No one needs to be lost.

24. "I say unto you." Christ is here half continuing the parable and half expounding it. "None of those men." A solemn announcement of the coming rejection of the Jews as a nation for their unbelief. But the words apply in all their force to the multitudes now in Christian lands who despise and neglect the gospel, while converts among the heathen nation are multiplied. "Shall taste of My supper." Shall enjoy the blessings of the gospel. They were rejected because they had rejected the supper. When we reject Christ we are really closing the door against ourselves.

Hill Will Campaign in the West.

Former Senator David B. Hill of New York, it is unofficially announced, at a democratic national headquarters in Chicago, will take an active part in the presidential campaign in the west.

A white barber at Fort McPherson, known as "Sergeant" J. R. Schooley, was found lying dead on a bench in a shop early Friday morning.

GREENLAND'S EAST COAST.

Lieut. Andrup Will Try to Outline the Unknown Part of It.

There is a part of the east coast of southern Greenland that has not yet ben visited by any explorer. Quite a number of Arctic investigators have been north and others south of it, but the region between 69 degrees and 67 degrees 22 minutes north latitude, a distance of about 100 miles, is as yet entirely unknown. A year ago this unrevealed part of the coast was a good deal longer than it now is, but Lieut. Andrup explored a part of it last year and now he will return to complete the work. Andrup is an officer in the Danish royal navy. The work he was detailed to do last year was very successfully carried out. He mapped the east coast from 65 degrees 45 minutes to 67 degrees 22 minutes north latitude. He will leave Copenhagen this month on the steamer Antarctic with three companions and his intention is to go ashore near the sixty-ninth parallel, and will then travel south between the island and the coast ice. His destination is Angmagsalik (65 degrees 45 minutes), the only settlement in east Greenland. During this journey he will pass all along the unexplored coast. While he is on this mission a party of five naturalists on the Antarctic will travel north to the entrance to Scoresby sound for the purpose of studying natural history and exploring the northern fiords if the condition of the ice permits. At the end of August the Antarctic will go to Iceland to take on a supply of coal, and then will proceed to Angmagsalik to meet Lieut. Andrup. It may be that the ice will prevent Andrup from reaching that station this fall. In this case he will have to camp where winter overtakes him and will resume his route toward the south next year. Arctic ice experts are very much afraid that the ice conditions will not be favorable this season, and some of them predict that Andrup will not be able to go as far south as Angmagsalik, but that he will be compelled, like Lieut. Ryder in 1891, to winter on the bleak coast.—New York Sun.

Notes From the Paris Exposition.

"The Singer Manufacturing Company, of 149 Broadway, New York, show their usual American enterprise by having a very creditable exhibit located in Group XIII., Class 79, at the Paris International Exposition, where they show to great advantage the celebrated Singer Sewing-Machine which is used in every country on the globe, both for family use and for manufacturing purposes. The writer was highly pleased with this display and observed with much satisfaction that it was favorably commented upon by visitors generally.

The Grand Prize was awarded by the International Jury to Singer Sewing-Machines for superior excellence in design, construction, efficiency and for remarkable development and adaptation to every stitching process used in either the family or the factory.

Only One Grand Prize for sewing machines was awarded at Paris, and this distinction of absolutely superior merit confirms the previous action of the International Jury at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, where Singer Machines received fifty-four distinct awards, being more than were received by all other kinds of sewing machines combined.

Should it be possible that any of our readers are unfamiliar with the celebrated Singer Machine, we would respectfully advise that they call at any of the Singer salesrooms, which can be found in all cities and most towns in the United States."

Peculiar Concerts.

In the depths of an Arctic winter the Eskimo keep up their spirits by holding a concert every night. Their program is not very varied, although both vocal and instrumental music are indulged in. The single instrument used is a kind of tambourine, made of a wooden hoop, some 30 inches in diameter, across which wet deerskin is stretched. But instead of thumping the skin it is the hoop that is beaten. Standing in the middle of the tent, the performer strikes the tambourine, turning slowly round all the time, whilst four or five women raise their voices in what they believe to be song. The whole performance is the most atrocious discord, but pleases where ignorance is bliss. Each man in the company is expected to take his turn with the drum, which he whacks till he is tired.

Engineering Problem.

An interesting engineering problem is being discussed in Pittsburg, where it is proposed to move the Carnegie library, a structure weighing about 58,000 tons, a distance of 1,000 feet. The library is a steel and stone building, 392 feet in length by 148 feet in width and three stories in height. The director of public works of the city

AFRICAN DIAMONDS.

First Discovered by an Irishman, John O'Reilly.

Mr. John O'Reilly, who had occasion in the winter of 1867 to do business in the Hopetown District of Griqualand West, on the other side of the Vaal river, first discovered diamonds in South Africa. He passed a night at the house of Schalk van Niekerk, a Dutch farmer. While bartering with the Boer and his wife O'Reilly's attention was attracted by a game the children were playing, being particularly struck with the peculiar transparency of one of the pebbles used in the game. Though O'Reilly had never seen a diamond in the rough he expressed an opinion that the pebble played with by the children was really the precious gem. The farmer ridiculed the idea, saying O'Reilly might have it if he cared for the rubbish, adding that there were plenty more of them in the river clay. O'Reilly accepted it on the understanding that if it turned out to be a diamond the farmer should receive half the sum. At Colesburg it was submitted to experts, most of whom denied it being of much value, but Dr. Atherstone, of Grahamstown, pronounced it to be a veritable diamond weighing 23½ karats and worth £500. The then governor of the Cape, Sir Philip Wodehouse, bought it for that sum. Diamonds afterwards were found in the mud walls of native huts, and this led to the opening of the dry diggings where now stand Du Toits Pan, De Beers, Kimberley, Bultfontein and the Premier mine.

Muddlesome Legal Phraseology.

"If I were going to give you an orange," said Judge Foote of Topeka to D. O. McCray, "I would simply say, 'I give you the orange'; but should the transaction be intrusted to a lawyer, to put in writing, he would adopt this form: "I hereby give, grant and convey to you all my interest, right, title and advantage of and in said orange, with its rind, skin, juice, pulp and pits, and all right and advantage therein, with full power to bite, suck, or otherwise eat the same, or give away, with or without the rind, skin, juice, pulp or pits, anything herein-before, or in any other deed or deeds, instruments of any nature or kind whatsoever to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.'" by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

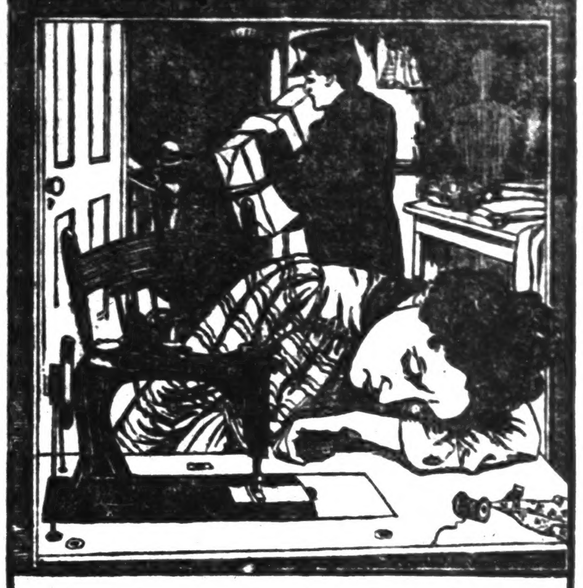
Made a Bet of a Hat.

A hotel man in Portland, Me., made a bet of a hat with a friend and lost. The loser telephoned to the winner: "Get just as good a hat as you want; in fact, buy any kind of a hat that suits you and have them send the bill to me." In a day or two abill of $33 from a well-known Congress street milliner for a woman's hat was received by the loser. The winner calmly informed him that he was pretty well fixed for hats himself and so he thought he'd turn the thing over to his wife. It was a hat and the hotel man paid.

"I could'nt Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."



A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhœa. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

THE ELECTRICITY BUILDING AT THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

Copyright, 1900, by the Pan-American Exposition Co.

Elaborate designs have recently been completed for the Electricity building for the Pan-American Exposition, to be held in Buffalo May 1 to Nov. 1, 1901. Displays of all kinds in the practical and artistic uses of electricity, together with complete exhibits of electrical machinery and appliances, are to be conspicuous features of the great Exposition. The designs contemplate a very handsome and commodious building. The structure is to be 300 feet from east to west and 150 feet wide, giving an exhibition space of 75,000 square feet. The South Facade fronts the Mall, and the north fronts the Midway. The east end is toward the massive Electric Tower, while the west faces the Grand Canal. The general ornamentation of the structure is to be frescoes in a mixture of reds, greens and yellows.

REMARKS ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Last Friday, on the corner we were glad to greet Congressman Sydney J. Bowie. He is a [illegible]-souled, genial man [illegible] ably well posted and [illegible] least backward in expressing opinions. A pleasant spoken man, just the sort of man to suit Chilton county people, and I wish we could all have met him. He spent the day with us and [illegible] cents all the time. He talked politics and told many a good story. His visit was highly appreciated, and we shall all be glad to see him again.

A couple of weeks ago I was telling you how Bros. Conway and Powell had put their cotton in jail and if it could fetch the right price and if only stayed there a day or two when Mr. Sampey redeemed it for ten cents a pound. So that is alright. Now Bro. Conway has gone ahead and put some more cotton in jail and I am afraid that they may have to remain there some time before it will be redeemed for ten cents a pound. The cotton market has fallen badly, and while I am one of those who believe that cotton will again bring ten cents per pound, I am much afraid it will not be for some time yet, perhaps not before January or even later.

I should think that now cotton is tumbling it will have the effect of waking up our people to the benefits to be derived from the organization of the Cotton Growers' Protective Association. What any one wants to hesitate about joining in that concern is a mystery to me. The risks is twenty-five cents, he pledges himself to nothing, but he may get advice through the Association which he cannot get in any other way. He can act upon that advice if he likes it, or he can go to the library to it if he sees fit. The association can only cost him twenty-five cents and it may bring him hundreds of dollars.

Some of the finest cotton ever seen in these parts was brought to the Banner office a few days ago by Benjamin Franklin who lives out by Heycutt's mill. 50 bolls will weigh a pound, and 1400 pounds will make a 500 pound bale. Everybody admires it. He hasn't got a name for it, so you can call it what you please. Step into the other office and have a look at it.

There is a regular building boom in Clanton. Wilson's two-story store is progressing nicely; Jones is building a house opposite the Thornton house. Two-story house opposite the cemetery. Some Evans' addition to his and others.

MARRIED

Maplesville.

Our community was saddened on the night of the 11th by the death of little Robbins Crumpton. The joy of the father's return from his long travels was indeed crushed. Everything known to science was done by specialists, but God saw fit to call him hence. Our sympathy is extended to this bereaved family.

Mrs. T. W. DuBose has suddenly been called to Orrville by the death of her mother, Mrs. Martha Berry, who died of apoplexy.

Dr. A. J. DuBose and wife are here again.

Mr. Oscar Calloway has lately been to Coosa county on business.

Mrs. Adair has lately visited friends in Autaugaville.

Mrs. Kirsh, of Coosa, has been visiting Mrs. Calloway.

Mr. Blackman has had his sister, Mrs. Green, on a visit.

Mrs. Holley and her two little sons are on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Bazemore, as is also her son, Mr. Marion Bazemore, of Selma.

Our late rain was a pro and con affair; the cotton pickers were against it, while the late crops were in favor of it.

Rev. W. B. Dennis kept his appointment here the second Sunday and has protracted his services.

Rev. Mr. Moore, of Randolph, was a pleasant visitor here.

The home of P. M. Jones was made sad last Sunday by the death of Mr. James Driver. It was quite a shock to the family as it was so sudden. Mr. Driver was in his eighty-second year. While his death was sudden and unexpected yet he had been a sufferer for a long time. He was a man whom everybody thought well of, and numbered his friends by the score. To the bereaved family we extend our sympathy. He was buried in the cemetery at Corinth Monday.

I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by Clanton drug co., and D. I. Deramus, Verbena.

Cruel Words Kill a Bird.

A bird which receives a scolding is made as miserable and unhappy thereby as a child would be. To illustrate this Our Dumb Animals tells the following story:

A Massachusetts woman had a few years ago a beautiful canary bird which she dearly loved and to which she had never spoken an unkind word in her life.

One day the church organist was away, and she stopped after church to play the organ for the Sunday school. In consequence of this the dinner had to be put off an hour, and when she got home her good husband was very angry, and he spoke to her unkindly.

The things were put on, and they sat down in silence at the table, and presently the bird began to chirp at her as it always had to attract her attention. To shame her husband for having spoken so she turned to the bird and for the first time in her life spoke to it in a most violent and angry tone. In less than five minutes there was a fluttering in the cage. She sprang to the cage. The bird was dead.

Mrs. Hendricks, the wife of the late vice president of the United States, said that she once killed a mocking bird in the same way. It annoyed her by loud singing. To stop it she spoke in a violent tone and pretended to throw something at it, and within five minutes it was dead.

Unnatural History.

The Bottle of Hair Tonic was in a self congratulatory mood. "Well," it boasted, "I think I can tell 'hair raising' ghost stories if any one can."

The coy Peach was very angry as well as "stirred up" when the housekeeper ladled her into the preserve jar. "Now, wouldn't that jar you!" she exclaimed, rather stingy.

The False Tooth spoke with icy hauteur: "I belong to the 'upper set.'" "Possibly," retorted the bobtailed Kite incisively, "but let it be distinctly understood that I myself move in the highest circles."

The cracked piece of pourdo antique China spoke frankly: "Of course I'm not what I'm 'cracked up' to be"—Then her femininity asserted itself, and she finished coyly, "But I'm not nearly as old as I look."

The angry Stick of Giant Powder stormed at the proud patrician Tack. "You have a 'big head' because you have laid a few carpets low." The Tack was silent. "I'm supreme," hooted the Powder, waxing bold. "No one can 'hold a candle' to me, and every one is afraid to 'blow me up.'" "Well," retorted the Tack pointedly, at the same time striking a match, "nobody can walk over a member of the Tack family with impunity."—Philadelphia

STATE FAIR NOTES.

All the Buildings are Completed and Ready for the Big Show.

All of the new buildings for the state fair at Birmingham have been completed and turned over to the association. The new buildings erected at the fair grounds cost something over $8,000, but when the Alabama Fair association takes charge of them they will have been paid for.

When the gates of the fair open on November 1 there will be no debt hanging over the fair association and it will have money enough in the bank to pay all premiums.

The railroads have all made a rate of one fare for the round trip, plus 50 cents, the price of one admission to the fair grounds. They have also agreed to haul all exhibits intended for the fair to Birmingham and return at one-half rate.

The employes at the headquarters of the fair association in First avenue were busy Saturday sending out programmes for the annual meeting of the Alabama Poultry and Pet Stock association, which will be held in connection with the state fair.

Secretary John W. O'Neill says that the demand for space is much greater than expected and that every available foot of floor and ground space suitable for the purpose will be taken.

The laboring people will make Labor Day, Saturday, November 3, one of the biggest events of the fair.

Military Day, November 7, will also be a big day, and thousands of people from all sections of the state will be here to witness the competitive drill.

The outlook for a successful fair grows brighter every day.

Pierced With Red Hot Iron.

A serious accident happened at the Bessemer rolling mills Saturday morning which may cost E. F. McCambridge, a roller, his life. McCambridge was working at the strand rolls when a rod of red hot iron went through, striking him in the fleshy part of the thigh, tearing and lacerating the flesh in a terrible manner. The injured man was removed to his home where he was attended by two physicians. His condition is still critical, and it is feared that he will not recover.

TROUBLE IN SOUTH CHINA

Rebel Movement is Becoming Widespread.

THE OVERTHROW OF MANCHU RULE

Is the Object and Forces are Being Amalgamated—A Column Sent Out—Tuan Holds Imperial Seal—Chinese Affairs.

A column of troops was dispatched from Hong Kong Monday morning to the Kowloon frontier with the object of barring armed refugees, either rebels or imperial troops, from entering British territory when defeated.

The rebels are reported to be 3,000 strong thirty miles north of the British frontier. A thousand of Admiral Ho's troops are in pursuit of them, while 2,000 Chinese troops left Canton overland to intercept the rebels.

Admiral Ho has informed the government that the rebellion was carefully planned. The rebels are anxious to conciliate the villagers and gain the respect of the foreigners, hence the absence of outrage and pillage.

All indications point to the rising being widespread. Outbreaks occurred simultaneously in several centers of Kwang Tung and Kwang Si. Apparently Kang Yu, Wie Sun, Yat Sen and the Triads have amalgamated their forces in the common cause—the overthrow of Manchu rule in South China.

Some positive indications of the attitude of the foreign powers is anxiously awaited.

A French launch was captured by pirates October 18 near Mong Chow. The pirates secured $32,000 in specie.

Prince Tuan Holds Imperial Seal.

"Since the Chinese court arrived at the new capital, Sian Fu," says a special dispatch from Shanghai, "reactionary edicts removing the moderates from high offices have been issued, showing that Prince Tuan holds the imperial seal."

The Daily Chronicle has the following from Vienna: "None of the powers except France and the United States approve the Russian proposal to carry the claims for indemnity against China to the arbitration tribunal at the Hague."

CAPTAIN SHIELDS RESCUED.

He and His Men Turned Over to American Forces.

The following account of the rescue of Captain Shields and his command from the Filipinos has been received at the war department:

"Manila.—Information from Marindique just received states that Captain Shields and forty-eight men of Company F, Twenty-ninth regiment, United States Infantry; two corporals, Company A, Twenty-ninth regiment, one civilian, American negro, prisoners in hands of insurgents, have been turned over to General Luther R. Hare. More particulars soon. Give names killed and wounded. MACARTHUR."

SITUATION IS ALARMING.

Northern Texas Flooded With Negroes from Hurricane District.

Much alarm is felt at Dallas, Tex., over the situation of negroes in the northern part of the state, who hurried to this section from southern Texas when the September hurricane occurred. Most of them have been picking cotton, but fully ten thousand have nothing to live on or work to do during the winter. Navarro county reports 4,000, Ellis county nearly as many and fully a dozen counties have large numbers. Public appeals will be made in their behalf.

Fifth Week of Strike Opens Quietly.

The fifth week of the coal miners' strike opened quietly, says a Hazleton, Pa., dispatch. The few collieries that have continued in operation since the strike was inaugurated are working as usual with the same number of men they had in the mines last week. Not one of the collieries, however, is working full-handed. The Cranberry mines have more men at work than any of the few other mines still in operation.

IN THE POLITICAL FIELD

Secretary of the People's Party Says Bryan Will Be Elected.

EDGERTON GIVES INTERESTING FIGURES

Claims That He Has Lost None of the Support That He Had in 1896, Except a Few Silver Republicans. A Republican Forecast.

The following statement over the signature of J. A. Edgerton, the secretary, was given out by the people's party national committee:

"Bryan will be elected; he has lost none of the support he had in 1896, except a few silver republicans in the mountain states. Of these there will not be enough to effect a single electoral vote. He will hold his own west of the Mississippi, and will carry every state in that region that he carried in 1896, with the possible exception of Wyoming. He will gain heavily in the central west and east; he will not only have all the democrats and populists who supported him in 1896, but, added to these, he will receive the votes of a large number of gold democrats who have left their party on the issues of imperialism and trusts.

"The following states may be classed as certain to cast their electoral vote for Bryan;

"Alabama, 11; Arkansas, 8; Colorado, 4; Florida, 4; Georgia, 13; Idaho, 3; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 17; Montana, 3; Nebraska, 8; Nevada, 3; North Carolina, 11; South Carolina 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 15; Utah, 3; Virginia, 12. Total, 153.

"Add to these the following states that will probably cast their vote for Bryan:

"Illinois, 24; Indiana, 15; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 13; Maryland, 8; South Dakota, 4; Washington, 4; West Virginia, 6. Total, 84.

"These, added to 153 certain, give 237, or 18 more than a majority in the electoral college. Outside of these certain and probable states are the following doubtful:

"California, 9; Connecticut, 6; Delaware, 3; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 9; New Jersey, 10; New York, 36; Ohio, 23; Wisconsin, 12; Wyoming, 3. Total, 128.

Payne's Forecast of Election.

Henry C. Payne, vice chairman of the republican national executive committee, Sunday gave out his first forecast of the election. Mr. Payne made an estimate of the votes and in doing so divided the states in four classes, 24 states having 270 electoral votes certain for McKinley; 12 states having 115 electoral votes certain for Bryan; six states having 38 electoral votes, in which the chances of republican or democratic success are even, and three states having 24 votes in which the chances are 60 to 40 in favor of the democrats.

RESULT OF CONFERENCE.

Miners Will Accept the Increase of Wages Conditionally.

The anthracite coal miners on a strike, after two days' convention, at Scranton, Pa., Saturday, decided to accept the 10 per cent. increase in wages offered by the mine owners, providing they will continue the payment of the advance until next April and will abolish the sliding scale. If the operators consider the proposition unacceptable, the miners are willing to arbitrate the question at issue. They also decided to continue the strike until the operators agree to the convention's proposition.

A Big Cargo.

The largest cargo that ever went out of Galveston, Tex., and believed to be larger than any previous cargo from the gulf is that of the British steamer Isada, which cleared Saturday. She has on board the round and square bales of cotton the equivalent of 24,000 square bales. She also carries 24,000 bushels of wheat and 2,000 barrels of flour. The cargo is valued at $1,881,812.

BRYAN IN OHIO.

A Memorable Day of the Campaign of the Nebraskan.

A memorable day in the Bryan campaign in Ohio closed at Akron Saturday night with a monster meeting, but large as it was it did not surpass several others of the day and it fell considerably behind the meeting at Mansfield, which was the last important stop before reaching this place. There were a dozen or more speeches during the day, the most noteworthy of which were made at Circleville, Lancaster, Zanesville, Coshocton and Mansfield. The crowds appeared to increase gradually in size throughout the day from the initial meeting at Chillicothe, a little after sunrise, until the last day meeting at Mansfield just before sunset. Mansfield was said to have had twice as many people as had ever before gathered there to hear a political speech.

Roosevelt in Kentucky.

Louisville Saturday night gave Gov. Roosevelt an enthusiastic reception, the programme concluding with a crowded meeting at the Auditorium. This was in a marked contradistinction to the greeting offered at Elizabethtown, the last stop before the special reached Louisville. At that place the governor suffered the first indignity thrust upon him in the state, though in several places the audiences were apathetic. Bowling Green had cheered the governor till his ears rang with the plaudits, and Munfordville gathered at the train where the speaker's stand was erected, receiving him with expressions of good will.

HAS NOT CHANGED.

Ex-President Cleveland Stands by His Former Financial Views.

A special to the Chicago Tribune from Louisville, Ky., says:

"Ex-President Grover Cleveland has replied to a letter written by Mr. John S. Green, of this city, inquiring if the former president had changed his views on the financial question as expressed in his letter to Chicago business men on April 13, 1895.

Mr. Cleveland replied as follows:

"'I have received your letter inclosing a copy of my letter written more than five years ago to the business men of Chicago. I had not seen it in a long time, but it seems to me I could not state the case better at this time if I should try. I have not changed my opinion as then expressed in the least.'"

TO METHODISTS.

Bishop Galloway Will Issue a Call for Watch Meeting.

Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, of Jackson, Miss., president of the general board of education, of the Episcopal church, south, will issue a call this week to the one and one-half million Methodists in the south to assemble in their places of worship on the night of the last day of the year to hold an old-fashioned watch meeting, as a fitting climax to the twentieth century fund movement. The fund now amounts to $1,100,000.

Judge Gray Takes Cleveland's Place.

It is understood that the president has selected Judge George Gray, of Delaware, to represent the United States, with ex-President Benjamin Harrison on the Hague permanent arbitration tribunal. Judge Gray is a former senator from Delaware and a democrat. He was a member of the Paris peace commission, and is now a United States judge for the third judicial circuit. His selection will not involve the surrender of that position.

Hague Tribunal May be Called In.

The Russian suggestion that the international court of arbitration of The Hague be given jurisdiction over divergencies of views arising on the question of Chinese indemnities, was submitted to Secretary Hay by M. DeWollant, the Russian charge d'affaires in Washington, in a note of recent date. It has received the adherence of the Americans, the French and the Russian governments, thus giving the suggestion the approval of three foremost powers and strong assurance of its general adoption.

Li Hung Chang at American Legation.

A special dispatch from Pekin says: "At the American legation, Li Hung Chang expressed regret for the recent occurrences and thanked the Americans for their good treatment of the Chinese. He promised to request that negotiations be begun at the Tsung Li Yamen two days hence and to exclude Yung Lu from them."

Skull Crushed With Billiard Cue.

As the result of a blow on the head inflicted by a billiard cue, R. Perdee, of Halifax, N. C., a commercial traveler, is dying at the Huntsville hotel. Perdee and Berry Wade, a young farmer of Meridianville, were playing pool when some difficulty arose over the game. Sharp words were passed and the drummer, it is said, advanced upon Wade in a threatening manner. Wade seized a billiard cue by the small end and struck Perdee a crushing blow in the head with the big end.

Primary Ordered in Fifth District.

The state democratic executive committe decided the contest over the democratic congressional nomination in the fifth district by ordering a new general primary to be held October 20 and adopting special rules to govern said primary. In other words, the committee decided that neither Thompson nor Brewer was the nominee and referred the matter back to the people. It is understood that there were eleven Thompson partisans, nine for Brewer and six for another primary.

Sudden Death of J. W. Asseltine.

J. W. Asseltine, of Fruithurst, died at a south side boarding house in Birmingham Sunday afternoon, after an illness of less than twenty-four hours. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause of his death, although since 8 o'clock Saturday night he had been suffering with gall stones.

Opelika's Autumn Carnival.

The autumn carnival to be held at Opelika the week beginning October 28 will be the grandest entertainment ever planned in eastern Alabama or western Georgia. The governor and staff and thirty other prominent men, including General Joe Wheeler, Senator John T. Morgan and Lieutenant Hobson, will be present. Over a thousand dollars have been spent for music and fireworks.

Coal Company Assigns.

The Helena Coal company, of Helena, has filed papers of assignment in Columbiana. S. P. King, of Birmingham, has been appointed assignee and will take charge and wind up the business for the benefit of the creditors.

Wheeler Will Attend.

General Wheeler telegraphs that he will positively be in Montgomery Friday, when he will present a handsome "lovin' cup" to Lieutenant Hobson, the gift of citizens of the state. It will be Wheeler and Hobson Day at the Street Fair.

DEPEW ON IMPERIALISM.

HOW HE ASSAILED MCKINLEY'S PRESENT POLICY IN 1898.

His Vigorous Picture of the Folly and the Crime of Keeping the Philippines and of the Awful Consequences to Us—Means Centralization.

In the Chicago Times-Herald on May 22, 1898, Senator Chauncey M. Depew had the following interview, obtained and signed by George Grantham Bain and copyrighted:

When I asked Mr. Depew what he thought should be done with the Philippine Islands he drew in his breath and said: "That's a pretty big question." Then he pushed back his chair from his desk and swung around until he half faced me.

"If we should keep the Philippine Islands," said Mr. Depew, "we would reverse the traditions of this Government from its foundation. We would open up a new line of policy.

"Let us see what that would mean. In the first place it would mean the establishment of a military government over possibly ten millions of people 6000 miles away from us; it would mean the increase of our navy to the proportion of the navies of Europe."

"Not to the proportion of England's navy," I suggested.

"To the navy of France and Germany," said Mr. Depew. "It would mean the increase of our army to 150,-000—more likely to 200,000 men. It would mean the increase of our annual expenditures to double what they are now. It would mean that the United States Government would be brought in closer contact with the people than ever before in the history of this country.

"We have known that there is a Federal Government only as representing our flag, our nationality and glorious traditions, but we have not felt the burden of its support or been confronted with the possibility of the payment of an enormous annual military tax, except during the Civil War. In Europe, where great armies and navies are maintained, the people are taxed directly for their maintenance. Our revenues have been obtained heretofore by indirect taxation, with the exception of a slight tax on whisky.

"But with the increase of our expenditures by 100 per cent, the taxes to support the Government would be felt in our homes and in our offices. We would feel them in both the necessaries and luxuries of life—in our houses, in our tools, in our food, in our clothing, in our carriages and in our wagons, in our checks and notes and bonds and transfers of property—in every transaction of our every-day business life. For if we are to maintain great armies and navies like the powers of Europe we must raise the revenue for them by the means mentioned, and also by a stamp tax that will face us at every turn.

"These conditions are contrary to our present form of government. To-day we know that the customs collector exists. He sits in his office at the custom house and few of us ever think of him—fewer still have ever seen him or felt the taxes collected through him. Under the new regime tax collectors would necessarily be excise men with offices everywhere. They would be known not only in New York and the other great centres of commerce, but in every town, village and hamlet in the United States. Our people respond with patriotic alacrity to every burden, sacrifice or tax for the successful carrying on of war. Whether they would with equal cheerfulness do the same for the new policy of the colonial empire furnishes food for consideration.

"What also does a world-wide policy mean to us? It means a centralization which would change materially the relations of the United States to the Federal Government. The control of these populous colonies would be centred at Washington, and we should have a centralization of power far beyond what the old Federalists ever dreamed of. You cannot have empire without all its attributes, and that means a practical revolution of our form of government and an abandonment of the beliefs which the fathers held when they established this Government in 1776."

I asked Mr. Depew if it was not possible to derive from these proposed colonies a revenue greater than the additional expenditure which their possession would involve.

"How," said Mr. Depew, "by taxation? Every time you attempt to collect a tax from these people they would rise, and you would have to call on your military force to suppress them. And suppress them for what? For doing what John Hancock did? They might quote against us our immortal declaration 'that taxation without representation is tyranny.'"

Are There No Trusts?

Are there no trusts? Ask the men who used to work in the rolling mills. Are there no trusts? Ask the men who used to work in the bicycle factories. Are there no trusts? Ask the independent manufacturers or the small merchants, or anybody, in fact, except M. A. Hanna.

No trusts, indeed! The woods are full of trusts and every one is a menace to labor. But, there's a way to get rid of 'em and that way isn't by voting the Republican ticket, either.—Toledo Bee.

A Belated Discovery.

Chairman Hanfa should have made his discovery that there are no trusts in the United States before the Republican platform was constructed and before President McKinley had written his letter of acceptance. It would have saved the platform makers and the President much anxious thought.

THE "FULL DINNER PAIL" FAKE.

An Insult to the Intelligence of the American Workman.

The Republican campaign argument entitled "The full dinner pail" is at once a fraud and an insult to the intelligence and the morality of the American workingman.

A fraud, because in spite of all that a subsidized press and a "personally conducted" corps of campaign speakers can say, the administration of William McKinley has not meant unlimited prosperity for the American workingmen.

The thousands of unfortunates who have walked the streets of all our great cities through the long, cold months of every winter, willing to work, but with no work to do, and therefore no food, save the dole of charity, and no shelter, save the police station, are a terrible flaw in the picture of general prosperity.

The thousands of farmers of the Eastern States who sell the products of their hard toil to-day for the same price that they commanded four years ago and pay for the necessities of life an increased price, are not sharers in prosperity.

The hundreds of thousands of men in our great cities whom intolerable wage conditions have forced to try the terrible remedy of strikes and who have found themselves beaten and baffled by the combinations of capital against which they fought, and who face the coming winter, impoverished by a summer of enforced idleness, know that the story of prosperity is a deceit and a snare.

The great armies of miners who are even now in revolt against conditions that made their lives only prolonged starvation, while the corporations they served fattened on the product of their toil, know that the "full dinner pail" is a fraud.

But we said that the "full dinner pail" argument is an insult to American workingmen, and it is. A brute, a beast, can be tolled with a dish of fodder to any slavery, but a man, an American freeman, whether he wears broadcloth or jeans, knows that there are higher interests than those that are represented by so much bread and meat. A Government has not done all that it ought to for the people whose interests it is supposed to serve when it has given them food, even in plenty; and the Republican party when it seeks to cover the gross immoralities of its four years of power with a dinner pail; when it says to the workingmen of America, "Fill your bellies with fodder and, like beasts, forget that there are weightier considerations than something to eat," insults every honest man.—New Voice.

How the Trusts Steal Savings.

"I earn the same wages I did two years ago. I have no new expenses. I am more careful than ever about my expenditures. Yet I find that where I had two or three dollars of my wages left at the end of the week two or three years ago I have nothing left now."

That paragraph expresses the thought of many a workingman. He wonders why it is that he saves nothing now, even with greater economy, when he had a little balance left in his pocket at the end of the week heretofore.

The explanation is that given by the Anthracite Coal Miners' Union. Living expenses, they assert, have "increased fully thirty per cent. in two years." The trusts make the difference. By artificially enhancing the cost of living they draw from the pockets of the workingman the little balance each week that formerly swelled his savings. Many a workingman wonders why the wage that formerly supported his family runs short now. The answer is the same. A trust made increase of the cost of living, "fully thirty per cent," means the loss of his savings to one workingman and pinching and debt to another.

A Puzzle.

If the people of the Philippine Islands are incapable of managing their own affairs and must be shot into submission—

Why does Mr. McKinley apply this principal to the Christian population which wishes to set up a republic under American protection;

And refuse to apply it to Sulu, where he has granted autonomy under American protection to a Mahometan despot, has guaranteed polygamy and slavery and has granted subsidies to the royal harems?

Why treaties and subsidies for Mahometan polygamists and slave-holders? Why fire and sword for enlightened Christians?

The Mask Pulled Off.

The effort to hide imperialism in this campaign has failed at every point. Imperialism taxes Porto Rico without her consent; it imposes military rule on Cuba long after Cuba should have had her own chance; it loots Cuban revenues; it carries on a war of subjugation and extermination in the Philippines. The mask is pulled off, and President McKinley could not say to-day, "Imperialism is impossible."

Sheltered by the Tariff.

Talking about trusts, there are fifty or sixty very obnoxious ones that would have to go out of business if the tariff shelter under which they rot should be taken away. There is no honest opposition to trusts that does not go to the root of the evil by insisting upon the repeal of all legislation which encourages their formation and fosters their growth.

By the Trusts, For the Trusts.

President McKinley entered into a government by the people, of the people, for the people. He closes his first term as the chief operator of a Government of the people, by the trusts, for the trusts.

TRUTHS ABOUT TRUSTS.

PROTECTED BY REPUBLICAN CONGRESS AND ADMINISTRATION.

An Article Which Shows How Silly is Hanna's Assertion That "There is Not a Trust in the Entire United States"—A "Definition" For Depew.

Senator Hanna says "there are no trusts. Senator Depew calls for "a definition."

The same was originally given to a number of independent corporations combined to create a monopoly and vesting their power of action in a single trustee. It was decided by the Supreme Court that corporations could not lawfully combine in this way, and so they adopted the device of merging their existence and identity in one great corporation.

The name changed. The thing continued. Instead of a trustee acting for separate corporations there is a president and board of directors representing the several corporations welded into one. In either case the aim and the result are the same—the creation of a private monopoly. If anything, the cohesion is now more perfect—the power is greater.

The Anti-Trust law of 1890 declares that—

"Every contract, combination in form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade * * * is hereby declared illegal."

Judge Barrett, in his decision in the famous sugar case in New York State, thus defined a monopoly:

"A combination, the tendency of which is to prevent competition in its broad and general sense, and to control and thus at will enhance prices, to the detriment of the public, is a legal monopoly. * * * Nor need it be permanent or complete. It is enough that it may be even temporarily and partially successful."

There are hundreds of such monopolies in the country to-day, and neither the Republican Congress nor Administration has done anything to prevent or to punish them, but both have done much to promote and protect them.

The history of the window-glass industry for twenty years has been a history of a succession of pools, lockouts, agreements fixing prices and rates of wages on the one side, and on the other of strikes and their accompaniments.

On account of our natural facilities we ought to be making the best glass in the world, but we make poor glass for which the consumer pays double price.

The American Glass Company was formed in 1895. It was a selling agent for eighty-five per cent. of the factories. It was succeeded in October, 1899, by the American Window-Glass Company. The capital of this corporation is $17,000,000. The value of the property represented by this capital is about $6,000,000. Since 1895 the prices of window-glass have been about doubled.

It is stated in a glass manufacturers' periodical that the pool made $700,000 in 1896, $1,750,000 in 1897 and $2,000,-000 in 1898.

The glassmakers take the full benfit of their enormous protection, and as foreign glass costs more in the interior than on the seaboard by reason of the cost of transportation, consumers of American glass in the interior pay more for the domestic article than do consumers on the coast. A box of glass, for example, costs at Pittsburg fourteen cents more than the Boston price.

The duty on glass is between eighty and 100 per cent.

Besides this great trust we have the following trusts in the glass industry:

The Pittsburg Plate-Glass Company, with a capital of $10,000,000. It has about doubled prices in the last two years. It pays very low wages—from $1.35 to $1.80 per day.

The National Manufacturers' Association has advanced its prices ten to fifteen per cent.

The National Glass Company is new. It is a combination of makers of tableware and has $4,000,000 capital.

The Macbeth-Evans Glass Company owns about half the producing capacity of lamp-chimney plants.—New York World.

Freedom of Discussion.

The suspension of freedom of discussion is one of the strongest signs of the imperialism which seeks to make itself permanent.

Republicans make objections to a discussion of the Philippine question pending the suppression of an alleged rebellion.

They object to Mr. Bryan's criticism of the Philippine policy because he supported the ratification of the treaty which removed Spanish sovereignty. If the treaty had not been ratified, then a state of war would have existed, pending which criticism would still have been denounced as "stabbing the army in the back."

Take it what way we may, discussion seems to be out of order. Will the organs kindly inform us when liberty of speech will be in order again?—Atlanta Constitution.

An Exposure.

Some months ago the Republicans were boasting of the thoroughness with which they had established the gold standard. Now even Secretary Gage is ambitious to prove that the Republican enactment is so flimsy that it could be easily destroyed by a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury.

Very Inconsistent.

The Republican papers which are insisting in one breath that Mr. Bryan stands no chance whatever of being elected President are discussing in their next breath Mr. Bryan's probable cabinet appointments after he is inaugurated.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 21.

Subject: The Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin, Luke xv., 1-10—Golden Text: Luke xv., 10—Memory Verses, 4-7—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "Then drew near unto Him." They "were drawing near unto Him" (R. V.) to hear Him. They came to His ministry with an assurance that He would receive them into His kingdom. "Publicans and sinners." The publicans were the taxgatherers. They were odious to the whole nation on account of their occupation and their unscrupulousness in carrying it on, and were persons from whom the religious held aloof because of their gross and sensual life. "To hear Him." They did not come merely to see Him, or to solicit for cures, but to hear His excellent doctrine and the instruction He gave. They came to see Jesus because they were penitent, a fact which should have led the Pharisees to rejoice rather than to murmur.

2. "The Pharisees." The leading party among the Jews; "the orthodox defenders of the law." They were very strict outwardly, but neglected the weightier matters of the law, such as justice, mercy, humility and purity of heart. "And Scribes." The teachers of the law, also called "lawyers" and "doctors of the law." Many of them were Pharisees and also members of the Sanhedrin. "Murmured." The proud murmur and condemn; the humble hear and learn. They found fault with Him (1) because He allowed outcasts and vicious persons to approach Him, and (2) because He associated with them. "Receiveth sinners." Yes, precious truth! Christ receiveth sinful men. He takes them in His arms, forgives and saves them, and admits them into the circle of disciples. They kept far from other religious teachers, but were drawn to Christ. "And eateth with them." This was considered scandalous; it was contrary to the tradition of the elders. Jesus was the friend of the sinner, but not of the sin; they hated the sinner, Jesus associated with sinners for the purpose of drawing them away from their sins to Himself.

3. "He spake this parable." In order to justify His course and show the true spirit of the gospel to the lost He speaks the parables of this lesson. Something like this parable we had in Matthew 18:12. There it was designed to show the care God takes for the preservation of saints, as a reason why we should not offend them; here it is designed to show the pleasure God takes in the conversion of sinners, as a reason why we should rejoice in it.

4. "What man of you." The words are emphatic. He makes it personal and appeals to their ordinary human feelings. If they would pity a lost sheep ought He to be criticised for showing pity to a lost man? "If he lose one of them." The whole flock of mankind, both Jews and Gentiles, belongs to the divine Shepherd. The lost sheep is an emblem of a heedless, thoughtless sinner, one who follows the corrupt dictates of his own heart, without ever reflecting upon his conduct. No creature is more defenseless, or more in danger of being devoured by dogs and wild beasts than a sheep. Who but a Pharisee or a devil would find fault with the shepherd who endeavors to rescue his sheep from danger and ruin! "Leave the ninety and nine." Not that the shepherd does not have a care for the ninety and nine—they are all precious to him, but they are safe. It is the lost one that now needs his attention. "In the wilderness." The plains on which the sheep were pastured. All uncultivated ground was called "wilderness." "Go after that which is lost." Sinners are lost to God, lost to holiness and heaven. Jesus goes after them, by His spirit, by His providences, through His written word, by His church. He searches diligently with a "yearning, active, tender sympathy," with a heart filled with true love, bent on finding and restoring the wanderer.

5. "Hath found it." This is not to be understood as teaching that Christ saves men independent of any action on their part. See on verse 7. "On His shoulders." He bore our sins in His own body on the tree. 1 Pet. 2: 24; Isa. 53: 4-6; Heb. 9: 28. "Rejoicing." Love and pity explain the gentleness with which the shepherd treats the sheep when he finds it. Mercy for the lost one and joy within himself are the shepherd's feelings.

6. "He calleth together." The joy is so great that it needs to be imparted. Those who are animated by the same compassion the shepherd manifested will rejoice with him. This sheep was of no greater value than any one of the ninety and nine that had not wandered away; it was the rescue that caused the rejoicing.

7. "Joy shall be in heaven." The angels take an interest in the affairs of this world. They rejoice (v. 10) when the lost return. "That repenteth." Sinners must repent in order to be saved. The parable represents the shepherd as finding the sheep, taking it upon his shoulders and carrying it to the fold, the sheep having no will in the matter; but in the application let us remember that the sinner decides whether he will accept or reject the love and mercy of Christ. This parable teaches: 1. That man is lost. (1) By ignorance of the truth. (2) By falling into vice. (3) By his own heedlessness. 2. That he may be found and restored. (1) Christ is seeking him. (2) He must repent. 3. That his recovery occasions joy. (1) To himself. (2) To Christ. (3) To friends and neighbors. (4) To angels.

8. "If she lose one piece." The same as the Greek drachma and the Roman denarius. In value about 16 cents. This parable illustrates the preciousness of the human soul. The loss of one out of ten is a much more serious one than in the preceding parable. "Seek diligently." A new idea is brought out in this parable. Pity moved the shepherd, but self-interest moved the woman to search for the coin. And so Christ teaches that man has value in the sight of God. 1. The owner of the coin as representing God is, (1) anxious to find that which is lost, (2) diligent in seeking in dark places, (3) successful, (4) filled with joy at the recovery. 2. The coin as representing man is, (1) of real value, (2) unconscious of loss, (3) helpless. But man is different from the coin in that he is an active, responsible being, and must repent in order to return to God.

9. "Rejoice with me." The cause of rejoicing was that the coin had been found, not that it was of greater value than the other pieces which had not been lost. When sinners come to Christ, God, good men and angels all rejoice. If these Pharisees had not been so blind they might have seen how little of the spirit of heaven they had within them; they found fault when Jesus received and saved the lost.

10. "Over one sinner." One soul is precious. To be associated with Christ in the work of saving men is the highest calling we can engage in in this world. Let us all strive to be soul winners.

FOR PRESIDENT:
WM. J. BRYAN,
of Nebraska.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT:
ADLAI E. STEVENSON,
of Illinois.

FOR MEMBER OF CONGRESS FROM THE FOURTH DISTRICT:
SYDNEY J. BOWIE,
of Calhoun.

Two weeks from next Tuesday is election day.

TIME is up and no opposition to Bowie has transpired.

THE Fourth Congressional District is perfectly quiet and perfectly unanimous.

MESSRS. Sartor & Kicker, of Clanton, The Cash Store, of Thorsby, and T. U. Crumpton, of Maplesville, have all sent in new copy fos their advertisements this week.

LET every voter make up his mind to go to the polls on November 6, and cast his ballot for Bryan and Stevenson electors, and for Sydney J. Bowie for Congress.

A light vote in November will have a bad effect upon the future representation in Congress from this State. If for no other reason this should be sufficient to induce every man to turn out and vote.

FOR the first time in the history of Chilton county, the name of one of our citizens appears upon the electoral ticket. Mr. Tipton Mullins was nominated upon the Bryan and Stevenson ticket, and for the honor of the County we should give him a full vote.

THE great strike of the anthracite mineworkers of Pennsylvania, which began September 17, practically ended to-day, when the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company and the Lehigh Valley Coal Company agreed to abolish the sliding scale in their respective regions and to grant an advance in wages of 10 per-cent net, the advance to remain in operation until April 1, 1901, or thereafter. This action meets the demand of the Scranton miners' convention. The decision was arrived at after a conference between representatives of the individual coal operators and the large coal-carrying companies.

To-day's action was the culmination of the recent meeting of the individual operators at Scranton, following the mine workers' convention in the same city. It is conceded that the result of the conference is a complete victory for the men All the demands of their convention are acceded to and as one of the individual operators put it after the conference, the operators go a little further in agreeing to maintain the wage advance after April 1.

Deep Water Conference.

"You are not a real fish; you are only an imitation," said the flying fish. "You can stay under water only an hour or two, and then you have to come to the surface to breathe."

"That's all right," retorted the whale. "You are only an imitation bird. I can live under the water longer than you can live out of it."

This dear children, teaches us that those who dwell in water should not try to put on airs.—Chicago Tribune.

Absentminded.

"Absentmindedness is a bad thing in business," said the fat man.

"Ain't it, though?" responded the lean man.

"Just look at me, for instance. I went and lost one of my best customers last week by addressing a letter to him as 'John Rheory Lloyd.'"—Indianapolis Press.

THE gentleman to whom the following letter is addressed, has been in correspondence with the well-known cotton brokers, Hubbard Bros. Co., of New York, and received this answer from them. It contains some advice which demands the best consideration of our cotton growers.

New York, Oct. 12th, 1900
Mr. J. R. McLendon, Naftel, Ala.

Dear sir—You have struck the writer in a tender spot. He has for years preached all up and down the cotton country the doctrine you have put into a few words. There is no man on earth who has his present and future conditions so firmly within his own grasp as has the Southern farmer, but he throws away his advantages when he puts every available acre into cotton, thereby swelling the surplus over manufacturers' requirements, and pays tribute to Chicago instead of raising his own corn and meat at home. Experience has shown that the farmer makes more dollars out of an 8,000,000 crop than out of an 11,000,000, but the trouble is each fellow waits for the other fellow to reduce while he himself prepares to take advantage of the reduction (?) by putting in a few extra acres.

At the present time it looks as if we were to have a crop of about nine or nine and a half million bales. It also looks as if this yield had been discounted in the price. A year ago at this time we were selling cotton for 7 cents and while we do not minimize the conditions as they exist, we hardly feel that they call for any further improvement at present. We certainly advise those of our friends who have cotton on hand to take advantage of their opportunity.

Yours very truly,
HUBBARD BROS., & Co.

To-day, the quantity of gold produced is relatively far greater than in 1890, and the price of silver would be relatively higher if the currency demand for the two metals had remained the same. To-day, therefore, the passage of an act for the unrestricted coinage of silver to be purchased at a market value not exceeding its coin value would restore the old ratio as surely as the value of silver bullion is governed by the law of supply and demrnd. A bill framed in this way was supported by all the bimetallists in the State in 1894, but was defeated by those who maintained that the increase of the currency would be an evil to both capitalists and laborers. To-day, when President McKinley is boasting that the increase of our currency from $1,500,000,000, to $2,000,000,000 in four years has been accompunied by increased business at increased prices, there are relatively few who look upon the increase of the currency as an evil to the producing classes Mr. Bryan, therefore, might easily bring the conservitive members of his party to support a measure which without imperiling the continued parity of gold and silver coin would restore silver to its old place in the currency.—From "Bryan's Fincial Policy; A Demoeratic View" by Charles B. Spahr, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for October.

IN THE FAR EAST.

Beyrouta, Syria, Aug. 24, 1900.

I shall never forget the incomparable beauty of the city of Constantinople, as it appeared from the steamer deck, as we steamed down the Bosphorus. It is really composed of four towns—Stamboul (old part), Galatea, Pera and Scutari—all having these names owing to the water divisions of the Bosphorus and the Golden Horn. It is distance however that "lends the enchantment," as the dogs, beggars and filth would destroy the beauty of any city. Here again I think of my pastor, Bro. W. J. Ruddick, whose father perished in the Crimean war fought by the French, English and Turks against Pur-ia. His father lies buried here.

The quarantine against Syria cut us out of visiting Smyrna and Ephesia, and also cut off direct travel, hence we now take a coastwise Russian steamer (the Knock-Him-Off, as best I can understand what they called it) which will take eight days to make the trip to Joppa instead of three by direct boat. I give you fair notice, too, that if this letter about this trip proves as uninteresting as the trip was you will quit reading it before you are through it. We struck what is called the cross current of the Gulf of Saros Saturday evening, and Bro. Ellis, who hitherto held the champion's belt for splendid poise of stomach, fatten to eat his supper as did all the balance of the party, though they held up crossing the stormy Atlantic. Sunday morning we were out of it and all O. K. again.

Mt. Athos soon came in sight, a bare, rugged, rocky peninsular extending out in the sea with houses stuck about in the cracks and on the ledge of the rocks. I had the fortune to meet a Greek physician who had lived there three years. He told me there was 20,000 people on the rocky mountain; twenty monasteries and not a single female on it of man or beast; that meat was not eaten at all; a little fish sometimes. They grow some olives and grapes here. I asked him how it was possible for the men to live. He said that it was supported by Greek churches in Greece and Russia. It is said that some famous old manuscripts are in the monastery here. Original copies of the Odyssey, Plato's Republic; also the sacred vessels of St. Sophia taken there at the downfall of Constantinople. The physician was removed from here, so he said, at the request of the people because he did not enter into their ceremonies. He was quite happy over it, as he was out on ship with us to Tripoli, Syria, a happy change. I said to a gentleman on board our vessel, what a pity that 20,000 men, who could do so much good in the world, should shirk duty and bury themselves here. He was a Roman Catholic and you ought to have seen him bounce me and abuse me about imputing any evil thing to these holy men. I am glad, since it must be, that they stop at Mt. Athos and do not come to America. I figured a long time as to how the people got on Mt. Athos the first time, and came to the conclusion that they were let down by a rope from a balloon, or shot up by an air gun from the steamer's deck.

We came, at 7 a.m., to Salonica, Paul's Thessalonica. His reputed church is still here to whom he wrote the Epistle. The old walls, or rather some walls, are around the city yet. My, me! What a difference you can see in the lower and upper classes of the white race as soon as you pass England, France and Germiny. There is some there, but not so marked. They soo-

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

And Yet He Had to Smile.

She was telling tales on her brother, who was an extravagant chap when he had money, which was only for two or three days each month after he received his allowance. "Bob was sweet on Jessie," she said "and wanted to give her something nice. So he went to the florist and ordered one dozen American Beauty roses to be sent to her address. They were 75 cents apiece, and that meant $9, enough for Bob to pay. But what does the foolish fellow do?

"He sees some extra long stemmed ones standing in a vase near by, and he prices those. 'One dollar and a quarter apiece,' says the man. Bob is feeling very generous that day. His allowance has just come in. 'Give me a dozen of those instead of the cheap ones I took,' he says and hands over the extra $6.

"That night he calls on the girl to see the effect his present has made. She hasn't received the flowers yet. They come while he is there. This just suits him, because he will be able to see the expression of astonishment on her face. She opens the box, sees Bob's card and lifts up the roses with a cry of rapture and an 'Oh, Mr. Wentworth, how sweet of you!' Then she looks around everywhere for a vase tall enough. You see, she hasn't any of those that stand on the floor, but only an ordinary chrysanthemum jar. She takes that down and measures the flowers, then she lays them on the table, and with one skillful whack of her little pearl handled knife she chops off half the length of the stems. Bob says it turned him cold to see $6 go into the wastebasket like that. We say at home it serves him right."—New York Herald.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by Clanton Drug co., and D. I. Deramus, Verbena.

Scenes in Galveston After the Great Storm

Galveston has experienced storms before, and on several occasions severe damage has been done. But the people have grown used to the danger from inundation, and even when the storm broke on that fateful Saturday morning they were not unusually disturbed, writes John Gilmer Speed, in Harper's Weekly. They went about their business in ordinary fashion, confident that the storm would soon blow over. At ten o'clock a gale was blowing. By noon this gale had increased to hurricane proportions, and those dwelling near the beach began to realize that this was something more than an ordinary summer gust of wind. Great waves were dashed over the beach, and the summer resorts were no longer habitable. Even then the people in Galveston were not apprehensive. But shortly past three in the afternoon it was apparent that something unusual was in the wind, which was blowing at forty-four miles an hour, while the barometer read 29.22 inches. Business men closed up their places and started for their homes to look after their families. But before these tardily awakened people could realize what was happening the full fury of the tropical hurricane was upon them, and communication was cut off not only with the outside world, but it was impossible to get from one part of the city to another. Two great forces were fiercely at work. The Gulf waves drove high upon the beach, and the gale from the northeast pitched the waters against the wharves and abutments, choking the sewers and flooding the city from that quarter. The wind, which had been some fifty miles an hour, quickened to eighty-four, when the measuring apparatus of the Weather Bureau was wrecked, and the rest can only be guessed at. The streets were rapidly filling with water, and each person had to stay where he was caught, as it was nigh impossible to move from place to place.

In times such as this, however, the impossible is done, and many men did succeed in getting their families into the more substantial buildings, such as the public schools, the court house and the hotels. From three o'clock in the afternoon the wind increased steadily until it was at its highest, and certainly not less than 100 miles an hour. The barometer also continued to fall, reaching its lowest, 28.04½ inches, at 7.30 p. m. This was the very height of the storm, but this highest continued for more than two hours. The nimsy among the structures in the city were nearly all down, knocked into kindling wood by the fury of the wind, and even the most substantial of the buildings were being damaged. Here a slate roof was blown off, there an iron roof rolled up and was hurled across the street as though it had been paper; timbers were carried in the air as though the solid oak and pine were only grass or straw, while wires, telegraph, telephone, electric light and trolley, were everywhere, for the poles had snapped like pipe-stems and let their burdens loose. The force seemed irresistible, as mighty as it was merciless. All this was in unrelieved darkness, which prevented even the most resourceful from averting the dangers that were on every hand. There was little if any change for two hours and a half. Then the barometer began slowly to rise and the worst of the storm was over. In two hours more the wind had subsided, and by midnight there was quiet in stricken Galveston—the quiet of death.

The water, which in some streets had been eight feet deep, began quickly to run out, and by daylight the pavements were again exposed. But what a scene of devastation this daylight revealed! Wreckage on every side, wreckage and death. A battlefield has its dread story to tell, but a city suddenly stricken as this was is a more pathetic spectacle. When men fight men the strong are killed alone, for all are strong, but here it was the weak, who suffered most severely, it was the women and children who died in the greatest number. They could not reach places of security for lack of strength, and the brave and willing men were powerless to help them. Those pinned down by solid wreckage lay where they had fallen, those drowned while fleeing for safety were carried out by the ebbing waters, while the fallen houses each held the secret of those who had been crushed in the downfall. A more pathetically wretched condition never met the eyes of men.

MORNING AFTER THE FLOOD NEAR BASE BALL PARK, FOOT OF TREMONT STREET.

As the day got older, however, there was other work than grieving. There was no drinking water in the town, and the uninjured food supply was short, while communication was cut off from the world that was willing to help. But above all was the necessity to get rid of the dead, which in so hot a climate began quickly to decay. In very many, indeed in most, instances the dead could not be recognized, and therefore could not be claimed by relatives. The bodies were buried in trenches, and boat loads were taken to deep water and there sunk, yielding up to the sea the victims it had come ashore to claim.

But the vicious in the community, many of them negroes, were as diligent in evil work as the rescuers were good. Hundreds robbed the dead bodies of what valuables they could find, even cutting off fingers and ears to get finger rings and ear rings. The few United States soldiers stationed in Galveston were called upon to do police duty, and State militiamen were sent to help as soon as possible. Every man caught robbing the dead was shot, and some twenty-five more were tried by drum-head court-martial and shot immediately. The summary execution of these wretches put an end to this phase of the awful situation.

One of the most thrilling tales of the Texas disaster is told by Miss Sadie Hirshfeld, of New York, who has just returned from Galveston.

She was with her family in their home on Seeley avenue when the storm came, and until she was rescued twenty-four hours later battled with death upon the roof of a cottage which had become enmeshed with debris bound seaward.

"The cry, 'The water's coming,' reached our ears," said Miss Hirshfeld, "and it was not until this moment that we thought that something unusual had happened. My father, mother, sisters and brothers all rushed to the windows just as the water swept through our street. At my father's request all the doors were bolted and the shutters that were not carried away by the wind fastened.

"Suddenly the house gave a lurch, creaked mournfully and then began to swing to and fro. Our home was lifted from its foundations and set adrift. The waters rose higher and higher until they reached the second story.

"Up the garret stairs we rushed, and soon the nine of us were clinging on the coped roof.

"Hundreds of families were in the same plight. We had gone about a block when the house struck against something, which we discovered later was an old hut.

"We remained there all night, while our clothes were being torn from our backs by the wind, and house after house floated by us, telling its story of misery.

"On one coped roof, when Sunday dawned, I saw a mother with a babe, which I judged to be some two months old, clinging as best she could. The wind had taken every stitch of clothing she had had on her back, and the expression on her face was almost heartrending.

"All eyes were turned in her direction waiting to see her disappear beneath the water. We had not long to wait. The babe slipped from her arms, and in her effort to save it she also was lost.

"On the floating house tops men, women and children knelt in prayer and sang hymns. Our family was half starved and on the verge of dropping into the sea and about to utter a last prayer when I fired a pistol which brought about our rescue.

"Two men from the convent for negro women a short distance away put out in a raft and carried us to that building."

Miss Hershfeld said that she saw at least fifty persons lose their lives under the most trying circumstances.

SEARCHING FOR BODIES IN THE DEBRIS ON TREMONT STREET, GALVESTON, TWO DAYS AFTER THE TIDAL WAVE HAD RECEDED.

No Heads on Chinese Coins.

Numismatics who may in the dim and distant future investigate the coinage of China in order to find some authentic record of the lineaments of its sovereigns will be doomed to disappointment. A representation of the human head separate from the figure is there an object of horror; hence there is never an effigy of the emperor on his coin. Further, the hermit-like seclusion in which the Son of Heaven traditionally lives is intended to stimulate veneration; and there are very few of the subjects apart from the officials of the palace, who ever see his face. A missionary recently returned from the celestial land observes that were it known that in Europe portraits of kings were suspended before inns, exposed to dust, wind and rain, and to the witticisms and perhaps the sarcasms of the populace, we should be held in even greater derision than we are.—London Daily Chronicle.

Power of Modern Guns.

The power of the modern gun is a thing that cannot be grasped. The 100-ton projectile strikes with a force equal to 465,000 eleven-stone men jumping from a height of one foot. When the eighty-one-ton gun fires a shot twelve miles, it is fired at such an angle that the shell goes up to a height 5482 feet higher than Mont Blanc. Big guns have been longer in use than most people think. In the year 1478 they had guns called "bombards," which threw projectiles weighing a quarter of a ton. They were wider at the muzzle than in the bore, and were used for battering buildings. The English used big guns at the battle of Crecy, and amazed the French, who had never seen such weapons before.—The Regiment.

Teaching Little Ones.

It is wonderful how much knowledge can be imparted to small children by a quick nursemaid who has an inkling of the kindergarten system. Children are never tired of asking questions, and if these are intelligently answered they pick up all sorts of useful knowledge without any actual teaching. The object of the kindergarten system is to teach the little ones to think for themselves, and it is worth every mother's and nurse's while to learn something of it. The custom of talking nonsense to them and distorting words cannot be too much condemned.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

If it were not for the provisions of the postal laws, Uncle Sam might dun the sultan on a postal card.

There is so much disquiet in various parts of the globe that there is absolutely no telling where Alfred Austin's poetry will strike next.

It is difficult to imagine more extensive changes than those which have taken place in the agricultural industry during the last half century.

The Prince of Wales and the Czar of Russia both dread public speaking. But the Kaiser can do the talking for all the crowned heads of Europe.

A fool German sea captain has started for the north pole in an ordinary schooner of only 44 tons burden, taking 20 other fools along with him.

The children who are now going to school may as well be admonished that they will have to work even harder than usual to keep up with current geography.

Speaking of the effect of civilization upon the Indians, the wealthier members of the tribes in the territory are sending their children to Haskell institute in special cars.

They must have an interesting system of trolleys in Washington. On two recent occasions the courts have held that swearing at it is justifiable on the ground of excessive provocation.

A Connecticut girl ran away an hour before her wedding the other day leaving a note to her mother which explained that she was too bashful to get married. This is a heartrending situation.

Some idea of the importance given to athletics in colleges and universities may be had from the fact that Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Cornell spent $304,234 for that purpose last year.

The fact that 72 out of every 1,000 British officers in South Africa have been killed or have died of wounds, while only 19 out of every 1,000 of the men have similarly suffered, is still further evidence of the splendid character of the Boer marksmanship.

The fear of cholera and the plague renders many of the natives of India heartless. The London Lancet's correspondent writes that when a member of a family is attacked by the disease he or she is shut up in the house with a pitcher of water, and left to die.

The official records of the weather bureau, which extend as far back as 1871, do not show a period of sustained high temperature equal to that which the Eastern States experienced this year in June, July and August. Meteorologists are unable to account for it.

A 20-horse locomobile for plowing and to be operated by the use of alcohol, has been satisfactorily tested at Oberusel, near Frankfort, Germany. It consumes about one pint of alcohol per hour to each horse-power, at a cost of 25 per cent. less than a steam plow.

Consul Worman, of Munich, says that most factories in Germany have nothing like our electric timekeepers, and an effort to introduce them into Germany, especially into South Germany, where new enterprises are constantly being launched, ought to be successful.

India has the cheapest coal in the world. It is worth at the pit a little over four shillings per ton. For six years past the price has been fairly steady at about this rate. Recently there has been a tendency to a slight increase, which will probably continue, but this will amount to very little.

Emigration from Europe to the United States is increasing, and steerage rates on the transatlantic steamships have advanced. The emigrant's little toll for travel shows conspicuously in the aggregate, but the shrewdest transportation manager can only conjecture what rate the traffic will bear.

Professor Koch recently informed the British consul in British East Africa that he was convinced that quinine was as much to blame as malaria for suffering in that country, and that haematuric fever was caused by quinine poisoning, and was just as annoying as malaria, which the quinine was taken to avoid.

In order to facilitate communication between the German soldiers in China and their homes, the government has contrived a special code of about one hundred important sentences, and has reduced the rate from $1.50 a word to the same charge for a telegram of any length from a commissioned officer, and to 75 cents for the messages of lower officers and privates.

A company has been formed in New Haven, Conn., for the purpose of serving hot meals to families within a radius of seventy miles of its headquarters. These meals are to be sent to nearby points in wagons having compartments for each article, and shipped to distant towns by rail in specially designed cases. They are to be placed in the wagons and cases smoking hot, and kept at a high temperature until placed on the purchaser's tables.

In a poisoning case, recently reviewed by the Supreme Court of Indiana, the defendant, one Frank Siple, was convicted of the murder of Franklin P. Smith, and his punishment was assessed at imprisonment for life. Upon the trial he offered to prove by a competent witness that a man by the name of John Cline had confessed that he was the guilty party, saying to the witness within six hours of Smith's death: "I am the man who gave him the dose that turned up his toes. I always carry it right in here," pointing to his inside vest pocket as he spoke. The court refused to receive this evidence and has been sustained by the appellate tribunal in so doing, on the ground that it is "settled beyond controversy that a defendant on trial cannot be permitted to show that a third person has admitted that he committed the crime." The admission is only evidence against the party making it; if not in favor of some one else. The rule, however, does not exclude other independent proof tending to show that the offence was actually perpetrated by some person other than the defendant on trial.

After the vegetarianism and the "pure food" cults comes the advocacy of "raw food" as the best of diet for mankind. The public is now warned that the cooking of food is "in opposition to nature's laws," and that fire destroys all the life-giving and health-giving qualities of comestibles. Hence, it is urged, man should live upon fruits, raw cereals, raw vegetables, dried beef, honey, shellfish and other edibles that may be taken uncooked. That the new cult will have followers is doubtful. A man who has been in the habit of eating a juicy steak three of four times a week will not be contented with dinners of raw oats, bananas, raw turnips, shrimps and honey. What is even more to the point, the bewildered man who tries to diet in accordance with the latest improved fashion must be gradually coming to the conclusion that he ought not to eat at all. By the time he has listened to all the good advice, what will there be left for him to eat? The next step in diet reform would appear to be the organization of a society to urge man's subsistence on the wild herbs and roots which nourished primeval man in the wilderness.

Graphic evidence of the rapid growth of the cotton-mill industry in the South is furnished by a comparison of the cotton consumption. During the year ended August 31st last, the Northern mills purchased 2,068,000 bales, against 2,027,000 in 1891, while the takings of the Southern mills were 1,597,000 against 604,000 in 1891. This would seem to indicate that Northern consumption remained stationary as compared with ten years ago, while Southern consumption in the same period much more than doubled. But, great as has been the increase in the South, the growth in the near future will be even more rapid. Last year 800,000 new spindles were put in operation in the South, and 1,418,000 additional spindles are in course of erection. This means that within a year the South will have in operation 29 per cent. more spindles than it now has, and 55 per cent. more than it had a year ago. And this in turn means—assuming that the new mills will spin yarns of the present average numbers—that in another year the South will be consuming approximately as much cotton as the North.

This being the season when the campaign orators and other public oracles are telling the public more or less what they know about the opposing political candidates, it is interesting to consider an opinion of the Michigan Supreme Court in the case of Eikoff vs. Gilbert defining, to a certain extent, how far it is safe to go in attacking the character of a candidate. In this case the court held that a circular addressed to voters asking them to vote against a certain candidate for representative "because in the last legislature he championed measures opposed to the moral interests of the community," without stating the measures supported, was not a privileged communication, inasmuch as it was a statement of a fact libellous per se, and afforded no opportunity to judge whether or not the statement was a proper deduction from the facts upon which it was based. In explaining that a candidate is a thief, without qualification, he communicates a fact pertaining to his fitness; but it is a slander, if untrue, whether it was made in good faith or not, although, had he stated the exact facts, and expressed the opinion that they amounted to stealing, though they did not technically constitute the offence of larceny, the communication might be privileged." By way of caution and to conserve the public peace the court added: "It is hardly necessary to cite authorities in support of the doctrine that a candidate for office has a right of action for aspersions upon his character, and cannot be subjected to unwarranted and untruthful charges."

The heart feels with mournful anticipation that the sun is going down. Night speeds on. It is toward evening.

You have long rejoiced in the care of a mother; you have done everything to make her last days happy; you have run with quick feet to wait upon her every want. Her presence has been a perpetual blessing in the household. But the fruit gatherers are looking wistfully at that tree. Her soul is ripe for heaven. The gates are ready to flash open for her entrance. But your soul sinks at the thought of separation. You cannot bear to think that soon you will be called to take the last look at that face, which from the first hour has looked upon you with affection unchangeable. But you see that life is ebbing, and the grave will soon hide her from your sight. You sit quiet; you feel heavy hearted. The light is fading from the sky; the air is chill. It is toward evening.

The words of the text are pertinent to us all from the fact that we are nearing the evening of death. I have heard it said that we ought to live as though each moment were to be our last. I do not believe that theory. As far as preparation is concerned we ought always to be ready, but we cannot always be thinking of death, for we have duties in life that demand our attention.

When a man is selling goods it is his business to think of the bargain he is making; when a man is pleading in the courts, it is his duty to think of the interests of his clients; when a clerk is adding up accounts it is his duty to keep his mind upon the column of figures. He who fills up his life with thoughts of death is far from being the highest style of Christian. I knew a man who used often to say at night "I wish I might die before morning." He is now an infidel.

But there are times when we can and ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of that solemn moment when to the soul time ends and eternity begins. We must go through that one pass. There is no roundabout way, no byepath, no circuitous route. Do we must, and it will be to us a shameful occurrence or a time of admirable behavior. Our friends may stretch out their hands to keep us back, but no application on their part can hinder us. They might offer large retainers, but death would not take the fee. The breath will fail and the eyes will close, and the heart will stop. You may hang the couch with gorgeous tapestry, but what does death care for bed curtains? You may hang the room with the finest works of art, but what does death care for pictures? You may fill the house with the wailings of widowhood and orphanage. Does death mind weeping?

Listen to Paul's battle shout with misfortune, bark to mounting Latimer's fire song; look at the glory that hath rent the dungeon and filled the earth and heavens with the crash of the falling manacles of despotism and then look at those who have tried to cure themselves by human prescriptions, attempting to heal gangrene with patch of court plaster and to stop the plague of dying empires with the quackery of earthly wisdom. Nothing can speak peace to the soul, nothing can unstrap our crushing burdens, nothing can overcome our spiritual foes, nothing can open our eyes to see the surrounding horses and chariots of salvation that fill all the mountains but the voice and command of Him who stopped one night at Emmaus.

You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the stone bruise or festers with the thorn or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolhardy. I doubt not your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any you have in your wardrobe to keep you warm in that place.

Circumstances do not make so much difference. It may be bright day when you push off from the planet, or it may be dark night and while the owl is hooting from the forest. It may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple orchards swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autumn and the forests set on fire by the retreating year—dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel, with a servant faithful to the last. It may be in the rail train, shot off the switch and tunnbling in long reverberation down the embankment—crash, crash!

I know not the time, I know not the mode, but the days of our life are being subtracted away, and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours,—three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left—five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left—four seconds, three seconds, two seconds, one second. Gone! The chapter of life ended! The book closed! The pulses at rest! The feet through with the journey! The hands closed from all work! No word on the lips! No breath in the nostrils! Hair combed back to lie undisheveled by any human hands. The muscles still. The nerves still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still. You might put the stethoscope to breast and hear no sound. You might put a speaking trumpet to the ear, but you could not wake the deafness. No motion. No throb. No life. Still! Still!

On earth with many of you the evening is the happiest part of the twenty-four hours. You gather about the stand. You talk and laugh and sing. You recount the day. You plan for the morrow. You have games and repartees. Amid all the toil of the day that is the goal for which you run, and as you take out your watch or look at the descending sun you thrill with the thought that it is toward evening. So death comes to the disciple.

What if the sun of life is about to set! Jesus is the dayspring from on high, the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes? Jesus is the light of the world and of heaven. What though this earthly house does crumble? Jesus has prepared a house of many mansions. Jesus is the anchor that always holds. Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted. Jesus is the evening star hung up amid the gloom of the gathering night.

You are almost through with the abuse and backbiting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will not longer be misinterpreted or your honor filched. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities of heaven. Toward evening! The bereavements of earth will soon be lifted. You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb like Rachel weeping for her children or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the dead march. Toward evening. Death will come sweet as slumber to the eyelids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire palace, every lake a glossy mirror, the forests transfigured, delicate mists climbing the air. Your friends will announce it, your pulses will beat it, your joys will ring it, your lips will whisper it. "Toward evening."

LEATHER OF FISH SKINS.

Many Ways of Utilizing the Refuse of the Fishing Grounds.

The United States fish commission has been making a collection of leathers made from the skins of fish and other aquatic animals, especially of those which promise to be of practical utility. Several varieties of fish have skins that make an excellent leather for some purposes. Salmon hide, for example, serves so well in this way that the Eskimos of Alaska make waterproof shirts and boots out of it. They also cut jackets out of cod fish skins, which are said to be very serviceable garments. In the United States frog skins are coming into use for the mounting of books where an exceptionally delicate material for binding is required. There are certain tribes of savages who make breast plates out of garfish skins, which will turn a knife or a spear. A bullet will pierce this breastplate, but it is said to be impossible to chop through the material with a hatchet at one blow. Together with such a breastplate, these savages wear a helmet of the skin of the porcupine fish, which is covered with formidable spines. Fastened upon the head, this helmet serves not only as a protection, but in close encounters it is used to butt with. The Gloucester Isinglass and Glue company recently manufactured some shoes of the skins of a codfish and cusk. On the lower Yukon, in Alaska, overalls of tanned fish skins are commonly worn by the natives. Whip handles are made of shak skins and instrument cases are commonly covered with the same material, it being known under the name of shagreen. Whale skins are said to make admirable leather for some purposes, while porpoise leather is considered a very superior material for razor strops. Seal leather, dyed in a number of different colors, is included in the collection of the fish commission. The leather is obtained from the hair seal, and not from the fur-bearing species, and is used to a considerable extent in the manufacture of pocketbooks. The hair seals are still very plentiful in the North Atlantic ocean, and as it is not difficult to kill them they afford a very promising source of leather supply. Walrus leather came into the market recently, but as the animals are being exterminated rapidly it will hardly amount to much commercially. Another kind of leather now seen on sale is that of the sea elephant. Up to within a few years a species of sea elephant was found on the Pacific coast, ranging as far north as lower California, but the animals have been so nearly exterminated that they are now rarely seen. Another species is to be found in the Antarctic seas, chiefly on Kerquelan island.—New England Grocer.

Japanese Stopped.

The Japanese government has issued an order prohibiting the emigration of laborers to the United States and Canada. This comes on the heels of one restricting that emigration considerably. This action will be a great relief to the Canadian and British authorities and also to those of this country. About a year ago the Japanese began coming to British Columbia in such numbers as to alarm the people, who called on the Dominion authorities to take steps by the imposing of a head tax or in some other way to stop this inflow. This could not be done without the assent of the British government, which neither wished to disoblige the Canadians nor to agree to a violation of the treaties with Japan. The arrival of so many Japanese in the Pacific coast states was beginning to work on the feelings of their people. There was danger of a demand on congress for a Japanese exclusion law. Naturally the enactment of such a measure would make it hard to keep on friendly terms with Japan, whose government would not relish the putting of Japanese on the same level with Chinese. That government has been considerate in its action. It has shown a desire that the present friendly relations with the United States and Canada shall suffer no change. It is possible, also, that at this uncertain moment, when it is impossible to tell what fighting Japan may have to do with China or with Russia, it is deemed best not to let too many able-bodied Japanese go so far away from home that they will be unavailable for military duty. But when there is no such special demand for men some outlet will have to be found for the surplus population of Japan. That is one reason why the Japanese government is so anxious to get Corea. The island empire is overcrowded with people. If they cannot come to America they must settle in Asia or the islands of the Pacific.

Created a New Industry.

About the middle of this century it was the universal custom to face the white keys of pianos and organs with ivory, and to make the black ones of ebony. Long ago ivory became too expensive for any but the finest keyboards, celluloid taking its place. Now ebony also has advanced in price, so that a substitute for it is in demand. Dogwood has been found to serve the purpose excellently, and it can be stained a fine black and oiled and polished until it quite equals ebony both in durability and appearance. The industry of cutting and marketing dogwood, once a valuable tree, for this purpose, is already giving employment to a considerable number of people.

Monument Like His Desk.

In the cemetery at Nebraska City the other day I saw a peculiar monument erected by N. S. Harding, an insurance agent of that place, in anticipation of a time when he may need it. A large block of sandstone, at least six feet long, four feet high and three feet thick has been carved by a competent artist to represent a roller-top office desk standing open. Lying upon it are bundles of papers neatly bound with rubber bands, and inkstands with pens and pencils beside it, a sponge cup, a bottle of mucilage, a blotter and other ordinary equipments such as are found in the office of an insurance agent. The stone affair is a copy of the desk that has been used by Mr. Harding in his insurance office for many years.

LABOUCHE ON COCKFIGHTS.

Why He Imagines It Is Very Fish to be Seen.

There is no word so often misapplied as "sportsman," says London Truth. A man who owns a racehorse is called one, although he may never have ridden a horse in his life. A man who backs one man to pummel another, who knows the rules of the prize ring, is called one. And now Mr. Herbert Vivian aspires to become one of the fraternity by reviving the noble sport of cock-fighting. It is evident, however, that he is not aware of the law. A cock is held to be a domestic animal, and he would bring himself under the cruelty to animals act of 1849. But he would also come under the clause in that act that imposes a penalty of £5 on any one who keeps, uses, or acts in the management of any place for the purpose of baiting any bull, bear, badger, dog, cock, or any other kind of animal, whether of domestic or wild nature, or shall permit any such place to be used as aforesaid. Under this clause there have been a good many convictions, and it has, moreover, been held that any one who encourages or assists at a cock-fight is liable to imprisonment for cruelty to animals. I saw a cockfight nearly fifty years ago in Mexico, and it seemed a very brutal performance. The then president was an ardent supporter of cock-fighting, and he was by way of owning the best cocks in the country. He invited me to go with him to see a fight. Every man was betting, and his excellency covered all stakes set against his cocks. I lost above £100 to him myself.

HELP FOR WOMEN

WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. If you are sick, write and get her advice; her address is Lynn, Mass.

Poor Air and Poor Living.

When Jim Bridger, the famous scout of the plains, grew old, he thought he would like to retire from the somewhat arduous life of a plainsman and settle down to the ease of "the east," which to him meant Missouri. So he used his best endeavor to find a competent man to fill his place and went back to Missouri.

A year or two passed, and one day Captain Russell, the commandant of the post which Bridger had left, was surprised to see the old scout heave in sight. When he came in, the captain asked:

"Well, Bridger, what brings you back here?"

"Cap'in," said Bridger, "I want to go back to scouting again."

"Indeed? Why, I thought you had settled down in the east for the rest of your life?"

"Well, cap'in, I'll tell you how it is. I went back to old Missouri, and if you'll believe it they've got a railroad station within ten mile o' the old place—yes, sir, a railroad station! And what's more, they've got a ranch now in every four mile. I tell you what, cap'in, the air ain't pure down there no more."

"Is that possible? But I thought you'd like the good things to eat they have down there. You like good things to eat, I remember."

"Good things to eat! Why, cap'in, I didn't have a broiled beaver tail the whole time I was there!"—Youth's Companion.

Elephant Stories.

Talking of elephant fables, the animal trainer said:

"Take, for instance, the story of the man who stuck a pin in the elephant's trunk and years afterward was deluged with dirty water by the remembering elephant. I am surprised that any one should take this yarn seriously. Why, the average thickness of the elephant's hide runs from half an inch to two inches deep. Now, imagine a pin going through that thickness on an errand of pain. It would swallow a pin and break a needle.

"The old fashioned elephant story that has any real basis of truth is the one that notes the big brute afraid of a mouse. Experience in the winter quarters of a show, where mice and rats thrive, convinces one of this fact. A mouse will make an entire herd noisy with fright, and a rat will put them in a condition of desperate fear. An elephant may defend itself against a lion, tiger or any other natural enemy, but the insignificant size of a mouse baffles his conception of offensive or defensive warfare. The mouse is too quick to be crushed underfoot or to be caught by his trunk, and it can scamper over his rough hide with impunity. The elephant realizes his helplessness against such a diminutive foe and learns to fear it as he fears no other animal."—Buffalo Express.

Little Willie Ate Everything.

Until they are trained to eat properly youngsters are usually like little piggies. They "root" through everything and leave a muss after them. Willie, 6 years old, has a pair of parents who try to break him of the habit of taking things on his plate that he cannot eat and leaving much to go to waste. He is in a fair way to improve under their watchfulness.

"You must eat the crust, too, Willie," his mamma will say, and Willie will dutifully eat the crust.

"Don't take such a large piece of cake, Willie, unless you can eat it," his papa will say, and Willie will take it and stuff himself with it rather than to leave a crumb for his father to grumble about.

The other day Willie was invited to a birthday party. His mother dressed him in his best clothes.

"Now, named, Willie," was the last thing she said to him: "eat everything you take on your plate."

Willie came home that evening with severe pains. The little girl in whose honor the party was given was 13 years old. Her mother had baked a birthday cake, and part of the scheme of ornamentation of it were 13 wax candles. There were three of them on the piece that was put on Willie's plate.—Pittsburg News.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says, "I was taken with Typhoid Fever; that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I could'n't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise. This marvelous medicine is the surest and quickest cure in the world for all Throat and Lung Trouble. Regular sizes 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at J. S. Johnsons, Jr., drug store; every bottle guaranteed.

MAN ON THE CORNER

The Sights He Saw, and Some H
Saw Not.

Enjoying! It's true! But it's thing! And it can't be help-that's the only way in wh ch up the census report of the tion of Clanton. I detest who says "I told you so," you remember in this column months ago it was mentioned the census report was bound up Clanton in a bad ligh ,
has done it and no mi-take.
years ago the oldest inhabidoes not know how the census found 623 to be the population of town. Three years ago present town was incorporated a very limited area, and ev-body knows when he lives in especially when the tax-col-calls on him.

Four years ago the oldest inhabcan count up twelve store-in Clanton. Right now I have made a list of 53 places business within the corporation and it is at your service any may like to call at the BANNER office. There may be more, but search for the 53. And Clanton has churches, a Masonic Hall, lodge of the Knights of Pythias, lodge of the Knights of Honor, and the census report shows us smaller town than we were years ago. Oh, the pity of it! the residences which have erected here in the last ten
I can't think of one-fourth of and there's more going up than ever before, and yet the report says we are going backward. The census reports are not unmixed blessing.

It is greatly to be hoped that voters of Chilton county will make the election pass by with-according in the most unmistakable way that they desire a representation in congress.
There is only one way in which they can express that sentiment and that is by going to the polls and casting a ballot for Sydney Bowie for congress, and also the presidental electors for Bryan and Stevenson.

A good gentleman who resides in Selby, vociferously remarked, a few weeks ago, when THE BAN-NER stated its firm belief that every man's vote would be counted as it was cast, that he did not think so. THE BANNER was telling the truth. Now, I want to ask the same gentleman what he thinks about it at this time. THE BANNER was right then and THE BANNER is right now. Every man to the polls and be positive-sure that his vote will be counted just exactly as he marks
it. Mr. my friend at Thorsby dead. And while you are voting your ballot for Bryan and Watson electors, you may just well mark it for Sydney J.
Bowie for congress. It will be all right and will help to show congress we appreciate our motives and privileges, and that we appreciate a good man like Bowie and send him to them with a thumping vote.

We are always proud to hear of any of our young people making their mark and am very pleased to know that Miss Glennie McMorries has been elected Editor-in-chief of "Cap and Gown," the official organ of the faculty and students of Tuskaloosa Female College
Glennie is a charming young lady and I am glad her merits are recognized; It is safe to say the paper will flourish under her able management

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters which affected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. Overindulgence In Coffee.

Coffee is a powerful irritant of the cerebro spinal nervous system. Recent tests have shown that it increases mental and bodily waste rather than retards it, as has been claimed. Coffee poisoning is sometimes mistaken for the troubles engendered by the use of alcohol. In both cases the stomach and nervous system are the sufferers.

Caffeic and alcoholic gastritis are nearly identical as to their symptoms. The use of coffee by children has in several cases caused an arrest of development. Cases have been reported of delirium tremens brought on by the excessive use of coffee. It is related in a foreign medical journal that a man, in the absence of his wife, undertook to make his own coffee. Not knowing the correct proportions for use, he took about one-quarter of a pound of fresh roasted coffee for two cups. Two hours afterward he complained of vertigo, headache and, at first, trembling of the legs only, which soon became general, followed by several other distressing symptoms, some of which continued a day or two longer.

By a busy physician it is stated that at least two-thirds of his practice comes from the excessive use of coffee. The excessive use of tea and coffee, as well as the use of alcoholic liquors, often almost wholly obliterates the sense of taste.—Health Culture.

The Hat and the Title.

There is an amusing English definition of "gentleman." It is "A man who wears a silk hat, and if he has no other title insists upon having 'Esq.' added to his name when letters are addressed to him."

The west end Londoner of social pretensions accepts this definition in practice. Summer and winter, in rain or shine, he wears a high silk hat in the streets of London and carries it into the drawing room when he pays an afternoon call. It is only when he takes a train for the provinces or for the continent that he ventures to use more comfortable headgear.

He also expects to have the distinction of "esquire" when a letter is addressed to him and is highly offended if he finds on the envelope the prefix "Mr." As a matter of fact the number of English gentlemen who are legally entitled to the medieval honors of "esquire" is insignificant. It is a self assumed title which signifies nothing that is substantial in rank or privilege.

In common use in London "esquire" simply means that the person so addressed does not choose to be associated with tradesmen and ordinary working people and that he is a "gentleman" who invariably wears a silk hat.—Youth's Companion.

Overindulgence in Coffee.

Coffee is a powerful irritant of the cerebro spinal nervous system. Recent tests have shown that it increases mental and bodily waste rather than retards it, as has been claimed. Coffee poisoning is sometimes mistaken for the troubles engendered by the use of alcohol. In both cases the stomach and nervous system are the sufferers.

Caffein and alcoholic gastritis are nearly identical as to their symptoms. The use of coffee by children has in several cases caused an arrest of development. Cases have been reported of delirium tremens brought on by the excessive use of coffee. It is related in a foreign medical journal that a man, in the absence of his wife, undertook to make his own coffee. Not knowing the correct proportions for use, he took about one-quarter of a pound of fresh roasted coffee for two cups. Two hours afterward he complained of vertigo, headache and, at first, trembling of the legs only, which soon became general, followed by several other distressing symptoms, some of which continued a day or two longer.

By a busy physician it is stated that at least two-thirds of his practice comes from the excessive use of coffee. The excessive use of tea and coffee, as well as the use of alcoholic liquors, often almost wholly obliterates the sense of taste.—Health Culture.

The Hat and the Title.

There is an amusing English definition of "gentleman." It is "A man who wears a silk hat, and if he has no other title insists upon having 'Esq.' added to his name when letters are addressed to him."

The west end Londoner of social pretensions accepts this definition in practice. Summer and winter, in rain or shine, he wears a high silk hat in the streets of London and carries it into the drawing room when he pays an afternoon call. It is only when he takes a train for the provinces or for the continent that he ventures to use more comfortable headgear.

He also expects to have the distinction of "esquire" when a letter is addressed to him and is highly offended if he finds on the envelope the prefix "Mr." As a matter of fact the number of English gentlemen who are legally entitled to the mediaeval honors of "esquire" is insignificant. It is a self assumed title which signifies nothing that is substantial in rank or privilege.

In common use in London "esquire" simply means that the person so addressed does not choose to be associated with tradesmen and ordinary working people and that he is a "gentleman" who invariably wears a silk hat.—Youth's Companion.

STEVENSON CAMPAIGN VIEWS.

Vice-Presidential Candidate Makes an Estimate of the Result.

Adlai E. Stevenson, who returned to Chicago Sunday from his campaigning tour through the Eastern States, in an interview spoke enthusiastically of the democratic activity in the states through which he had passed. Mr. Stevenson made the flatfooted declaration that the democrats would carry Indiana, and added:

"Ohio should be put down as very likely to give its electoral votes for Bryan. To my mind the two great doubtful states which lean more strongly to the democratic than to the republican side in this fight are New York and Ohio."

Mr. Stevenson made the following estimates of the situation as it stands today.

"For McKinley—California 9, Connecticut 6, Iowa 13, Maine 6, Massachusetts 15, Michigan, 14; Minnesota 9, New Hampshire 4, North Dakota 3, Oregon 4, Pennsylvania 32, Rhode Island 4, Vermont 2, Wisconsin 12, Wyoming 3. Total 138.

"For Bryan—Alabama 11, Arkansas 8, Colorado 4, Florida 4, Georgia 13, Idaho 3, Indiana 15, Kentucky 13, Louisiana 8, Maryland 8, Mississippi 9, Missouri 17, Montana 3, Nebraska 8, Nevada 3, North Carolina 11, South Carolina 9, Tennessee 12, Texas 15, Utah 3, Virginia 12. Total 189.

"Doubtful—Illinois 24, Kansas 10, New Jersey 10, New York 36, South Dakota 4, Washington 4, West Virginia 6, Delaware 3. Total 120."

Mr. Stevenson left Monday for a three days' tour of Michigan.

STORM IN TEXAS.

Six Persons Are Killed and Three Others Missing.

Sunday morning about 7 o'clock a tornado struck about half a mile west of Lodi and fifteen miles west of Atlanta, Tex. The path of the tornado was about 200 yards wide, sweeping everything before it. One house in its path, occupied by colored people, was destroyed, six persons being killed outright and three others are missing and are supposed to be dead.

The cyclone traveled from the southwest to the northeast, crossing the Texas and Pacific railroad at Campbell's spur, a lumber-loading station about two miles north of Lodi. The lumber was carried away in all directions. It is feared further loss of life has resulted out in the country.

Yellow Fever Decreasing in Havana.

There are ninety-two cases of yellow fever in all in Havana, says a dispatch to the New York Tribune. Nineteen Americans are down with the disease.

The death rate among the Americans has been 8 per cent. The fever is decreasing now. There is no disposition on the part of the authorities to misrepresent the situation. The coming of so many Spanish immigrants has been the cause of the increase over last year.

Baptist Church Burned.

Grove avenue Baptist church at Richmond, Va., Rev. J. B. Hawthorne, formerly of Atlanta and Nashville, pastor, was totally destroyed by fire Saturday, the origin of which is unknown. It was built in 1890 at a cost of $40,000.

First Victim of the Season.

W. D. Price, of Palestine, Tex., a student at the Bingham School at Asheville, N. C., died from injuries sustained in a practice game of football. His spinal column was broken between his shoulders.

Will Move Headquarters.

Adjutant General William C. Liller, of the Spanish-American War Veterans, announced in Chattanooga that the headquarters of the association will be established in Philadelphia on November 1, with Col. James B. Doryell, senior vice commander-in-chief, in charge.

Charles Dudley Warner, of literary fame, and one of the owners of the Hartford Courant, died suddenly at Hartford, Conn., Saturday.

Rider Haggard, the author, in a recent public address delivered in London said that athletic training is a most desirable preparation in the life of a missionary, because nothing in a missionary impresses the savage so much as to find himself equaled or surpassed in strength and agility by the stranger.

HOBSON DEFENDS SAMPSON

Sensational Speech Delivered at Selma by the Young Lieutenant.

THE NAVAL OFFICER IS BROKEN HEARTED

Over Treatment Received by the American People—Declares That Sampson Stands at the Head of the United States Navy.

In his speech at the Academy of Music in Selma Saturday Lieutenant Hobson created a sensation by his enthusiastic and plainly evident sincere defense of Admiral Sampson, and declared that the great naval officer, who he says stands at the head of the American navy, is heartbroken at the treatment accorded him by the American people. After expressing a wish that the brave men of his crew who were with him on the Merrimac could be present to enjoy the hospitality of the occasion and a touching reference to Cervera, the Spanish admiral, he said:

"I wonder what makes me think of another character just here. When last Saturday I saw in the papers that Admiral Sampson was ill I telegraphed if it would be convenient for me to call. I took the next train to Boston and spent Sunday with him. His health is declining. It wrung my heart, it grieved me to see him. His physicians are baffled at his malady. His organs are right, but his health does not improve.

"We touched on one or two subjects. For a little while he could not speak. Soon he had to be carried to his room and I did not see him again. Mrs. Sampson told me that this great man was brooding, was breaking his heart at the thought that his fellow countrymen were so unkind.

"The people of this county think this man's blood is ice water. He has the mental ability and self-control that is the result of long years of discipline and training. He does not talk much. I tell you this man has a heart as tender as that of a child. He is as modest as a woman. He never asked for position. He has never uttered a word against another officer. He has never taken part in any controversy. I know this admiral, and he stands at the head of the navy.

Here Lieutenant Hobson described the expedition of "The Flying Squadron" under Admiral Sapson to San Juan, Porto Rico, and stated that it was an exhibition of nerve, determination and purpose unparalleled by any fleet in the late conflict. Continuing Lieutenant Hobson said:

"This great man has had his heart cut—has been almost slain. His great heart is breaking. He is to be compared with two other great characters in history who suffered in silence—George Washington at Valley Forge and Robert E. Lee, who did his great duty and accepted his sorrow without a word.

"Believe me, this admiral, this general of our navy, is of the type to place alongside of these two and I wish to heaven that in addition to having my crew here and Admiral Cervera, I could have Admiral Sampson and let you shake his hand."

Frightful Massacre.

A special from Constantinople says: "New and frightful massacres of Armenians have just occurred in the district of Diarbekia. The Mussulmans, it is asserted, pillaged outraged and killed during five days without the intervention of Turkish troops. Five villages, it is added, were entirely destroyed and burned."

Held in High Esteem.

The State Normal School at Jacksonville is so well attended this session that it is necessary for the normal department to move into its new $18,000 building recently donated by Calhoun county. The Normal School has long been held in high esteem as an educational institution which thoroughly prepares teachers for the public schools of the state.

Whitley, of Birmingham, Ala., was found dead at noon Monday in the hallway of the first floor of No. 258 Elizabeth street, New York, under suspicious circumstances, though his death is not believed to have resulted from violence.

Seeking a Cotton Mill Location.

The Commercial Club of Brewton has received inquiries regarding a desirable cotton mill site there in a letter from wealthy capitalists. ALABAMA'S POPULATION.

Census Shows the State to Contain 1,828,697 Persons.

INCREASE OF 215,680, OR 20.6 PER CENT.

Within the Past Ten Years—Population by Counties and of the Larger Cities and Towns Tabulated. The Full Details.

The Census Bureau at Washington has made public the returns of population in Alabama. The population of the State in 1900 is 1,828,697, as against 1,518,017 in 1890, representing an increase since 1800 of 315,680 or 20.8 per cent. This rate of increase is slightly greater than that for the decade from 1880 to 1890, when it was 19.8 per cent. but somewhat less than that for the decade from 1870 to 1880, when it was 26.6 per cent. From 1820 to 1830, the first decennial period in the history of the state, its population increased 142 per cent. and in the following decade 90.8 per cent, but subsequently the rate of increase declined until the decade from 1860 to 1870, when it was only 8.4 per cent.

The population of Alabama in 1900 is more than fourteen times as large as the population given for 1820, the first census taken after its organization as a state in 1819.

The total land surface of Alabama is approximately 51,540 square miles, the average number of persons to the square mile at the censuses of 1890 and 1900, being as follows: 1890, 29.3; 1900, 35.4.

The population of the state by counties is as follows, the first figures in each case being for 1900 and the second for 1890:

Of the sixty-six counties in the State, all but two, Cleburne and Lawrence, have increased in population during the decade. There are 201 incorporated cities, towns and villages in Alabama, for which the population in 1900 is separately returned. Of these, there are only thirty-two that have a population of over 2,000 and only nine of these have a population in excess of 5,000.

The cities of over 2,000 are as follows, the first figures in each case being for 1900 and the second for 1890:

University Leases More Land.

The executive committee of the board of trustees of the University of Alabama held a meeting in Birmingham a few days ago and a lease was made for 250 acres of coal lands belonging to the university near Hargrove, Bibb county, to the Cahaba Southern Mining company, of which Col. T. H. Aldrich, of Birmingham, is president. The terms of the contract are 6 cents on the ton royalty and is for ten years, with a privilege of renewing it at the end of that period for ten years more at the same figures. The lease is similar to another lease for 600 acres made heretofore to the same company in the same vicinity and which have been paying into the treasury of the university about $6,000 annually. It is figured that within about eight months the university will be receiving from this company on the two leases something near $12,000, which will be sufficient to support three professors per annum.

Thompson Wins.

So far as returns from the Democratic primary in the Fifth district have been received, Colonel Thompson appears to have the Democratic nomination for congress. Telegrams from Clay and Coosa Sunday night stated that Colonel Thompson had carried both of those counties. It appears now that Colonel Brewer has carried only two counties—Lowndes and Tallapoosa—and that his majority in those two is not sufficient to overcome Colonel Thompson's majority in the other seven.

Captain Hannon Passes Away.

Captain Thomas E. Hannon died at his home in Montgomery Sunday. He had been a sufferer from cancer for some ten years, and it was the effects of this horrible disease that caused his death.

When but a youth Captain Hannon entered the Confederate army, and within a short period he was promoted to the rank of captain. He served as one of General Wheeler's most trusted scouts.

A Bold Robbery.

The postoffice and Kelley's store at Normal were robbed a few nights ago by two masked men, who held up the proprietor, Mr. W. J. Kelley, and two visitors at the points of their pistols. The robbers secured $200 from the cash drawer of the store and $60 from the cash drawer of the postoffice.

Mr. F. T. Bullen, the author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot," says a good word for the modern battleship, in the London Spectator. He says that the modern ships are restoring the old lines of beauty. Monstrosities like the French Hoche and Charlemagne are going out, but in the British Formidable the battleship type is reverting more to that of the merchantman. "Their spacious freeboard catches the seaman's eye at once, for a good freeboard means not only a dry ship, but plenty of fresh air below as well as a sense of security in heavy weather." Then when tested in Atlantic gales "one is never wearied of wondering at their splendid stability and freedom from rolling which makes them unique fighting platforms under the worst weather conditions." Then they steer perfectly, "a range of over three and a half degrees on either side of their course being sufficient to bring down heavy censure upon the quartermaster." Mr. Bullen is bothered by these boats" since "going into action one of the first things necessary would be to launch them all overboard and let them go, secured together, so that they might be picked up again." He grimly admits that there would be no means of escape in case of sinking, for nothing would be left to float.

Five Hundred Bales of Cotton Burned.

The Planters' Warehouse at Camp Hill, with about 500 bales of cotton, was burned a few days ago. The loss is about $30,000, partially covered by insurance.

Woman Attempts Suicide.

Mrs. Jos. McCowan, aged about 25 years, made an attempt to kill herself at Huntsville by cutting her throat. She will probably die.

JOHN SHERMAN IS DEAD

The Republican Statesman Breathes His Last at His Home.

DEATH CAME PEACEFULLY TO HIM.

He Had Drawn a Congressional Salary Longer Than Any Other Man. Brief Sketch of the Life of the Aged Statesman.

Ex-Senator and ex Secretary of State John Sherman died in Washington Monday morning. His family expected his death and sat at his bedside all night. The end was peaceful. The old statesman passed away in his own home surrounded by those nearest to him.

Mr. Sherman entered congress nearly fifty years ago, and as early as the Kansas struggle he was so distinguished that he was appointed by the congressional committee to go that state for an investigation.

He served in congress in the house, a senator from Ohio, and then was in the senate until appointed a cabinet minister under the first Arthur administration. Mr. Sherman was at the head of the treasury while his brother, William T. Sherman was the head of the army.

When Mr. McKinley was elected president, Senator Sherman was invited into his cabinet and made secretary of state. He was old and was growing feeble mentally and physically, and when the Spanish troubles came upon him he was not equal to the work and worry and resigned. Almost at once the decline became more rapid and for many months the old statesman has been barely alive.

John Sherman was born in Mansfield, O., and lived there all his life. He began early to invest in Washington real estate, and the growth in values there made him a very rich man. His fortune is estimated at $2,000,000 and he has no children. He has given his adopted children much of his estate already, retaining a life interest.

John Sherman was, in the true sense of the words, a great man. He was able, cautious and persistent and won the highest position but one in the government.

McKinley Issues Proclamation.

As a fitting expression of the sense of the bereavement that afflicts the republic, President McKinley has directed that on the day of the funeral of Mr. Sherman the executive offices of the United States display the national flag at half mast, and that the representatives of the United States in foreign countries shall pay in like manner appropriate tribute to the illustrious dead for a period of ten days.

PLEASES UNCLE SAM.

Anglo-German Agreement is Acceptable to the United States.

It was authoritatively stated Monday that the United States government views with distinct favor the principles enunciated in the Anglo-German agreement relating to China, and that a formal response to that effect will be made at an early day to the invitation extended to the government to accept the principles of the agreement. The German charge d'affaires, Count de Quadt, had a conference with Secretary Hay, presenting officially the text of the Anglo-German agreement, including the invitation to the United States to accept it.

Mr. Hay expresses his satisfaction at what had been done, saying he felt it to be in complete harmony with the policy this government had pursued, both as to the maintenance of unobstructed commerce in China and the territorial entity of the empire.

Marked Increase in Property Values.

The assessment figures for sixty-nine of the seventy-five counties in Mississippi have been received at the auditor's office in Jackson, and they show that the total valuation of real and personal property has increased nearly $21,000,000 since the last assessment was made.

Whitecre Dead.

Jonathan Whiteacre, one of the messengers of the national house of representatives, is dead.

Santo Domingo is Quiet.

A dispatch from Santo Domingo says: "The whole country is pacified. The leaders of the revolutionists are prisoners. They have submitted, and the government is being conducted without trouble."

A dispatch received from Vladivostock says that cholera is increasing to such an extent in Japan that steamers have been quarantined.

HOBSON PRESENTED WITH A LOVING CUP

Fusillade of Bullets in a Montgomery Restaurant. To Experiment in Cotton Raising in Africa. Refused to Feed a Mixed Jury.

At Montgomery Friday Lieutenant Richmond Pearson Hobson was presented with a loving cup by the citizens of Alabama as a testimonial of their appreciation of his daring act in the harbor of Santiago when he sunk the Merrimac. There were 10,000 people present to witness the presentation and to participate in the ceremonies of the occasion. When Lieutenant Hobson received the cup he was standing on the steps of the state capitol where Jefferson Davis stood in 1861 when he took the oath of office of the confederate states.

Phares Coleman presented the cup to General Wheeler who in turn presented it to Lieutenant Hobson on behalf of the citizens of Alabama.

The cup is of sterling silver stands ten inches high and rests on a solid ebony pedestal, seven and one-half inches tall.

The handles of the cup are dolphins, emblematic of the sea and between the three handles are panels on which are beautiful etchings to commemorate the achievements of the gallant young Alabamian. On the first panel is an excellently etched portrait of Lieutenant Hobson, and beneath the portrait is the following inscription:

"Lieutenant Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., Born in Greensboro, Ala., August 17, 1870."

On the second panel is an etching of the sinking of the Merrimac. Just above the scene are the words "The sinking of the collier Merrimac on June 3, 1898," and below the etching are the names of the gallant crew in bas relief.

Shooting Affray in Montgomery.

Two former Birmingham men were principals in a very exciting shooting affray in Fleming's restaurant in Montgomery Friday night. Eugene Ware, who travels for a Baltimore house, shot Robert Jones and his wife. Ware shot four times, one ball taking effect in Jones' right arm, one in his left arm, one in the abdomen and one in Mrs. Jones' arm, all producing flesh wounds. Ware was badly cut with a knife, receiving three stabs in the back near the right shoulder and a half dozen slashes in the face. It is said that Ware used profane language in the presence of ladies and Jones ordered that he be taken from the room, which precipitated the trouble.

An Experiment in Central Africa.

The Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, a school for the training of colored teachers, has purchased $1,500 worth of farming implements, together with a cotton gin, press, engine and boiler and shipped the same to Togo, Central Africa, for the purpose of experimenting in cotton raising in that country next season. Four men from the school at Tuskegee will sail November 8 for Togo.

This "model farm," as it has been termed, will be in the midst of a German colony, and all expenses of said experiment are to be paid by the German government.

Refused to Feed the Jury.

A jury of the United States court at Huntsville, composed of white men and negroes, tried in vain to secure supper in a body Friday night at the first-class hotels of the city. The jurors were unable to agree on a verdict and Judge Bruce ordered the bailiff to take them out to supper. They went the rounds of the hotels and were refused at all places. Then Judge Bruce ordered the bailiff to take the jury to another hotel and arrest the proprietor if he refused to feed them. When the foreman of the jury heard this, to avoid probable trouble, he made the jurymen agree to take the meal in the jury room.

Romance in Old Age.

James Letsinger, of Colbert county, near Florence, aged 82 years, was married to Mrs. Martha O. Huley, aged 64 years, several days since. The groom addressed the lady of his choice on several occasions, but was refused and finally returned and announced that he had come to marry her and would not take no for his answer. Letsinger is well off in this world's goods and is a prosperous planter.

SHORT COTTON CROP.

Commissioners of Agriculture of Southern States Give Figures.

The Atlanta Journal publishes the following answers received in reply to telegraphic inquiries sent to the commissioners of agriculture throughout the south:

Alabama—Sixty-five per cent of crop for Alabama; total crop cannot exceed 9,000,000 bales.—R. R. Poole.

Virginia—Cotton crop of this state about 14,000 bales.—G. W. Koiner.

Arkansas—Indications verify Raleigh estimate of 9,364,866; for Arkansas crop too low.—Frank Hill.

Florida—Crop lost heavily past three weeks; will not reach 60,000 bales.—L. B. Wombwell.

Mississippi—I agree with President Stevens relative to bear move; crop in my state very little improved; maximum yield for south 9,500,000 —John A. Redhead.

North Carolina—State returns slightly above government October report. General conditions do not warrant bear movement; market obliged to rally.—S. L. Patterson.

Georgia—In reply to your inquiry regarding the cotton crop I have no reason to change my mind from the figures given your reporter a few days ago. I have intelligently sought information regarding the present crop from all the cotton states, and all indications lead me to believe that the present crop will not exceed 9,000,000 bales. In many of the states there will be no top crop at all; in a few instances there will be a small top crop, but not enough to be counted in the present calculation of the crop, therefore early or late frost will not affect these figures at all. There is no reason known to me why there should be a decline in the price of the staple, except that it is brought about by speculation.—O. B. Stevens.

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $5,000,000.

A Special Report on the Storm Damage to Texas Crops.

The statistician of the Department of Agriculture at Washington has completed his investigation of the agricultural situation in those counties in Texas that were visited by the West Indian hurricane of September 8, and is as follows:

The area under cotton in the counties in which serious damage resulted from the storm was approximately 1,300,000 acres, with a promise September 1 of a crop of About 650,000 bales. The reduction of the crop is estimated at about 68,000 bales, or 10.6 per cent. On a basis of $50 per bale, the amount destroyed would represent a value of $3,500,000.

The area under corn is estimated to have been about 815,000 acres, with an indicated production of about 17,500,000 bushels. This loss to the crop is estimated at about 1,000,000 bushels, or 5.7 per cent, representing a value of about $500,000.

The loss of rice is estimated at 78,000 barrels of four bushels each, representing the value of about $319,000.

Of pecans there is an estimated loss of about 2,500,000 bushels, valued at $10,000. Three thousand trees valued at $75,000 are also reported destroyed.

The loss of farm animals is estimated at 2,500 horses, 1,500 mules, 20,000 cattle, 2,800 sheep and 900 swine, representing a total value of about $490,000.

The loss of sugar cane, sorghum and other minor crops has not been ascertained with sufficient definiteness to warrant the publication of an estimate.

Exclusive of the damage of farm buildings, machinery, etc., the total loss may be estimated at $5,000,000.

Gen. Wheeler Makes a Statement.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler, while in conversation with a party of friends at Selma, said, when asked if he had retired from politics:

"I expect only to do two things in a political way hereafter. One is to contribute to the democratic campaign fund and the other to vote the democratic ticket."

This is considered to be an answer to the reiterated assertion of Gov. Roosevelt that "among those who are with us is 'Fighting Joe Wheeler.'"

Kruger's Flight.

Mr. Kruger was secretly taken on board the Dutch cruiser Gelderland, at Lorenzo Marques, Friday, on which vessel he is to sail for Holland. The reason given for Mr. Kruger's embarkation is that he feared the Boers here would attack him. The feelings of the refugees against Mr. Kruger for fleeing from the country are very strong.

ANGLO-GERMAN ALLIANCE

Formed to Maintain the Integrity of Chinese Empire

AND TO KEEP HER PORTS OPEN

Great Britain and Germany Spring a Coup of Momentous Significance in Chinese Situation—To Notify Other Powers.

Germany and England have formed an alliance to maintain the territorial integrity of China and to keep ports open, says a London dispatch. The terms of this agreement, which was arrived at October 16, between Lord Salisbury and Count von Hatzfeldt, German ambassador to England, are officially given out as follows:

The German government and her British majesty's government, being desirous to maintain their interests in China and their rights under existing treaties have agreed to observe the following principles regarding a mutual policy in China:

"Firstly—It is a matter of just permanent international interest that the ports on the rivers and litteral of China should remain free and open to trade and to every other legitimate form of economic activity for the peoples of all countries without distinction; and the two governments agree on their part to uphold the same for all Chinese territory as far as they can exercise influence.

"Secondly—Both governments agree that they will not on their part make use of the present complication to obtain for themselves any territorial advantage in the Chinese dominion, and will direct their policy towards maintaining undiminished the territorial condition of the Chinese empire.

"Thirdly—In case of another power making use of the complications in China in order to obtain under any form whatever such territorial advantages, the two contracting parties reserve to themselves the right to come to a preliminary understanding regarding the eventual step to be taken for the protection of their own interests in China.

"Fourthly—The two governments will communicate this agreement to the other powers interested, especially Austria-Hungary, France, Italy, Japan, Russia and the United States, and invite them to accept the principles recorded in it."

Confidently Expects a Victory in November Election.

For the Knoxville Sentinel's campaign edition, issued Saturday, Chairman Jones wired the following from Chicago:

"Conditions are excellent and I think are improving daily. We have a thorough and compact organization. Democracy is thoroughly aroused.

"Reports from New York and Ohio are especially encouraging. Reports from the chairman of the central committee in California indicate that our chances to carry that state are good. The state committee here is confident of carrying the state.

"While, of course, we have a fight in Indiana, our people do not believe it possible for the republicans to make any material impression in that state. Hence I confidently predict that Mr. Bryan will be triumphantly elected on the 6th of November."

Strike Nearing an End.

A dispatch from Wilkesbarre, Pa., says: The general belief here is that this week will see the windup of the strike. This the strikers do not admit openly, but the lockout cannot be continued much longer. Both sides are expected to make concessions. The operators say they have none to make, but under certain pressure they expected to make them nevertheless. The politicians have had their say in the negotiations looking toward a settlement, and now the sales agents for the big coal companies and the retail dealers in the big cities are taking a hand.

Gave Birth to Five Boys.

Mary Baily, a negress, gave birth to five children, all boys, at her home four miles west of Jacksonville, Fla., and is still alive. The children died a short while after their birth. The mother is 56 years of age and the father 63. She is also a grandmother.

Marius M. Duncan, tax assessor of Talladega county, died a few days ago. Mr. Duncan was serving his fifth term as tax assessor.

YOUTSEY CONVICTED

And a Life Sentence Given for Complicity in Goebel's Murder.

"We, the jury, find this defendant guilty, and fix his punishment at life imprisonment."

This is the verdict returned by the twelve men at Georgetown, Ky., who were selected to try Henry E. Youtsey, one of the principals in the murder of William Goebel.

When the jury was called Saturday morning Judge Cantrill said:

"Gentlemen, have you made a verdict?"

The foreman, B. M. McCabe, nodded his head.

"Pass up the papers to the clerk," said the judge.

The foreman passed them up and the clerk read the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty and fix his punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for life."

"Gentlemen, is that your verdict?" asked the judge.

"It is," was the reply.

"Gentlemen, you are now finally discharged and you can call on the trustees of the jury fund for your pay," said the judge to the jury.

The jury walked out and the trial was at an end.

The vote was unanimous that he was guilty, then the degree of punishment was fixed, but on this the jury was somewhat divided, but finally agreed on the life sentence.

Attorneys for the defense prepared a motion for an arrest of judgment and Judge Cantrill set the motion for hearing the second day of the February term, and therefore Youtsey will not be sentenced till next year, if then. In the judge's own motion he entered an order to have Youtsey moved to the Frankfort jail for safe keeping.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE

At Last Passes a New Election Law.

The two houses of the Kentucky legislature have passed the non-partisan election law agreed upon by the conference committee.

Following the non-partisan spirit of the new law, the Speaker called a joint session of the two houses for the purposes of filling a vacancy on the state election commission. The house adopted a resolution that the republicans be allowed to name the commissioner, and they will present the name of Judge A. M. Cochran, of Maysville, who will be unanimously elected. The new election law does not contain any emergency clause, and will not go into effect for ninety days. The legislature adjourned sine die Monday.

LAID TO REST.

Remains of Hon. Wm. L. Wilson Interred at Charlestown.

The remains of the late William L. Wilson, postmaster-general in President Cleveland's cabinet and president of Washington and Lee University of Lexington, Va., were laid to rest Friday at Charlestown, W. Va. The funeral train arrived from Lexington at noon. The cortege was composed of John Rowan Camp, Confederate Veterans; ministers of the gospel; Washington and Lee University Students; pall-bearers; the University faculty and trustees; the family; ex-President Cleveland and other distinguished visitors.

Picnic for Texas Cotton Pickers.

It is estimated that fully 7,000 negroes are employed in the cotton fields in North Texas, men, women and children from the depopulated towns. Higher prices are paid cotton pickers than ever in the history of the state. Seventy cents per 100 pounds is being paid.

Harmon for Bryan.

Hon. Judson Harmon, who supported Palmer and Buckner four years ago, has declared himself for Bryan. Judge Harmon was on the bench in Cincinnati for many years and succeeded Secretary Olney as attorney general in the cabinet of Grover Cleveland.

The Indian Trouble.

The Creek full-blood council has been joined by Choctaws, Chickasaws, Cherokees and Seminoles says a Denison, Tex., dispatch. They are armed with Winchesters. All declare to stand by the treaty of 1866 and will not take allotment of lands.

Italian Emigrants Coming.

William E. Howard, special immigrant inspector, United States treasury department, arrived in New Orleans. He is to take charge of the inspection and admission of 1,900 immigrants who will arrive in port in a few days. The government felt it necessary to send a special man direct from the Washington office to assist in this work.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

What is really needed is a breed of automobiles that won't scare at the cars or run off when they meet a horse.

Mr. Rockefeller says that the chief thing is to work, but not everybody can work the entire oil trade of the country.

There is a law in Munich, Germany, forbidding passionate kisses and embraces on the stage. An actor was lately fined for violating it, although he simply obeyed the author's directions.

The sultan has been twenty-five years on the throne of Turkey, and no doubt he looks back with regret to many opportunities he has over-looked for owing money.

The Washington young woman who married in order to secure a trip to the Paris Exposition had a delightful time abroad and is now ready for divorce, application for which has been duly filed in the proper court.

The society reporters of Europe are not doing their duty. It has been several weeks since they announced that Holland's pretty little queen was engaged.

The Park Board of Cincinnati, in 1872, paid $500 for a consignment of English sparrows. They would give double the sum now to get rid of them.

How the late R. L. Stevenson, peace to his ashes, would have delighted in that story of the Chicago bank president who received the head of his detective in a parcel by express. What an addition to the "New Arabian Nights" it would have made!

Every time a miser dies and leaves a fortune to be stolen or quarreled over, it becomes obvious that the miser neglected a royal good time and that strangers had it on his account. With half a million in the bank there is really no excuse for neglecting one's meals.

Insurance for bathers is the newest enterprise in the insurance line in England. The company which devised the scheme is placing penny-in-the-slot machines along the beach at all popular watering places. Upon dropping in a copper the bather receives a life insurance policy good for twenty-four hours.

There are now thirteen cable lines across the Atlantic in successful operation, yet the charge for sending messages remains what it has been for twenty years or more—twenty-five cents a word for commercial messages, and ten cents a word for press dispatches.

Chicago spends more money for park and boulevard construction and maintenance than any other city in the country. In the matter of expenditure for fire protection fourteen of the leading cities of the United States surpass her, and five cities spend more money for street cleaning than does the western metropolis.

Chinese historians estimate the population of their country, in the year 711 A. D., at only 50,000,000. In 1580 the accepted figure was 65,000,000; in 1792 it was 307,000,000. The present population is probably between 370,000,000 and 400,000,000.

The latest official report on lunacy in Ireland shows that mental disorders are still increasing there. The aggregate number of patients in the hospitals for mental diseases is the highest on record, whereas the estimated population is the lowest in recent years. The average number of the insane per 100,000 of the population has increased from 250 in 1880 to 460 in 1899. Of the deaths in hospitals for the insane, consumption is returned as the cause in 28.4 per cent.

It took a long time, but France has finally been just to herself. The Government has restored Colonel Picquart to his rank in the army. Of all the army officers this man showed himself the most courageous. He followed the lead of his conscience through all despite humiliation. At last the Republic proved itself strong enough to follow Colonel Picquart's example.

Florida, according to local papers, is becoming one of the great tobacco growing States, and the product has been pronounced in some respects equal to that of Cuba. Sumatra wrapper tobacco raised in Florida recently took the prize at the Paris Exposition in competition with samples of the same variety produced in many other States and countries. The same quality of tobacco is being raised in Decatur and other counties of southern Georgia, and its production is rapidly becoming a lucrative industry.

The American hog is on the wane. The most conservative figures of the Government statisticians show that there is a general decrease in the number of hogs now being fattened, as compared with the records of recent years. This decrease varies considerably in the different States, ranging all the way from one per cent, in some States to sixteen and eighteen per cent. in Missouri, Kentucky, Nebraska and Kansas. The only question of doubt is to the amount of the decrease and the approximations given above are believed to be very close to actual figures.

The value of bacteria in our food products is chiefly from the flavors which they produce. Among the many chemical compounds to which bacteria give rise there are many which have very strong tastes, much stronger than the taste of the material out of which they are made. When these are produced in food products they give to them a flavor. Though chemists and physiologists tell us that the flavor of food has nothing to do with its nutritious quality, there is no question that this flavor is a very important factor.

The Kaiser has abandoned the style of mustache which he made famous. This might seem in itself to be an unimportant matter, something that is only between the Emperor-King and his barber. But it is a serious matter for the Empire, or at least for Prussia, where loyalty is largely imitative. Nearly all officers, and many of the rank and file of the army, have cultivated the hair on their upper lips in the aggressive manner introduced by the head of the nation. Now all that will have to be changed. Instead of pointing up at either side the mustache will be allowed to droop naturally. It means a saving of time and care, and will afford to thousands the opportunity to do things from which they were debarred by tonsorial duties.

On the recommendation of the War Department the Agricultural Department is preparing an order setting apart as forest reserves the island of Rombolin, north of the Island of Panay; also the island of Paultaut which is one of the extreme group of the Jolo Islands. Officers of the army who have been looking over the islands have found that these are perhaps the richest in the world for rubber trees, and it is the intention of the Washington authorities to have the trees preserved and cared for, especially as some fears lately have been expressed that the rubber supply may become exhausted.

The New Zealand parliament at its latest session passed a law prescribing a minimum wage for children. No boy under eighteen may now be employed in a factory or work room at less than $1.25 a week, and no girl at less than $1. The object of the law is to correct a long-standing abuse of the apprentice system, unscrupulous employers in dressmaking and millinery establishments having been accustomed to take young girls into their employ, keep them for twelve months without paying them a cent in the way of wages, and then turn them adrift in order to take on fresh hands under the same conditions of non-payment of wages.

Paris has a novel provident society, intended to provide marriage dowries for all its members of both sexes. Monthly payments of ten cents for ten years insures a "dot" at marriage after that time of $75. Larger payments bring a corresponding increase of dowry. The grants, of course, are considerably in excess of the sums of the premiums accumulated at compound interest, the difference being made up out of the society's funds, derived from patrons' subscriptions, donations and legacies. The institution, founded in 1895, has prospered wonderfully, having a membership roll of girls and young men of 162,000. The present year of grace, being the fifth of the society's existence, has witnessed several departures from the association, members having claimed their dowries at the expiration of the prescribed time, and got married at once on the strength of them, frequently to other recipients of similar portions from the "Donation," as the society is called.

The London School Board is responsible for the education of a population more than double that of Denmark or Greece, larger than that of Scotland, and only exceeded slightly by that of Bavaria and Holland. The child population of London in need of elementary education is larger than the total population of any European city except Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Moscow and Vienna. It is more than double the population of Bristol, Dresden or Prague. The sum annually expended on elementary education in the metropolis is alone equal to the total national expenses of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, not to mention that of many other minor States of Europe.

Women are not vain, but they have an irresistible curiosity to see how they look whenever they have the opportunity, muses Judge; and the man who invented mirrors for bonnets will presently find himself a millionaire.

Royal Families Extinct.

There is no legitimate male descendant of any king of England who sat on the throne before the reign of George I. Of the twenty-five barons who set their hands to magna charta not a single male descendant remains. There is not a single barony by writ now held by a male of the family in which it was originally created. There are only about 300 noble or gentle families now holding the same land in male succession which their male ancestors held even so recently as the reign of King Henry VII.

With this issue the BANNER commences its ninth volume. Eight years have we toiled with the people of Chilton county, and as they progress so does the Banner progress. Each year has been a progressive one with us and we believe it has been the same with most of our friends. At the start we commenced with a four-page paper at one dollar per year; now we give you an eight-page paper for the same amount. From time to time we have made such improvements as were practicable, and are still desirous of giving the people of this county a better paper yet. We are deeply grateful for the handsome way in which the people have shown their appreciation of our efforts, and it will be our earnest duty to continue to meet their approval by renewed efforts to give them a county paper second to none.

In order to show our appreciation of the support we have received, we make a SPECIAL OFFER for the month of November only of 75 cents for a year's subscription to the BANNER paid in advance. New subscribers will get 52 papers for 75 cents, and old subscribers can renew their subscriptions at the same rate This is our offer to one and all—52 papers for 75 cents.

Draughts as an Education.

There is no game extant which so admirably combines educational and recreative features or which is in every way so well adapted for a popular and profitable amusement among refined and appreciative classes as draughts. Its influences are of an elevating character. It not only teaches, but practically enforces, the necessity of patience and perseverance, courage and courtesy, self reliance and self control. The game is also peculiarly and self evidently worthy of paternal encouragement, as a knowledge of its incomparable beauties will destroy the taste for demoralizing games of chance.—Scottish American.

Why He Read It.

"Have you read Borus' latest book, 'Boiled Brains?'"

"Yes."

"I thought you didn't like Borus' style."

"I don't."

"What did you read his book for?"

"Because I knew some blamed fool would be sure to ask me if I had read it."—Chicago Tribune.

The report of the census bureau so far as the State of Alabama is concerned, is eminently satisfactory, but we must confess to a feeling of disappointment that Chilton county has not made a better showing. It has been our belief for some time that the population of this county was close to 20,000, and we do not understand how the report only shows a population of 16,522. In 1890 Chilton contained 14,549 people, so that in the ten years we have only gained 1973, or about 13 per cent. In those same ten years a large portion of the county has been thickly settled with immigrants from all directions. There are but two incorporated towns in the county, Clanton with a population of 611, and Jemison with 245. Beat 9 was formed out of parts of Beats 1, 2, 3 and 4, so no comparison can be made as to the increase of those beats, except that the five beats together show an increase of only 256. This small number cannot be much more, if any, than the Thorsby colony contains, and would leave nothing to show for the natural increase. Beat 5 is the largest beat, with a population of 3076 an increase of only 51 over 1890; Beat 6 has 1529 an increase of 491; Beat 7 has 1500, an increase of 553; Beat 8 has 2396, an increase of 622, It has been frequently mentioned to us that there were many omissions by the census enumerators, and it certainly looks as if there must have been,

The State Normal School at Jacksonville is so well attended this session that the old college building which has served it for eighteen years is full to overflowing with young men and women from all over the State, so that it is necessary for the normal department to move into its new quarters, the beautiful $18,000 building recently donated by Calhoun county.

The Normal School has long been held in high esteem in all sections of Alabama as an educational institution which thoroughly prepares teachers for the public schools of the state. A catalogue may be had by addressing President C. W. Daugette—Anniston Evening Star.

As It Seemed to Her.

A little girl who was in the habit of tearing her dolls to pieces to see what was inside somewhat surprised her Sunday school teacher.

"What was Adam made of?" asked the teacher.

"The dust of the earth," glibly answered the child.

"What was Eve made of?"

After a moment's hesitation, "The sawdust of the earth."—New York Tribune.

IN THE HOLY LAND.

Jerusalem, August 28, 1900

I write you at last from the Holy centre of our faith as well as the second holy place to the millions of Moslums in the world. I wrote you last from Beyroute, so will resume at that point. We sailed at 6 on the 24th. At my cabin window, on the steerage deck, was a Greek priest who slept on the hatch; we called him "Sox," as he usually went shoeless, and also from the aroma we would always discover at our window and nothing more, save a pair of number 10 shoeless feet as "Sox" would stretch himself at nightfall at full length upon the hatch; those feet being forward and we aft, the aroma came easily in. "Sox" also had a way of getting up about 3 a.m., take out his Greek bible and read aloud until breakfast, snoring usually all the forepart of the night. There was yet another interesting crowd and they called him "Solyman, as he had six wives along and children" carding, and they and the children who lay in rows just beyond "Old Sox" would also add their quota to the music of the beautiful night, whenever they could catch "Old Sox" sleeping. I had my sweet revenge however, every next morning when I came out of the upper deck and saw the whole crowd in a row at the rail "feeding the fishes" while the children yelled lustily at their seeming heedless abandonment; while further on and on the next hatch was a Moslum wife of a Turkish officer dressed in splendid silks and smoking cigarettes. Why she should travel in so unpleasant a manner was more than I could understand, unless it was she did not wish to come in so close contact with us Christian dogs. She was indeed a real handsome woman, the first truly handsome Moslem woman I had seen, and strange or rather not strange to say she kept her face unveiled all the time, for she seemed quite conscious of her good looks, and her better half was not aboard either. These people had been with us on the ship seven days then, and we were quite familiar with the faces, though there were several hundred, and of all kinds that live under the sun. The great number of Christians on board and en route to Jerusalem was occasioned by the feast of the Virgin that they were going to celebrate in Jerusalem.

These people in their grotesque costumes and apparent indifference to all things modest reminds me of the story that the great explorer, Livingston, on receiving an invitation to an audience with a Central African King was sorely troubled that his clothing was in such sorry repair to appear before a king, but imagine his surprise when the king came out to greet him all dressed up in a paper collar that he had in some wise secured from the limits of civilization. We reached Joppa at 7 a.m. Went to hotel du Pare kept by a man from St. Louis, Mo A real nice place with a fine tropical park around it in which are kept monkeys and parrots, and where oranges and lemons are growing, and beautiful oleander trees filled the whole place with beauty and fragrance. We were soon in carriages, and saw the tomb of Dorcas, as also the house of Simon, the tanner, close by the sea, and the old vat in which the leather was tanned. Took train at 2 p.m. passing through the plain of Sharon. First stop was Lyda (ancient Lud) where Peter healed Eneas. This was the land of the Philistines, the inveterate enemies of the Jews. The mountains of Samaria are in sight off to the left Gezer me and

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by Clanton Drug Co., and D. I. Deramus, Verbena.

Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are filling graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Delia M. Strayer, Tully, Kans. "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything, in fact was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

"KRUMP'S KORNER."

The owner of this Korner has again returned to it, after wandering many days in foreign lands older, uglier and we trust a little wiser in some respects. He rejoices at his return, and would be glad to see all of the good and bad people of Chilton county. I only ask don't all of you come same day, as I have not got enough to go round for dinner. I have enough yarns however to make up shortness in grubb. Come to see me anyhow and we will talk it over, and no charge for the yarns. Please remember I keep all things the farmer needs, and I will sell him

IMPERIALISM'S MENACE.

WHY YOUNG MEN SHOULD FIGHT THE FORCES OF PLUTOCRACY.

Four More Years of McKinleyism Will Make It Difficult For Any One to Earn a Living Except by Grace of the Trusts, —Militarism a Danger Which Threatens

There is no element which has more at stake in the political contest this year than the young men, for upon their shoulders will fall the brunt of the heavy burdens which Republican policy, if approved at the November election, will impose upon the American people.

If a majority of the voters declare at the polls next month that imperialism is a good thing for this country, that commercialism based upon wars of conquest, expansion and colonial enterprises is hereafter to be the policy of the American republic, our young men must not forget that it is they who will largely pay the price of maintaining it. They will constitute the bulk of our armies of occupation, our colonial garrisons. They will be called upon to do the hard work, whose reward is merely the soldier's pittance, with the pension for disability resulting from wounds or disease. And all their labors and privations, they should remember, will not be so much for "the honor of the flag" and for the extension of American principles and institutions as for the benefit of those who will share none of the dangers involved in imperialism, but will greedily seize all the profits.

The young man who is shouting for imperialism now probably does not realize what may happen to him if "McKinley expansion" is permanently fastened upon the American people. For who can say that the war in the Philippines, expensive as it has already proved in blood and treasure, will be the end of our troubles in our Asiatic possessions? The time may also come when war with European powers will result from our colonial enterprises in the East, when the resources of this imperial republic will be taxed to their utmost, and our army and navy will be supplied with soldiers and sailors by conscription. Is there any young man anxious to be drafted into our military or naval establishment, carried thousands of miles from home and compelled to fight the battles not of his country, but of certain interests which use the flag as a "commercial asset?" This is the fate which imperialism may bring upon the youth of America, and to the average young man it should not be a pleasant one to contemplate. When the honor of the flag and the true interests of the country are at stake, our young men will always be ready to volunteer and fight. Are they willing to place themselves in a position in which their services can be demanded whenever our commercial imperialists determine to use force to promote trade expansion? That may be the result of the triumph of the imperial policy in the election next month. The young man who votes then may pass sentence upon himself if he gives his support to Republican policies.

Military and political imperialism is not the only danger, however, which menaces the young men of this country. They have also to take into consideration the startling development of trusts, which may be regarded as a form of industrial imperialism. The average young American has intelligence, industry and enterprise, qualities which in the past usually assured success. Since the trusts became the mighty force which they now are, the young man has unquestionably fewer opportunities, not only as an employe of a trust, but also to engage in business for himself. The trusts do not allow competition if they can prevent it, but destroy the humble rival with as little compunction as the more formidable competitor. In time the great combinations of capital will be in absolute control of the industries and resources of this country. Does any young man think this will be a good thing for him? Does he think it will be to his advantage to have all competition destroyed, with no opportunity for him to establish a business of his own? If he is satisfied to go through life with the trust yoke about his neck, to be a dependent and subordinate all of his days, he should support Republican policies. If he seeks a fair field and no favors he will not vote with the trust party. The syndicates which control the Government do not supply campaign funds from pure and unselfish motives. They are settling up now for favors received in the past, and contracting for more favors in the future. They want a "business administration"—that is, an administration which will help along their schemes at the expense of the general public. Is there any young man who has to make his own living who thinks a government created by the syndicates and operated for the benefit of syndicates is a good thing for him?

The man who has sons must realize the responsibility which rests upon him in this crisis. It would be an unnatural father, indeed, who would voluntarily bring upon his children the evils inseparable from imperialism, or condemn them to the servitude of the trusts. An equal responsibility rests upon young men in this struggle against trust domination and for the preservation of our free institutions. The young men realize that the contest this year is one in which their welfare is at stake. If the Republican party is given four years more of power, the trusts will become so strongly intrenched that it will require almost a revolution at the polls to dislodge them. Four years more of Republican rule will make imperialism the established policy of this country and may lead to disastrous wars with European powers. Four years more of Republican administration will make the party of McKinley and Hanna believe that it has a divine right to rule, and that the plain people of this country have no rights which the syndicates need respect. Four years more of McKinleyism will make it difficult for any young man to earn a living except by the grace of the trusts. It is high time, therefore, for young men to enlist with their fathers in the fight against the forces which now dominate this Government—against the forces of plutocracy, corruption and imperialism. It is their fight and should be fought to the finish.

The Republican Ice Trust.

Governor Roosevelt has devoted much of his time and attention on the stump (but not in his official capacity) to the ice trust, which he has declared to be "the worst and meanest of trusts." He will be interested to know that, according to the published admissions of Charles W. Morse, President of the American Ice Company, all the officers and directors and ninety-three per cent. of the stockholders are Republicans! Vice-President W. H. Geishenen, of the ice trust directory, has been said to be a Democrat, but "even Mr. Geishenen," Mr. Morse says, "voted for McKinley in 1896." Mr. Morse probably resents the attacks by Roosevelt upon a trust which is as strictly Republican and orthodox McKinleyite as all the other trusts, which was organized and flourishes under Republican laws, under a solidly Republican State and National Administration, and which, no doubt, has done "the right thing" for the Hanna corruption fund.

Dangerous to the People.

All readers of history know how dangerous to the liberties of the people, how burdensome and what an invitation to national aggressiveness, a big regular army is. And the tendency is to constantly increase the force. The principle or policy once admitted the gradual increase is easy enough. And the army once authorized it must be recruited to its strength by every means possible. If voluntary enlistments fail to accomplish the end, conscription, or the general imposition of military duty upon all males between certain ages, must be resorted to. It is idle to say that there need be no fear of conscription. If we must have an army we must have it, and if young men won't volunteer they will be forced to serve —that's inevitable.—Houston (Texas) Post.

An Ideal Role For Hanna.

If the time should ever come, which heaven forbid! when the interests of any portion of our people were believed to require a little more bending of the Constitution in order, say, to keep some man in the Presidency for life, so that these elections so disturbing to business might be avoided, Mr. Hanna would be an ideal man to manage the campaign. The manager who can protest with a straight face that there is no possible political issue involved in the Porto Rican law, or in the bloody conquest of the Philippines, would be just the one to tell the country that a law, or an edict, making some future indispensable personage President for life, was no possible occasion for a difference of opinion.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The Constitution and the Flag.

If the Constitution does not follow the flag, what does the flag symbolize when the Constitution stops and the flag advances alone? Not the republic, for the Constitution is the bond and seal of the republic—tear off the Constitution and the republic, with its flag, sinks into fragments. Not certainly the Government, for the Government is but the Constitution executed. The flag is only the emblem of the Government as the Government is only the embodiment of the Constitution. The flag is the sign, the Constitution is the thing signified. Let us have done with the treasonable folly of trying to sever them. The flag without the Constitution—what would it be? The phantom flag of a phantom republic!—Philadelphia Record.

Cannot Hide the Facts.

It takes a good deal of nerve for the nominee of the Republican party to throw out of his message the suggestion of prohibitory or penal legislation against trusts.

The Republicans have had control of all branches of the Government and yet the President is not able to point to a single action by his party looking to the repressing or restricting of the trusts. There has been absolutely no move of the Republicans which, by the widest stretch of the imagination, could be construed into a desire to in any way hamper the trusts.

The trusts are for the Republican candidate and the Republican party, and the Republican party and the Republican candidate are for the trusts. No amount of high sounding phrasing can hide these two facts.

Two Gigantic Evils.

Imperialism is a great issue, but side by side with it stands the issue of the trusts. As imperialism is the foe of the liberty traditions of the republic the trust power is the foe to the home and to individual endeavor. The commercial travelers will vote against usurpation and capitalistic greed, whatever they may say. They are thinking and the fruit of their thought will ripen at the ballot box.

A Bulldozing Bluff.

The declaration of manufacturing concerns—usually the beneficiaries of big tariff bounties—that they will "suspend if Bryan is elected," is the meanest kind of political intimidation. Most of these would-be bulldozers are selling goods cheaper to foreigners than to home consumers, and are simply trying to preserve their license to rob.

M'KINLEY AND TRUSTS.

NO ACTION TAKEN BY HIM TO SUPPRESS THEM.

Four Years as Governor and Four as President—Correspondence of Congressman Gaines, of Tennessee, With Attorney-General Frank Monnett, of Ohio.

During the four years McKinley was Governor of Ohio not a single law was passed against trusts and no prosecutions were instituted. Although Mr. McKinley has been President almost four years not a single law against trusts has been passed and the administration has failed to enforce the anti-trust law of 1890, having filed but three suits during the four years, although trusts have increased a hundred-fold during that time. Congressman John W. Gaines, of Tennessee, who attended the National Convention of the Association of Democratic Clubs in Chicago, before leaving for home discussed this important fact. He said:

"Mr. McKinley was four years Governor of the trust-ridden State of Ohio, yet during his entire administration not one law was passed against trusts. This is proven by the following correspondence, which I will show you:

"Washington, June 22, 1900.

"The Hon. Frank Monnett, Columbus, Ohio:

"'Was any anti-trust law enacted while McKinley was Governor of Ohio?

"'JOHN W. GAINES.'

"Here is the reply of the same date:

"'None and no prosecutions instituted.

"'FRANK F. S. MONNETT.'

"General Monnett, you remember, was four years Attorney-General of Ohio, and until the Republicans turned him out, and that, too, without indorsing his brilliant record in fighting trusts. The Democrats did indorse his record, however, in fighting trusts but went down in defeat. The Legislature adjourned in Ohio last spring after refusing, over the protests of the Democrats, to pass any anti-trust legislation, General Monnett saying that every anti-trust resolution offered this winter was voted down at the dictation of the bosses at Washington and the trust magnates of New York.

"'I cannot believe that we (the Republican party) will escape punishment, and I believe it will come this fall. Why should not the party be punished when the men who control its actions disregard the will of the people. Although the Russell bill was bill No. 10, it was side-tracked by the lobbyists and held back until near the adjournment and then, over the protest of some of the best men of the party and almost all of the Democratic members, it was defeated. This was a repudiation of the party platform and the sentiment of the party.'

"In addition to this failure of the Republican party to keep its promises as to State anti-trust laws, over the protests of the Democrats in the United States Senate, the Republicans of that body, as a unite, refused to enact any anti-trust legislation, although the House had sent them a bill for which every Democrat voted, while eight Republicans voted against it. The Republicans smothered this bill and prevented its passage by referring it to the Republican Judiciary Committee, where it now sleeps and will continue to sleep until the Democrats get in power.

"Why, do you know that Mr. McKinley has been President nearly four years and no anti-trust laws have been passed, and in addition to that, he and his Attorney-General, Mr. Griggs, have failed to enforce the anti-trust act of 1890, having filed only three suits during this administration against trusts, although trusts have increased a hundred-fold during this administration.

"This clearly shows, to my mind, that the Republican party has refused and failed as a party, and the Republican officials, too, to enforce the law, to kill the goose that lays the boodle egg, and that for the people to crush trusts, we must turn the Democrats into power. We refer with pride to the record of the Democrats in Texas, who crushed, with a State and anti-trust law, a foreign trust oil concern, and to the present fight of the Democrats in Nebraska against trusts, as well as to the great pipe case recently decided by the Supreme Court of the United States that was begun in my own State by Democratic officials and prosecuted successfully. I believe that the people will place the Democrats in power, headed by Bryan, who is a deadly enemy of monopoly, trusts and combines and is the unimpeachable and courageous friend of the masses."

We Need Idealism.

The charge is brought against Mr. Bryan that he is an "idealist." It is meant to be a reproach. But if Mr. Bryan is an idealist he comes along just at the right time. What the country is suffering from at this moment is the reign of commercialism; what it needs is more idealism. Let us get back to the ideal of constitutional rights for all people under the stars and stripes; the ideal of liberation, not subjugation; the ideal of a world of republics, not satrapies or subject colonies. If Mr. Bryan is an idealist he is the man for the crisis.—Boston Post.

A Warning.

Some of the Republican spellbinders admit that there are trusts, but say their party is the one to destroy them. The voter who has a good memory will recall that in the Harrison campaign of 1888 the Republican party admitted that the tariff needed revising and that they would do it themselves. And they did. They made it higher.—Rochester (N. Y.) Herald.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: An Exile From Home—Perils That Beset the Young Man Seeking Fortune—Dangers and Temptations That Surround Him.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dr. Talmage stood in London to occupy the famous Wesley pulpit in the City Road chapel, where he preached several times before, always receiving hearty welcome. Thence he went to Ireland, preaching in Belfast and Dublin. The discourse he has sent this week describes the behavior of a young man away from home and suggests practical lessons for people of every age and class. The text is Daniel i. 5, "And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat and of the wine which he drank, so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king."

My text opens the door of a college in Babylon and introduces you to a young student seventeen years of age, Daniel by name. Be not surprised if in the college you find many hilarities. Put a hundred young men together and they are sure to have a good time. There is no harm in that. God does not write out the trees and the grass, and the blossoms, in dull prose. The old robin does not sit moping in the nest because of the chirpings and the lively adventures of the fledglings that have just begun to fly. Do not come into an orchard looking for winter apples on a May morning.

But Daniel of our text is far from being gay. What oppressive thoughts must have come over him as he remembered that he was a captive in a strange land! The music that came into his study window was not the song of Zion, but the sound of flute, sackbut and dulcimer in the worship of the heathen god. Moreover, he had no hope of ever getting back home again, and meeting those who had missed him long and missed him butterly, wondering if he were still alive and finding many a luxury tasteless because they did not know but Daniel might be lacking bread.

When you and I were in school or college and the vacation approached, we were full of bright anticipation, and we could not study the last night. The lexicon and the philosophical apparatus were transparent, so we could see right through them into the meadows and the orchards. Not so with poor Daniel. He did not know that he should ever escape from captivity, or, escaping, he did not know but when he got home the loved ones would be dead and he would go, wandering and weeping, among the sepulchers of his fathers. Besides that, the king tried to make him forget his home and forget his country and for that purpose actually changed his name. The king wanted him to be a prodigy in personal appearance, and so he ordered meat and wine sent from his own table to Daniel, but Daniel refuses all this and puts himself upon the humblest diet, the poorest of all herbs, called pulse, and plain water. His attendants cry out against this and tell him he will perish under such a diet. "No," he says; "you try us for ten days, and if at the end of that time we are not full checked and robust as any it will be surprising." Ten days pass along, and the students come up for examination, and all declare that none are so ruddy and robust as Daniel and his fellow captives. The days of industrious pupilage and the years pass by, and the day of graduation has come, and Daniel gets his diploma, signed by the king and reading as follows: "In all matters of wisdom and understanding that the king inquired of them he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm." And so Daniel took the first honor, and here the story ends, for Daniel, the student, hereafter will be Daniel, the prime minister.

The next thought suggested to me by this subject is that young men may be carried into captivity by their enemies. There is a captivity more galling than the one in which Daniel was transported. It is the captivity of evil habit. Men do not go into that wittingly. Slyly and imperceptibly are the chains forged upon them, and one day they wake up to find themselves away down in Babylon. Cyrus afterward consented that some of his captives should return, and 50,000 of them accepted the opportunity. But tell me what evil habit ever consented to let a man go. Ten plagues made Pharaoh consent to the departure of God's people, but tell me what Pharaoh of evil habit ever cheerfully consented to let any of its victims go. Men talk of evil habits as though they were light and trivial, but they are scorpion whips that tear the flesh; they are spikes more bloody than the path of a Brahman; they are the sepulchers in which millions are burned alive. The young are in more peril because they are unsuspecting. The lions are asleep in their soul, and their power is not suspected. The time when a ship's company makes mutiny is when the watchman is off his guard. When a spider meets a fly, it does not say, "Go down with me to the place where I murder insects." No; it says, "Come and take a bright morning walk with me on this suspension bridge of glittering gossamer." Oh, there is a difference between the sparkle of a serpent's eye and the crush of its slimy folds! There is a difference between the bear's paw toying with a kid and the crackling of the bones in the terrible hug. Pike's peak looks beautiful in the distance, but ask the starved travelers by the roadside what they think of Pike's peak. Are there those around whom suspicious companions are gathering? Do their jests and their entertainments make the hours go blithely by when you are with them? Have you taken a sip from their cup of sin or gone with them in one path of unrighteousness? Turn back.

From Babylon they came, and to Babylon they would carry you. If so many plague stricken men would like to enter your companionship before any one is allowed to pass into the intimacy of your heart put on them severest quarantine.

My subject also impresses me with the fact that early impressions are almost ineffaceable. Daniel had a religious bringing up. From the good meaning of his name I know he had pious parentage. But as soon as he comes into the possession of the king his name is changed, all his surroundings are changed, and now, you say, will begin the demoralization of his character. Before his name was Daniel, which means "God my judge;" now his name is to be Belteshazzar, which means "the treasurer of the god Bel." Now you expect to see him overthrown amid all these changed circumstances. Oh, no! Daniel started right, and he keeps on right. When I find what Daniel is in Jerusalem I am not surprised to find what he is in Babylon.

I wish I could write upon all parents' hearts the fact that early impressions are well nigh ineffaceable. When I see Joseph, a pious lad, in the house of his father, Jacob, I am not surprised to see him acting so nobly down in Egypt.

When I find Samuel, a pious lad, in the house of his mother, Hannah, I am not surprised that he gives a terrible smiting to idolatry as soon as he comes to manhood. David planned the temple at Jerusalem and gathered the materials for its building, but Solomon, the son, came and put up the structure, and that goes on in all ages. The father plans the character of the child and its destiny for time and eternity, then the son completes the structure.

You might as well put down a foundation ten feet by five and expect to rear on it a great cathedral as to put down a contracted character in a child's soul and yet rear upon it something extensively grand and extensively useful.

Let me say to those Christian parents who are doing their best in the education of their children: Take good heart. Your sons this morning may be far away from you and in a distant city, but God, to whom you dedicated them, will look after them. The God of Daniel will take care of them far away in Babylon. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." He may wander away for awhile and fall into sin and break your heart, but before he is done with his life, you, having commended him to God, he will come back again, for I put the emphasis in the right place and on the word "old" when I repeat that passage and say, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Are you fond of pictures? Here is one drawn by Solomon. "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it moveth itself aright in the cup. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

"Do you know what you are doing?" said a mother who had broken into a restaurant, the door locked against her, her son inside. She came up to the counter and saw the man of the restaurant mingling the intoxicating cup for her own son. She said to the man behind the counter, "Do you know what you are doing?" "No," said he; "I don't." Says she, "You are fattening graveyards."

I was told at Des Moines of a train of cars going through a very stormy night over one of the western prairies. The young man who was present told us the story. In the night there was a little child in the sleeping car fretful and worrying and crying hour after hour. A man on the opposite side of the car lost his patience and said, "Either make that child shut up or take it to its mother!" Then another man on the opposite side of the sleeping car, a man with a broken heart, pushed back the curtain and looked out and said, "Young man, that child's mother is dead in the baggage car, and the little thing is wailing for her." Then the man who had committed the affront rose and offered his services for the night and took care of the child until the morning, and all the passengers in the car were broken down with emotion.

Oh, if the cry of one child could arouse so many sympathies, what ought to be the effect of the ten thousand voiced shriek of orphanage and widowhood from the inebriate's grave! God save this country from the perils of strong drink!

My subject also impresses me with the beauty of youthful character remaining incorrupt away from home. If Daniel had plunged into every wickedness of the city of Babylon the old folks at home would never have heard of it. If he had gone through all the rounds of iniquity, it would have cast no shadow on his early home. There were no telegraphs, there were no railroads. But Daniel knew that God's eye was on him.

That was enough. There are young men not so good away from home as at home. Frederick tending his father's sheep among the hills or thrashing rye in the barn is different perhaps from Frederick on the Stock Exchange. Instead of the retiring disposition there is bold effrontery. Instead of an obliging spirit there is perhaps oppressive selfishness.

Instead of open handed charity there is tight fisted stinginess. Instead of reasonable hours there is midnight revel. I speak to many young men on this matter—you who may have left your father's house and others who, though still under the parental roof, are looking forward to the time when you will go forth to conflict, alone in this world, with its temptations and its sorrows, and when you will build up your own character. Oh, that the God of Daniel might be with you in Babylon!

I think the most thrilling passage of a young man's life is when he leaves home to make his fortune. The novelty and the romance of the thing may keep him from any keen sorrow, but the old people who have seen the destruction of so many who have started with high hope cannot help but be anxious. As long as he was in his father's house his waywardness was kindly chided, and although sometimes he thought the restraint rather bitter and rather severe in his calmer moments, he acknowledged it was salutary and righteous. Through the influence of metropolitan friends the father has obtained a situation for his son in the city. The comrades of the young man come the night before his departure to bid farewell to the adventurer. The morning of his going away he walks around the place to take a last look at things, perhaps comes upon some object that starts a tear, some old familiar place, but no one sees the tear. The trunk is put upon the wagon, the young man is off for the city. He is set down amid excitements and amid associates who are not overcareful about their words and thoughts and actions. Morning comes. No family altar. Sabbath comes. No rural quiet. The sanctuary comes, but all the faces are strange, and no one cares whether he comes to church or does not come. On his way from the store he sees a placard announcing a rare and a vicious amusement. He has no greeting at the door of the boarding house. He has no appetite for the food. No one cares whether he eats or does not eat. Rather he would not eat. It is cheaper. After the tea he goes into the parlor, takes up a book, finds it dull, no sister to look over it with him. Goes upstairs to his room in the third story, finds it cold and uninviting, and in despair he rushes out, caring for nothing but to get something to make him stop thinking. He is caught in the first whirl of sin. He has started out on the dark sea where the gleam of the joy is the flashing of the pit and the laughter is the creaking of the gate of the lost.

Oh, how many graves there are in the country churchyard which, if they could speak, would tell of young men who went off with high hopes and came back blasted and crushed to disgrace the sepulcher of their fathers.

And yet this exodus must go on. As from distant hills the rivers are poured down through tunnels to slake the thirst of our great cities, so from distant country places the streams of incorrupt population must pour down to purify our great cities. To-morrow morning on all the thoroughfares, in every steamboat and in every rail car will be young men going forth to seek their fortunes in our great towns. O Lord God of Daniel, help them to be as faithful in Babylon as they were at Jerusalem! Forget not, O my young friend, in the great seaports the moral and religious principles inculcated by parental solicitude, and if to-day seated in the house of God you feel the advantage of early Christian culture forget not those to whom you are most indebted and pray God that as old age comes upon them and the shadow of death the hope of heaven may beam through the darkness. God forbid that any of us through our misconduct should bring disgrace upon a father's name or prove recreant to the love of a mother. The dramatist made no exaggeration when he exclaimed, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!" Oh, that God would help you as parents and as young people to take to heart the lessons of this important subject, and if we shall learn that there is danger of being carried into captivity and that early impressions are almost ineffaceable and that there is something beautiful in Christian sobriety and that there is great attractiveness in piety away from home, then it will be to you and to me a matter of everlasting congratulation that we considered how Daniel behaved when he became a college student at Babylon.

The Beam and The Mote.

It is difficult to see [illegible] really are. Yet [illegible] enough we can form [illegible] conception of their character [illegible] abilities. It is still more [illegible] ourselves as we are. Probably [illegible] one among us could realize [illegible] moment, exactly how [illegible] others, he would be great[illegible] The character that we think [illegible] the character which others [illegible] possess, and the character [illegible] really possess, may be three [illegible] ent things. It should be the [illegible] to harm mize them with [illegible] with a fourth, the character [illegible] ought to possess. The lesson [illegible] that it is almost impossible [illegible] stand each other perfectly [illegible] case of intimate friends, should [illegible] a profound humility. How [illegible] that we are credited with being [illegible] ter than we are, with having [illegible] and a degree of power, wisdom [illegible] pecially, nobility of character [illegible] our own hearts we know that we [illegible] not attained. It is something [illegible] grateful for when we know [illegible] seem to others to illustrate [illegible] lence, because it encourages [illegible] them to believe that we [illegible] seeing, and if we honestly try [illegible] as fully as they think we [illegible] ideals, no hypocrisy is involved [illegible] know, even if they do not, how [illegible] we often fall of being what we [illegible] posed to be. No one can [illegible] without being humbled, and with this lesson of humility must be joined the son of charity. What is true of [illegible] true of others. If we need some allowance for our shortcomings, if we [illegible] as truly better, very often, than we seem to be, as we also sometimes are worse than we seem to be, so are our friends. The knowledge of our own weaknesses and faults should make us very gentle in judging them, and, if we suspect sometimes that they may not be as wholly admirable as they seem, we know for a surety that they often are far more deserving of love, trust and even admiration than they appear.

Mystery in God's Dealings.

When we are oppressed by the impossibility of fathoming God's dealings with us and are face to face with mystery, as we sometimes stand face to face with a fog, we should remind ourselves that if there were no mystery in God's dealings with us, we should very soon cease to be able to trust him. It is the element of mystery in every human character which supplies a large part of its attractiveness. You may know your friend never so well, yet you do not know him wholly. You may have summoned and winnowed him for years. You may think that every operation of his mind and every reason for his conduct are perfectly understood by you, and doubtless in the main you are correct. Yet every now and then he surprises you by some unforeseen utterance or action, revealing elements in his nature which you have at least imperfectly comprehended. It is because of this elusiveness, this unfathomableness, this mystery, which is an unfailing element of every human character, that we do not become unendurably weary of one another; and if this be true of each of us within our finite and limited capabilities and natures, how much more true it must be of God.

Prayers of Thomas A. Kempis.

I beseech Thee, my most gracious God, preserve me from the cares of this life lest I should be too much entangled therein; and from the many necessities of the body, lest I should be ensnared by pleasure; and from whatsoever is an obstacle to the soul, lest, broken with troubles, I should be overthrown. Amen.

O Thou, who hast made the earth so fair and shaped our eyes that we might see its beauty and our ears that we might hear its melody, we thank thee for the gift of life and for thy presence that is life's abiding happiness and hope. Fix our heart on heavenly things; but let us not despise the earth which thou hast made our dwelling place. In thy love let it be to us the house of God, the very gate of heaven. Let thy holy will be done in us from day to day. Help us to be patient in life's trials, strong in its temptations, immovable in faith and courage, ever looking for the tokens of thy presence and the hope of thine appearing. For thou art not far off, but near, O thou our spirit's Life and Joy; and thou hast given us power to become thy children through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Wealth Worthy of Ambition.

Blessed secret! to learn how to do without things. We need to learn this secret of full life in Christ in spite of minor deprivations, because we cannot have all the things that we want—even rich men have been known to want more things—and some of us have to do without things which, on the plane of physical life, are quite desirable. If we can gain wealth it is well to have it, if we receive it as coming from God and use it for His glory; but if we do not possess this wealth, which is the lowest wealth in the gift of God, we are exhorted to earnestly covet the best gift—that wealth of heart and soul which lies open for the taking to every follower of Christ. Here is wealth worthy of ambition; wealth which is offered freely and without stint; the unsearchable riches of Christ, which will make us wealthy to all eternity. Christ never asks us to do without this wealth, the true riches, but He says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."—Advance.

The very essence of salvation is to win the will to righteousness. When that is accomplished the work is virtually done. The work of Christ then is to do his will, is to win the will to righteousness.—Rev. Dr. Crane.

All Should Swim.

The remarkable number of deaths by drowning proves that too many persons venture into waters without knowing how to swim. About 40 per cent of those drowned so far this summer did not have that knowledge. The Beam and The Mote.

It is difficult to see others as they are. Yet by taking thought we can form a fairly accurate opinion of their characters and their lives. It is still more difficult to see ourselves as we are. Probably if any man or woman could realize, if only for a brief moment, how he appears to others he would be greatly surprised. The character that we think we possess, the character which others think we possess, and the character which we really are—these very different things. It should be the aim of life to bring the two with each other and to God, the character which we possess. The lesson of the fact is almost impossible to understand perfectly, even in the case of our dearest friends, should promote profound humility. How often it is found combined with being far better than we think, is a quality of greater power, wisdom and, especially, quality of character, which in our hearts we know that we have attained. It is something to be glad for when we know that we are to others in all respects high excellence of circumstances and helps we know that we are what we could if we honestly try to realize, only as they think we realize, our own hypocrisy is involved. But we even if they do not, how pitifully often fail of being what we are supposed to be. No one can realize this without being humbled, and with this sense of humility must be joined a lessening of self-esteem. What is true of us is true of others. All Should Swim.

The remarkable number of deaths by drowning proves that too many persons venture into waters without knowing how to swim. About 80 per cent of those drowned so far this summer did not have that knowledge. This is all the more wonderful when knowledge of swimming may so easily be had. A person of average physique should be able to swim several hundred feet after a dozen lessons. Even weaklings may be taught to swim 25 feet or more without exhausting themselves. There are dangerous places on the ocean beach, where the sea pull or undertow will sometimes overpower the strongest swimmer. Even on the borders of the great lakes there is at times a strong and dangerous undertow. But a knowledge of swimming is within the reach of all.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 28.

Subject: The Prodigal Son. Luke xv., 11-24 — Golden Text: Luke xv., 18—Memory Verses, 20-24 — Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

11 "A certain man." The simple, unpretentious beginning of the most beautiful of all the parables. The man is here the image of God the Father. "Two sons." Both are Jews. The idea that the elder son represents the Jews, and the younger the Gentiles is foreign to the parable, but in character the two sons may be said to be representative of mankind, for we have in them examples of two great phases of alienation from God—the elder is blinded by his self-righteousness, the younger degraded by his unrighteousness.

12 "The younger." He represents openly wicked persons, such as the publicans and sinners. He also represents the thoughtless, careless youth. "Give me the portion of goods." This will appear plain when it is considered that it has been a custom in the East for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during the father's lifetime. "He divided—his living." The yielding to the request strikingly sets forth the permission of free-will to man, and also the fact of God's bestowing many gifts upon even the unthankful and disobedient.

13 "Not many days." He had decided upon his course and hastened to be gone. "Gathered all together." Sinners that go astray from God venture their all. "Took his journey." He was weary of his father's government and desired greater liberty. As soon as the bridle of restraining grace is taken off we are soon gone. The journey the prodigal took represents the sinner in his departure from God. He went into a "far country," far from truth and virtue. "Wasted his substance." So sinners waste the gifts God has given them. Time, talents, energies, life, all wasted. "With riotous living." In verse 20 we see how low he fell. His body, mind and soul were debased and ruined.

14 "Spent all." He did not stop until his last dollar was gone. His passions reigned. This represents the sinner who has thrown away the mercy, favor and love of God, and has wilfully rejected the salvation of Christ. "A mighty famine." The soul living at a distance from God, and shut out from intercourse with Him, will very soon feel its own utter emptiness. A mighty famine will follow. "In want." Real want is soul want. The prodigal now felt the effects of his dissipated course. The steps downward were "apostasy, profligacy, penalty." See Prov. 24:34.

15. "Joined himself to a citizen." The same wicked life that before was represented by riotous living is here represented by servile living, for sinners are perfect slaves. The devil is the citizen of that country; he is both in city and country. "To feed swine." This was doubly degrading, and especially so to a Jew.

16. "Would fain have been filled with the husks." (R. V.) The husks were not the pods of some other fruit, but "the fruit of the carob-tree, used for feeding swine." He was driven to the extremity of trying to satisfy his hunger with the food that was fit only for swine. So sinners endeavor to satisfy the soul with earthly and sensual delights. "No man gave unto him." Those whom he had called his friends now deserted him. They had taken his money and then cast him aside. Satan's agents do the same to-day. The saloonkeeper will rob a man of his money, health and character, and then kick him out of the back door to die.

17. "He came to himself." Sin dethrones the reason. A state of sin is a state of folly and madness, but the madness is in the heart. Eccl. 9:3. His lack of reason is seen, 1. In that he called for his money. 2. When he left home. 3. When he went to live with harlots. 4. When he undertook to satisfy his hunger with swine's food. But he now begins to sense his condition and see his folly. Those who have once known the Lord cannot derive satisfaction from the world. "Bread enough and to spare." The lowest in my father's house has bread to give to the poor. God's people are abundantly supplied with good things. "I perish with hunger." Sinners will not come to Christ until they see themselves ready to perish.

18. "I will arise." He had left home by his own free will, and he must return in the same way. God compels no one to do right. "And go." Following the decision there must be an effort put forth. In returning to God there is something to do. "I have sinned." The first thing to do is to make a full confession of our sins. 1 John 1:9; Job 33:27, 28. "Against heaven." Against God. Every sin is a sin against God. "And before thee." He had also sinned against his earthly father. It is ever a token of the sincerity of repentance when one views even the sins committed against others as transgressions against God.

19. "No more worthy." He is ready to humble himself. He knows that in justice his father could shut the door against him; he will plead for mercy only.

20. "He arose." He immediately did all of these things that he had decided upon. "His father saw him." So God knows when we start toward Him. Sin had made the distance great, but as soon as the lost one starts to return the father had compassion. "And ran," etc. This represents the readiness with which God receives returning sinners.

21. "I have sinned." He makes this confession personal; he abases himself. This is always the result of true repentance. "And am no more worthy." All true penitents feel their unworthiness. They are conscious that they deserve nothing but death, and their only hope is in the mercy of Christ.

22. "But the father." The father did not wait until he had finished his confession. In this we see the great affection of the father and his willingness to forgive. "Said to his servants." The father's joy is full, and he instantly issued orders to celebrate his return. "Bring forth quickly." (R. V.) Let us show at once by our actions that the wanderer is fully reinstated. "Put a ring on his hand." A sign of affection and that he was a free man. There is no license given here to adorn the body, as some have vainly tried to show. The true standard for such adorning is given by Paul and Peter. 1 Tim. 2:9, 10; 1 Pet. 3:3, 4.

23. "Be merry." Be joyful and happy. The Bible gives the children of God license to shout for joy. When Christ restores the wanderer there is general rejoicing, and he is immediately treated as a son. The best that God has is given him, and the past is entirely blotted out.

24. "Was dead." "Lost to all good, given up to all evil." "Is alive again." Here was special cause for rejoicing. Who would not be partaker of this joy?

Eleven British and Twenty Boers Killed.

Former Governor W. P. Dillingham was elected United States Senator by the Vermont Legislature a few days ago.

POWERFUL IN EMPIRE.

The Man Who Dared to Disobey a Railroad President.

The great soldier is the man who, as a subordinate, on all ordinary occasions obeys orders implicitly, but who, when the great emergency arrives, knows that, to save the day and his country, he must obey. He breaks his orders on his own responsibility, knowing that the result and the future will justify him. Failure would be his ruin. Success may immortalize him. And if he is great, he knows that he shall succeed. One of the members of the Russian imperial cabinet, Monsieur Witte, minister of finance, is one of the most powerful and important men in the empire. Highly esteemed and trusted by the emperor, he is respected and honored by the representatives of foreign powers. Yet Monsieur Witte is of humble origin—a fact which, in Russia, where every circumstance favors the man of noble blood above the plebeian, has counted for much against him. Monsieur Witte, in his early life, after an imperfect education, was made station-master at a small and unimportant railway station in southern Russia. The war between Russia and Turkey arose, and hundreds of thousands of soldiers had to be transported into Roumania and Bulgaria. One day Monsieur Witte, in his station, received telegraphic instructions to make certain arrangements in connection with the passage of these troops along the line. In Russia orders from a high source, connected with the affairs of the government, are terrible things, not to be disobeyed. But this young man saw that obedience in the present instance would create great confusion, if not positive disaster. His superiors had told him to do the wrong thing. He ventured to violate his instructions, and to do the right thing. The president of the railway summoned the young man before him, and asked why he had presumed to disobey his telegraphic orders in a matter of such vast consequence. Monsieur Witte told him why, and convinced him that he, the station-master, was right, and that the orders were wrong. Instead of removing or punishing him, the chief of the road advanced him. Afterward this railway president, Monsieur Wichnegdradski, was called to St. Petersburg to assume a place in the imperial cabinet. Remembering the man who had so successfully disobeyed, he sent for him and gave him a post under him. After that Monsieur Witte's advancement was rapid, and he rose to occupy the highest "business" position in the empire—that of minister of finance.—Youths' Companion.

Big Mining Contract.

The largest contract ever let by a mining company in the state of Colorado for the delivery of ore to reduction works or smelters was made last week when Dudley M. Gray of Cripple Creek closed a contract with the Independence mine management for the delivery of 200 tons of ore per day from that mine continuously for a period of five years. The work of breaking ore at the mine for transfer under the terms of the contract agreement with the reduction firm has been begun. Outside of the immense magnitude of the contract in the matter of the ore tonnage which it involves for the whole period stated, it also represents the greatest amount of value in ore production for any like period of time which has ever been made from any exclusively gold-producing claim containing the same amount of productive territory within its prescribed limits.

Automobile Storage Rooms.

The coming fashionable apartment house will have storage rooms for automobiles. When houses were fitted up with bicycle storage rooms it was regarded as something decidedly "modern." A new apartment house in New York is being planned with automobile storage rooms. The owner of the house intends to rent apartments only to persons who are wealthy enough to own automobiles. Every arrangement will be provided for charging storage batteries, and this will necessitate the keeping of a staff of mechanics to clean, oil, repair and adjust the motor machinery of the self-goers. In some cities the liverymen have practically boycotted the automobile, claiming the electric vehicles injures their trade.

Libby's Food Products at the Paris Exposition.

The Grand Prix d'honneur and two gold medals have been awarded by the International Jury of Awards at the Paris Exposition, to Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, for the purity, excellence and superiority of their Canned Foods. Here in America, the "Libby" Brand has always been recognized as typical of the highest standard of excellence attained in the preservation of Meats, and it is a noticeable fact that the products of Libby, McNeill & Libby have received the highest awards at every Exposition held in the United States during the past two decades.

A Cemetery for Dogs.

In Paris there has recently been opened a special cemetery for dogs where the deceased canines can be buried with as much pomp and be marked by as pretentious a headstone as their late masters can afford. Along the front of the cemetery grounds a handsome stone wall has been erected, and within the entrance on either side are the house of the concierge and the office. Directly in front of one entering is a handsome marble monument. A heavy relief in the stone represents the dog bearing a child on his back, and commemorates the saving of a little one lost in the snow of St. Bernard pass whom a St. Bernard dog found and brought to a safe refuge.

Tortoise Traveled.

A tortoise story comes from Center Bridge, Bucks county. Edward Johnson was walking over his farm the other day, when he picked up a land tortoise bearing the initials of his father, D. R. Johnson, and the date 1846. These initials were cut on the tortoise when Mr. Johnson's father, who has been dead several years, was a boy of seventeen, making the tortoise over fifty-four years old. It has been picked up on the farm several times by members of the family, but had been missing for a number of years. The farm has been in the possession of the Johnson family for over a century.—Philadelphia Record.

Puncturless Tires.

A German scientist has patented what he asserts to be a puncture proof tire filling. The filling is a jelly made of glue. Glycerine is added to prevent hardening, and an antiseptic preparation that keeps it from fermenting. The mixture is first heated until it liquefies and is then beaten to a stiff foam. When in this frothy condition it is introduced into the tire or saddle and allowed to cool and partly solidify. The result is a light, spongy material of cellular formation, exceedingly light in weight and proof against tacks, nails, glass and all puncturing objects.

Mt. Marcy's Volcanic Tendency.

Mt. Marcy, the highest mountain in the Adirondacks, is very uneasy, with volcanic tendency. This mountain is one of the curiosities of the Adirondack section and it is said to be the first mountain in the world to have received the cooling breezes after the chaos period, and to this fact is attributed the continued salubrity of the air and general healthfulness of the Adirondack mountains.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.

"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.

"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

PREGNANT THOUGHTS FROM THE WORLD'S GREATEST PROPHETS.

—William Wheeler in Universalist Leader.

The Beam and The Mote.

It is difficult to see others as they are. Yet by taking thought we can form a fairly accurate opinion of their characters and their lives. It is still more difficult to see ourselves as we are. Probably if any one of us could realize, if only for a moment exactly how he appears to others he would be greatly surprised. The character that we think we possess, the character which others think we possess, and the character which we do possess may be three very different things. It should be the aim of life to harmonize them with each other and, in truth, the character which we think we possess. The lesson of the fact that it is almost impossible to understand each other perfectly, even in the case of intimate friends, should promote profound humility. How often it is that we are credited with being far better than we are, with having a quality or degree of power, wisdom and, especially, solidity of character, which in our own hearts we know that we have not attained. It is something to be glad for when we know that we are able to others to illustrate high excellence in circumstances and helps us believe that we are what we would if we honestly try to realize, fully as they think we realize, our ideal, no hypocrisy is involved. But we do, even if they do not, how pitifully often fail of being what we are supposed to be. No one can realize this without being humbled, and with this sense of humility must be joined a lesson of charity. What is true of us in the case of others. If we need some allowance for our shortcomings, if we are as often, very often, than we seem to be, and sometimes are worse than we seem to be, so are our friends. The knowledge of our own weaknesses and failings should make us very gentle in our judgment of them, and, if we suspect sometimes that they may not be as wholly objectionable as they seem, we know of a certainty that they often are far more deserving of love, trust and even admiration than they appear.

Mystery in God's Dealings.

When we are oppressed by the impossibility of fathoming God's dealings with us and are face to face with mystery, as sometimes stand face to face with a friend, we should remind ourselves that, if there were no mystery in God's dealings with us, we should very soon cease to be able to trust him. It is the element of mystery in every human character which causes a large part of its attractiveness. You may know your friend never will, yet you do not know him wholly. He may have summered and wintered with you for years. You may think that the operation of his mind and every motive for his conduct are perfectly understood by you, and doubtless in many things you are correct. Yet every now and then he surprises you by some unforeseen utterance or action, revealing elements in his nature which you have at least imperfectly comprehended. It is because of this elusiveness, this unfathomableness, this mystery, which is an ultimate element of every human character, that we do not become immediately known to one another; and if this be true of each of us within our finite and limited capabilities and natures, how much more true it must be of God.

Prayers of Thomas A. Kempis.

Speech Thee, my most gracious God, to give me from the cares of this life that I should be too much entangled therein; and from the many necessities of the body, lest I should be enthralled by pleasure; and from whatsoever is an obstacle to the soul, lest, broken with troubles, I should be overthrown.

Thou, who hast made the earth so beautiful and shaped our eyes that we might see its beauty and our ears that we might hear its melody, we thank thee for the gift of life and for thy presence in life's abiding happiness and hope. Fix our heart on heavenly things; but do not despise the earth which thou hast made our dwelling place. In thy mercy let it be to us the house of God, the very gate of heaven. Let thy holy will be done in us from day to day. Help us to be patient in life's trials, strong in its temptations, immovable in faith and hope, ever looking for the tokens of thy presence and the hope of thine appearing. For thou art not far off, but O thou our spirit's Life and Joy! Thou hast given us power to become children through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Wealth Worthy of Ambition.

We need secret" to learn how to do all things. We need to learn this secret of full life in Christ in spite of all deprivations, because we cannot have all the things that we want—even men have been known to want things—and some of us have to do without things which, on the plane of material life, are quite desirable. If we desire wealth it is well to have it, if we desire it as coming from God and for His glory; but if we do not have this wealth, which is the lowest thing in the gift of God, we are exhorted to earnestly covet the best gifts—the wealth of heart and soul which lies open for the taking to every follower of Christ. Here is wealth worthy of ambition, wealth which is offered freely and without stint; the unsearchable riches of Christ, which will make us rich to all eternity. Christ never wishes us to do without this wealth, the riches, but He says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."—Advance.

The Essence of Salvation.

The very essence of salvation is to win the will to righteousness. When that is accomplished the work is virtually done. The work of Christ then is to do his will, to strengthen the will to righteousness.—Rev. Dr. Crane.

All Should Swim.

The remarkable number of deaths by drowning proves that too many persons venture into waters without knowing how to swim. About 80 per cent of those drowned so far this summer did not have that knowledge. This is all the more wonderful when knowledge of swimming may so easily be had. A person of average physique should be able to swim several hundred feet after a dozen lessons. Even weaklings may be taught to swim 25 feet or more without exhausting themselves. There are dangerous places on the ocean beach, where the sea pull or undertow will sometimes overpower the strongest swimmer. Even on the beaches of the great lakes there is at times a strong and dangerous undertow, but a knowledge of swimming is within the reach of all.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 28.

Subject: The Prodigal Son. Luke xv., 11-24—Golden Text: Luke xv., 18—Memory Verses, 20-24—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

11. "A certain man." The simple, unpretentious beginning of the most beautiful of all the parables. The man is here the image of God the Father. "Two sons." Both are Jews. The idea that the elder son represents the Jews, and the younger the Gentiles is foreign to the parable, but in character the two sons may be said to be representative of mankind, for we have in them examples of two great phases of alienation from God—the elder is blinded by his self-righteousness, the younger degraded by his unrighteousness.

12. "The younger." He represents openly wicked persons, such as the publicans and sinners. He also represents the thoughtless, careless youth. "Give me the portion of goods." This will appear plain when it is considered that it has been a custom in the East for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during the father's lifetime. "He divided—his living." The yielding to the request strikingly sets forth the permission of free will to man, and also the fact of God's bestowing many gifts upon even the unthankful and disobedient.

13. "Not many days." He had decided upon his course and hastened to be gone. "Gathered all together." Sinners that go astray from God venture their all. "Took his journey." He was weary of his father's government and desired greater liberty. As soon as the bridle of restraining grace is taken off we are soon gone. The journey the prodigal took represents the sinner in his departure from God. He went into a "far country," far from truth and virtue. "Wasted his substance." So sinners waste the gifts God has given them. Time, talents, energies, life, all wasted. "With riotous living." In verse 29 we see how low he fell. His body, mind and soul were debased and ruined.

14. "Spent all." He did not stop until his last dollar was gone. His passions reigned. This represents the sinner who has thrown away the mercy, favor and love of God, and has wilfully rejected the salvation of Christ. "A mighty famine." The soul living at a distance from God, and shut out from intercourse with Him, will very soon feel its own utter emptiness. A mighty famine will follow. "In want." Real want is soul want. The prodigal now felt the effects of his dissipated course. The steps downward were "apostasy, profligacy, penalty." See Prov. 24:34.

15. "Joined himself to a citizen." The same wicked life that before was represented by riotous living is here represented by servile living, for sinners are perfect slaves. The devil is the citizen of that country; he is both in city and country. "To feed swine." This was doubly degrading, and especially so to a Jew.

16. "Would fain have been filled with the husks." (R. V.) The husks were not the pods of some other fruit, but "the fruit of the carob-tree, used for feeding swine." He was driven to the extremity of trying to satisfy his hunger with the food that was fit only for swine. So sinners endeavor to satisfy the soul with earthly and sensual delights. "No man gave unto him." Those whom he had called his friends now deserted him. They had taken his money and then cast him aside. Satan's agents do the same to-day. The saloonkeeper will rob a man of his money, health and character, and then kick him out of the back door to die.

17. "He came to himself." Sin dethrones the reason. A state of sin is a state of folly and madness, but the madness is in the heart. Eccl. 9:3. His lack of reason is seen, 1. In that he called for his money. 2. When he left home. 3. When he went to live with harlots. 4. When he undertook to satisfy his hunger with swine's food. But he now begins to sense his condition and see his folly. Those who have once known the Lord cannot derive satisfaction from the world. "Bread enough and to spare." The lowest in my father's house has bread to give to the poor. God's people are abundantly supplied with good things. "I perish with hunger." Sinners will not come to Christ until they see themselves ready to perish.

18. "I will arise." He had left home by his own free will, and he must return in the same way. God compels no one to do right. "And go." Following the decision there must be an effort put forth. In returning to God there is something to do. "I have sinned." The first thing to do is to make a full confession of our sins. 1 John 1:9; Job 33:27, 28. "Against heaven." Against God. Every sin is a sin against God. "And before thee." He had also sinned against his earthly father. It is ever a token of the sincerity of repentance when one views even the sins committed against others as transgressions against God.

19. "No more worthy." He is ready to humble himself. He knows that in justice his father could shut the door against him; he will plead for mercy only.

20. "He arose." He immediately did all of these things that he had decided upon. "His father saw him." So God knows when we start toward Him. Sin had made the distance great, but as soon as the lost one starts to return the father had compassion. "And ran," etc. This represents the readiness with which God receives returning sinners.

21. "I have sinned." He makes this confession personal; he abases himself. This is always the result of true repentance. "And am no more worthy." All true penitents feel their unworthiness. They are conscious that they deserve nothing but death, and their only hope is in the mercy of Christ.

22. "But the father." The father did not wait until he had finished his confession. In this we see the great affection of the father and his willingness to forgive. "Said to his servants." The father's joy is full, and he instantly issued orders to celebrate his return. "Bring forth quickly." (R. V.) Let us show at once by our actions that the wanderer is fully reinstated. "Put a ring on his hand." A sign of affection and that he was a free man. There is no license given here to adorn the body, as some have vainly tried to show. The true standard for such adorning is given by Paul and Peter. 1 Tim. 2:9, 10; 1 Pet. 3:3, 4.

23. "Be merry." Be joyful and happy. The Bible gives the children of God license to shout for joy. When Christ restores the wanderer there is general rejoicing, and he is immediately treated as a son. The best that God has is given him, and the past is entirely blotted out.

24. "Was dead." "Lost to all good, given up to all evil." "Is alive again." Here was special cause for rejoicing. Who would not be partaker of this joy?

Eleven British and Twenty Boers Killed.

Former Governor W. P. Dillingham was elected United States Senator by the Vermont Legislature a few days ago.

POWERFUL IN EMPIRE.

The Man Who Dared to Disobey a Railroad President.

The great soldier is the man who, as a subordinate, on all ordinary occasions obeys orders implicitly, but who, when the great emergency arrives, knows that, to save the day and his country, he must obey. He breaks his orders on his own responsibility, knowing that the result and the future will justify him. Failure would be his ruin. Success may immortalize him. And if he is great, he knows that he shall succeed. One of the members of the Russian imperial cabinet, Monsieur Witte, minister of finance, is one of the most powerful and important men in the empire. Highly esteemed and trusted by the emperor, he is respected and honored by the representatives of foreign powers. Yet Monsieur Witte is of humble origin—a fact which, in Russia, where every circumstance favors the man of noble blood above the plebeian, has counted for much against him. Monsieur Witte, in his early life, after an imperfect education, was made station-master at a small and unimportant railway station in southern Russia. The war between Russia and Turkey arose, and hundreds of thousands of soldiers had to be transported into Roumania and Bulgaria. One day Monsieur Witte, in his station, received telegraphic instructions to make certain arrangements in connection with the passage of these troops along the line. In Russia orders from a high source, connected with the affairs of the government, are terrible things, not to be disobeyed. But this young man saw that obedience in the present instance would create great confusion, if not positive disaster. His superiors had told him to do the wrong thing. He ventured to violate his instructions, and to do the right thing. The president of the railway summoned the young man before him, and asked why he had presumed to disobey his telegraphic orders in a matter of such vast consequence. Monsieur Witte told him why, and convinced him that he, the station-master, was right, and that the orders were wrong. Instead of removing or punishing him, the chief of the road advanced him. Afterward this railway president, Monsieur Wichnegdradski, was called to St. Petersburg to assume a place in the imperial cabinet. Remembering the man who had so successfully disobeyed, he sent for him and gave him a post under him. After that Monsieur Witte's advancement was rapid, and he rose to occupy the highest "business" position in the empire—that of minister of finance.—Youths' Companion.

Big Mining Contract.

The largest contract ever let by a mining company in the state of Colorado for the delivery of ore to reduction works or smelters was made last week when Dudley M. Gray of Cripple Creek closed a contract with the Independence mine management for the delivery of 200 tons of ore per day from that mine continuously for a period of five years. The work of breaking ore at the mine for transfer under the terms of the contract agreement with the reduction firm has been begun. Outside of the immense magnitude of the contract in the matter of the ore tonnage which it involves for the whole period stated, it also represents the greatest amount of value in ore production for any like period of time which has ever been made from any exclusively gold-producing claim containing the same amount of productive territory within its prescribed limits.

Automobile Storage Rooms.

The coming fashionable apartment house will have storage rooms for automobiles. When houses were fitted up with bicycle storage rooms it was regarded as something decidedly "modern." A new apartment house in New York is being planned with automobile storage rooms. The owner of the house intends to rent apartments only to persons who are wealthy enough to own automobiles. Every arrangement will be provided for charging storage batteries, and this will necessitate the keeping of a staff of mechanics to clean, oil, repair and adjust the motor machinery of the self-goers. In some cities the liverymen have practically boycotted the automobile, claiming the electric vehicles injures their trade.

Libby's Food Products at the Paris Exposition.

The Grand Prix d'honneur and two gold medals have been awarded by the International Jury of Awards at the Paris Exposition, to Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, for the purity, excellence and superiority of their Canned Foods. Here in America, the "Libby" Brand has always been recognized as typical of the highest standard of excellence attained in the preservation of Meats, and it is a noticeable fact that the products of Libby, McNeill & Libby have received the highest awards at every Exposition held in the United States during the past two decades.

A Cemetery for Dogs.

In Paris there has recently been opened a special cemetery for dogs where the deceased canines can be buried with as much pomp and be marked by as pretentious a headstone as their late masters can afford. Along the front of the cemetery grounds a handsome stone wall has been erected, and within the entrance on either side are the house of the concierge and the office. Directly in front of one entering is a handsome marble monument. A heavy relief in the stone represents the dog bearing a child on his back, and commemorates the saving of a little one lost in the snow of St. Bernard pass whom a St. Bernard dog found and brought to a safe refuge.

Tortoise Traveled.

A tortoise story comes from Center Bridge, Bucks county. Edward Johnson was walking over his farm the other day, when he picked up a land tortoise bearing the initials of his father, D. R. Johnson, and the date 1846. These initials were cut on the tortoise when Mr. Joanson's father, who has been dead several years, was a boy of seventeen, making the tortoise over fifty-four years old. It has been picked up on the farm several times by members of the family, but had been missing for a number of years. The farm has been in the possession of the Johnson family for over a century.—Philadelphia Record.

Punctureless Tires.

A German scientist has patented what he asserts to be a puncture proof tire filling. The filling is a jelly made of glue. Glycerine is added to prevent hardening, and an antiseptic preparation that keeps it from fermenting. The mixture is first heated until it liquefies and is then beaten to a stiff foam. When in this frothy condition it is introduced into the tire or saddle and allowed to cool and partly solidify. The result is a light, spongy material of cellular formation, exceedingly light in weight and proof against tacks, nails, glass and all puncturing objects.

Mt. Marcy's Volcanic Tendency.

Mt. Marcy, the highest mountain in the Adirondacks, is very uneasy, with volcanic tendency. This mountain is one of the curiosities of the Adirondack section and it is said to be the first mountain in the world to have received the cooling breezes after the chaos period, and to this fact is attributed the continued salubrity of the air and general healthfulness of the Adirondack mountains.

How Soot Is Utilized.

Experiments in France have shown that chimney soot is valuable both as a fertilizer and as an insecticide. Its fertilizing properties are practically noted in gardens and meadows. M. THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, so actimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.

"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.

"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

Some English Laws.

If you deposit money in a bank and leave it there for over six years without adding to it, drawing on it or dealing with it in any way, it comes under the statute of limitations and is lost to you forever.

Suppose you bought a gold ring and without saying anything about payments or delivery you turned round to examine a clock and a magpie flew in and carried off the ring it would be your loss. You would have to pay the jeweler, while he need not give you another ring. If you bought a horse and said you would call for him in the evening and if the stables were burned and the horse destroyed before you called, you would have to bear the consequences. But if anything remained to be done to the property purchased the seller would be responsible. Suppose he undertook to put a nail in the horse's shoe or suppose the jeweler said he would polish up the ring then the loss would fall on him, not you.

If you wrote from London to a miller in Bristol offering to sell him a cargo of wheat at 30 shillings a quarter and he wrote a letter accepting your offer and posted it the same day, the contract would be completed. Suppose, now, the letter got lost, you concluded that he was not going to buy and you sold the cargo to some one else, you would be liable for damages to the first buyer, and the worst of it is you could get nothing out of the postmaster general.—London Answers.

He Prayed Hard.

An old man in Georgia named Jack Baldwin, having lost his hat in an old dry well one day, hitched a rope to a stump and let himself down. A wicked wag named Neal came along just then and, quietly detaching a bell from Baldwin's old blind horse, approached the well bell in hand and began to tinga-ling.

Jack thought the old horse was coming and said: "Hang the old blind horse! He's coming this way sure, and he ain't got no more sense than to fall in on me. Whoa, Ball!"

The sound came closer.

"Great Jerusalem, the old blind fool will be right on top of me in a minit! Whoa, Ball! Whoa, haw, Ball!"

Neal kicked a little dirt on Jack's head, and Jack began to pray:

"Oh, Lord, have mercy on—whoa, Ball!—a poor sinner— I'm gone now; whoa, Ball. Our father who art in—whoa, Ball!—hallowed be thy—gee, Ball, gee! what'll I do?—name. Now I lay me down to si—gee, Ball!" Just then in fell more dirt. "Oh, Lord, if you ever intend to do anything for me—back, Ball! whoa!—thy kingdom come—gee, Ball! Oh, Lord, you know I was baptized in Smith's mill dam—whoa, Ball! ho! up! murder! whoa!"

Neal could hold in no longer and shouted a laugh which might have been heard two miles, which was about as far as Jack chased him when he got out.—Atlanta Journal.

Bluffs in the Directory.

If you pick up that interesting annual, the city directory, you will find it filled with bluffs. Here is a man down as a superintendent. You know he is only the foreman of a labor gang. Another is designated as a general manager. Three or four men are subject to his "general" management, or, as his 5-year-old-son, who inherited his propensity to bluff, put it, "he's the headman of three other fellows." Overton this page is another chap who is given as the political editor of a newspaper of some political importance. Don't believe it. He's merely a reporter assigned to gather political news, and everything he writes is carefully "edited" by another man with a title of much less importance. This man down in the book as a merchant sells shoestrings and collar buttons in a cubby hole between two buildings made available when an alley fell into disuse. "Mme. Blanque, modiste," is merely Mrs. Blank, dressmaker, making a French bluff for which she collects after the cutting out and fitting are done. But what is the use of picking them out? The directory is filled with them. —Pittsburg Press.

Withdrawing a Juror.

One particularly amusing incident characterized Congressman Burton's early experience at the bar. For some reason it became necessary to request a continuance in a case in which he was counsel. After Mr. Burton had explained why there should be a continuance the court told him simply to withdraw a juror and the case would be marked continued. For the moment the young attorney was nonplused, but after glancing at the court to satisfy himself that the judge was in earnest he walked over to the jury box, eyed the jurors for an instant and then firmly seized a large, portly German and endeavored with no little effort to drag him out of the jury box. In the midst of the general laugh which followed, the court came to the rescue of the discomfited young barrister by explaining that the term was simply technical and need only be written on the docket.—Saturday Evening Post.

Effect of Paternal Example.

Mr. Tucker, who sometimes goes gunning, was trying to teach Tommy the meaning of the word "brace" as applied to game.

"Now, Tommy," he said, "if you should go hunting and kill 20 pheasants, for instance, how many would you say you had bagged?"

"Fifty," replied Tommy.—Chicago Tribune.

Improving His Time.

"So you were in Paris?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Mrs. C. and the girls wanted to go."

"Did you visit all the points of interest?"

"I should say so. We went to more places in a week, than we could learn to pronounce the names of in six months."—Washington Star.

We would like to know who wrote the locals from this place last week.

The young people enjoyed a singing last Sunday night at the residence of Mr. J. W. F. Garner. The singing was very fine, owing to the presence of Misses Adams, Whitaker and Howard. They displayed a wonderful knowledge of vocal music, and will make their marks some day.

Some of the young people attended preaching at Mars Hill last Sunday.

We feel sure that the people of this county were grieved to hear of Mr. Hand's bereavement through the columns of this paper week before last. Billy Deloach ought to write for some of our leading magazines. We would like to hear from him again.—NIT.

Messrs. Langston and Beasley went to Union last Sunday. They will have to buy a buggy or walk from now on. Cupid is doing a great business between Jemison and Thorsby now. The Populites, like the Indians, are fast disappearing.

Mr. W. T. Hand returned home last week after being absent quite awhile. We are glad to announce the return of Mr. E. B. Langston to school where he will be received with open arms. He has been helping his father gather his crop for the past two weeks. The Sons and Daughters of Confederate Veterans, camp No. 18, will meet at the residence of Mr. J. H. Patton, Friday evening, Nov. 2nd.

Mr. B. H. Johnson and family are visiting relatives here.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co., N. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Clanton drug co., and D. I. Macedonia.

Mr. Luke Palmer, is very sick at this writing, and has been for several weeks past.

Farmers will soon be through gathering in this section; crops have turned out reasonably well, especially corn, and what cotton has lacked it has been made up in price, so our people are in good spirit and, generally speaking, good circumstance, have more money to spend than usual and are spending it freely. We see more new buggies, wagons, &c, than ever before. Some will give McKinley the praise for these prosperous times, but we should give God the praise. Cotton seed demand a fair price this year, and our farmers are selling them right along, never saw the like—poor cows. Protracted meeting at Pleasant Grove this week. CLINT.

She'd Had Enough.

There was a colored baptizing at Sandy Bottom, Billville. The last convert to go under the water was an old colored woman, who all the while had been seated in a rickety buggy drawn by an ancient mule who had been through the civil war.

She came up out of the water all right, but after proceeding a short distance on her way home the mule became unmanageable and upset the buggy in the middle of a deep creek.

The old woman, with drenched garments, clung to a "foot log" just as the parson who had recently baptized her rode up.

He heard her swearing at the refractory mule in vigorous terms; then, taking her in his own buggy and driving to dry land, he said:

"Sister Caline, you hez done los' all de salvation what come ter you by de fust baptism; do you must stop right heah an be baptized over ergin."

"No, suh!" was the reply. "I ain't gwine in dat water no mo'! Didn't dat ole mule baptize me de secon' time?"—Atlanta Constitution.

A Curious Wood Carving.

Salem, Mass., is the home of the East India Marine hall, which contains collections of the Essex institute and of the East India Marine society. The scientific cabinets of the Essex institute are extensive and well arranged, and the collections of the Marine society include many curiosities from oriental countries and other distant nations.

Among the numerous curiosities is a piece of wood carving in the form of two hemispheres 1½ inches in diameter, in the concavities of which are carved representations on the one hemisphere of heaven and on the other of hell. There are 110 full length figures in the carving, and the whole is very skillfully executed. It is said to be the work of an Indian monk of the fourteenth century.

Smart Alex.

A man being about to die summoned his four Sons to his side and said:

"My sons, I will leave to John one-third of my estate, to Alex one-fifth, to James one-half and to Thomas one-fourth, and thus you will all Share Equally."

John and James and Thomas took Paper and Pencil and began figuring, but Alex took his Hat and started out.

"Where are you going?" the other Three asked. "Do you not intend figuring out the Problem?"

"Not much," said Alex. "I am Going for a Lawyer to break the Will."

WANTS $50,000.

Senator Sullivan, of Mississippi, Sued for Breach of Promise.

A suit for $50,000 damages for breach of promise against United States Senator William V. Sullivan, of Mississippi, was filed in the District of Columbia supreme court Friday afternoon by Mai Lucy Leeton, of Oxford, Miss. The plaintiff in her affidavit alleges that she, "an unmarried woman, at the request of the defendant, undertook and promised to marry him, which he, without cause or right, has refused to do."

Senator Sullivan gave out the following statement:

"It is blackmail, pure and simple. This woman has absolutely no claim on me of any kind. While in Washington recently an attempt was made by her and her lawyer to extort money from me under threat of such a suit as she has now brought. I declined to entertain such a proposition. I did not not propose to be robbed. The proof will show that it is a dirty attempt to besmirch my character, which blackmailing could have been averted if I had been content to stand and deliver."

THE BIG STRIKE ENDS.

Work Was Resumed in a Majority of the Collieries Monday.

G. B. Markle & Co., operating four collieries, and Cox Bros. & Co., owners of six collieries, have granted the demands of the anthracite miners as set forth in the Scranton convention resolution, says a Hazleton, Pa., dispatch. This leaves only the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company in the Hazleton region which has not conceded all that the miners have asked.

Work was resumed in every colliery in this region Monday morning with the exception of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Company.

TWO REBEL LEADERS DEAD.

One Took His Own Life and the Other Died Naturally.

The Chinese minister at Washington has received a message stating that Kang Yi, a member of the cabinet with Yung Lu, and one of the intense anti-foreign leaders, whose punishment was demanded by the powers, died of illness on the 18th inst. Also that Yu Hsien, the late governor of Shan Si, who is said to have been responsible for the death of many missionaries, has committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf. Minister Wu regards this act as the result of the disfavor which the high officials have received from the throne.

JONES' SENSATIONAL CHARGE.

Mail Addressed to Democratic Headquarters Systematically Pillaged.

Colonel Charles E. Hooker, of Jackson, Miss., democratic congressional nominee, has received a letter from Senator Jones, chairman of the democratic executive committee, in which the charge is made that the mail addressed to the democratic headquarters has been systematically pillaged by some persons. He states that many letters addressed to him are never received and he feels confident that many of the letters sent out never reach their destination. Senator Jones says the pillaging has been in progress ever since the campaign opened.

Tragedy in Virginia.

Hon. Wm. H. Pendleton, ex-member of Virginia legislature, and a staff officer in the confederate army, shot and killed William Francisco, at Cuckoo, in Louisiana county, Va., a few days ago. The tragedy was the outgrowth of a quarrel between neighbors. The men had not been on friendly terms for some time. They owned adjoining farms, and Pendleton objected to Francisco driving through his lands.

There is a strong movement in Greece in favor of the Swiss military system in place of the German. The latter absorbs three entire years of the young men, whereas the Swiss system calls for only 100 days of drilling in the first year, and twenty days every second year thereafter, until the age of thirty-two is reached.

DISASTER IN NEW YORK

Many Buildings Wrecked by Explosion of Chemicals.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE IS REPORTED

The Most Appalling Catastrophe in the City's History—Many Persons Missing and Hundreds are Seriously Injured.

A New York dispatch says: As the result of a small fire, several successive explosions of chemicals stored in Tarrant & Co's. drug store at Warren and Greenwich streets Monday blew down a number of buildings and badly damaged a score of others.

The loss of life is not known, but there are perhaps the bodies of thirty persons in the ruins, though because of the hot debris and the slowness of the moving of it no bodies had been recovered up to midnight. The disaster is the most terrible that has ever occurred in this city, and rivals the Windsor hotel fire in its appalling results, though in loss of property it will be worse. Chief Croker of the fire department said that the loss is fully $1,500,000.

The action of the tremendous catastrophe was more vivid and awful than the city has seen for a long time. Buildings fell in on themselves or toppled over on others; iron girders were thrown yards away, smashing through great walls; structures fell into the streets in piles so that the line of thoroughfare could not be marked out; huge splinters of iron, steel and wood were flung into the streets and into the building clean through the walls where they were buried; people were flung through the streets were knocked down and dangerously injured by timbers, glass and steel; horses were thrown down, wagons and store fronts and streets of property for blocks in every direction were wrecked and damaged.

There are thirty-five persons reported missing, and one hundred men, women and children are on the list of the injured. The search for bodies is going on.

THIRTY SPEECHES.

Bryan Breaks His Own Record at Campaigning.

A New York special says: "I am feeling tolerably well," I thank you." This was Colonel Bryan's response when told Monday that he had made thirty speeches during the day, and thus broken his own record for speech-making. As a rule, the speeches were not so long as on most occasions, but they exceeded in number by nine or ten those of any previous day during the present campaign—by three the highest number made in the campaign in any one day in 1896.

The day's tour was first begun at the headwaters of the Susquehanna river and back through the Catskills, and down the Hudson on the west side of that river to Weehawken, then across the river and across Manhattan Island and into Brooklyn. All the speeches except one were made in the state of New York.

Roosevelt Roughly Treated.

For the first time in New York state, and in the home of the democratic candidate for governor, says an Elmira dispatch, Theodore Roosevelt was assaulted on the streets of Elmira Monday night, on his way to the places of meeting. He was in a carriage with former Senator Fassett, and at several points along the route was pelted with eggs and vegetables and greeted with the vilest epithets. He sat in dignified silence, while the police looked on quietly. The campaign club from Corning was also assaulted and a bitter fight ensued. In the places of meeting the governor also had interruptions.

At Ithica the governor's reception was a most friendly one.

Fate of a Peacemaker.

Alvord, Jr., the absconding note teller of the First National Bank in New York City, who is charged with stealing $700,000 from the bank, was arrested in Boston by Chief Inspector William Roberts and Detective Armstrong of New York in an ordinary lodging house. When arrested Alvord stated that he was glad the suspense was ended.

A PROCLAMATION

Issued by President McKinley to Observe a Day of Thanksgiving.

President McKinley has issued a proclamation appointing Thursday, November 29, to be observed by all the people of the United States, at home or abroad as a day of thanksgiving and praise to God. He recommends that they gather in the several places of worship and devoutly give Him thanks for the prosperity wherewith He has endowed us, for seed time and harvest, for the valor, devotion and humanity of our armies and navies, and for all His benefits to us as individuals, and as a nation, and that they humbly pray for the continuance of His divine favor, for concord and amity with other nations and for righteousness and peace in all our ways.

NEW COMMANDS

Given to Otis and Lee—Department of Cuba.

An order was issued Monday by direction of the president discontinuing the division of Cuba and the eastern and western departments of that division and establishing the department of Cuba.

General Leonard Wood is placed in command of the new department. General Fitzhugh Lee is ordered to command the department of Missouri, with headquarters at Omaha.

General Elwell S. Otis has been ordered to Chicago to command the department of the lakes.

Woman Murders Her Son.

Firemen called to the residence of Mrs. Effie Cawthorn, a widow, in Chattanooga, Tenn., Monday, broke open the locked door of a bedroom and discovered the dead body of Clifford, the 16-year-old son of the widow, lying on the bed in a pool of blood, his head literally hacked to pieces with a hatchet that was lying near by. Mrs. Cawthorn, the mother, confessed that she committed the deed, and that it was her intention to kill the whole family. She said the reason she killed the boy was that he was bad and smoked cigarettes. She is prostrated over the discovery.

Severe Earthquake at Caracas.

Caracas, Venezuela, was visited by a severe earthquake Monday. Fifteen persons were killed and many others injured. Great damage was done to buildings, including the Pantheon and the churches. The United States legation was badly damaged, but all the occupants escaped uninjured. President Castro, who leaped from a balcony on the second floor of the government house, had one of his legs broken.

Donald L. Cameron, the Rutherford (N. J.) druggist who died recently, set an example in providing that there should be no needless expense incurred at his burial. His will, which has been admitted to probate, and which disposed of an estate of $25,000, provided that the cost of his funeral should not exceed $50. "Rather leave to the living" he wrote, "that which unnecessarily goes to the dead." The custom of having an imposing funeral with vast number or relatives, friends, and even mere acquaintances, driving in coaches behind the hearse to a distant cemetery, is to be deprecated. It prevails among people most of whom are in straitened circumstances, and upon whom the expense bears very heavy. Physicians say that frequently "one funeral makes many" in consequence of these visits of large numbers to cemeteries in inclement weather. The custom originates in a commendable sentiment, but, as Hamlet remarks, "It is a custom more honored in the breach than the observance."

Governor Candler Inaugurated.

At noon Saturday the general assembly met in joint session in the hall of the house of representatives to take part in the ceremony incident to the inauguration of Gov. Candler, of Georgia. STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD Current Topics of General Interest from Various Sections of Alabama.

RICE CULTURE AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY

General Wheeler to Speak—Huntsville Kicks on Census Report—Boy Drowned at Girard—Young Woman Killed.

C. C. Henderson, of Greenville, a successful farmer, makes the statement that rice can be as successfully grown in Alabama as in North Carolina or Louisiana. Irrigated land are not required for it, he says, but adds that there are some fine lands in the state which yield generous crops. His contention is based on his own experience of several years. He says that the Alabama rice crop will amount this year to nearly 100,000 bushels. Mr. Henderson has collected a rice exhibit for the state fair in Birmingham. He is the pioneer of the rice-growing industry in Alabama. The counties in which rice cultivation has assumed respectable proportions are Baldwin, Escambia, Conecuh, Monroe, Wilcox and Butler. There are now eight rice mills in operation in these counties. This year's yield exceeds that of last year by 50 per cent, which shows the growth of the industry.

The rice industry is still in its infancy in Alabama, but Mr. Henderson believes that its probabilities are illimitable.

Wheeler to Speak.

H. A. Skaggs, chairman of the Eighth District Democratic Committee, has received a letter from Gen. Wheeler, in which the latter makes appointments to speak at Gurley, Madison county; Hartsell, Morgan county; Leighton, Colbert county and Huntsville, Madison county, for, the Democratic nominee for congress, Judge W. M. Richardson. General Wheeler at the same time enclosed a handsome contribution to the district campaign fund.

While the Wheeler letter did not say so in so many words, its implied effect was that Governor Roosevelt was badly mistaken when he said that General Wheeler stood with the Republican party.

Huntsville Kicks on Census Report.

The Huntsville Chamber of Commerce met and made a formal protest against the report of the census. Numerous instances were sighted in which large families never received a visit from the enumerator and it is alleged that in one section of the city not a single name was taken so far as known. A resolution asking Director Merriam for a recount was unanimously passed. Frank J. Thompson was appointed as chairman of the committee composed of representatives of the three daily newspapers to provide for counting the population.

Agent for Swamp Lands Appointed.

Governor Johnston has appointed W. M. Byrd, of Birmingham, agent for the sale of the swamp and overflowed lands of Alabama. The story of the swamp and overflowed lands of Alabama is an old one. It occupies many pages in the state's records and there has always been more or less complication connected therewith. Congress, under act of Sept. 28, 1850, donated to the state of Alabama swamp and overflowed lands, and, while the state had a large quantity set apart, it has been claimed that the state was entitled to still other swamp and overflowed lands and certain sums of money received by the United States for lands sold in Alabama, which really come under the head of swamp and overflowed lands.

The governor, under the advice of the attorney general that the law authorizing the appointment of an agent is still in force, and that the agents heretofore appointed have long since died or resigned and that there is necessity for a new agent, appointed W. M. Byrd to the position.

Court Rather Than Shotgun.

For the first time in the history of Alabama, so far as court records make a history, says a Montgomery dispatch, an Alabamian has gone into the courts for damages for an assault and battery on his person by another citizen. A double-barreled shotgun has heretofore been made the arbiter, but in this case the plaintiff claims his rights under the law and brings his suit, alleging that he has been damaged to the amount of $20,000. Some time in July last T. G. Bingham, of this city, it is alleged in the complaint, horsewhipped George A. Porter in the county of Elmore, Bingham's son at the same time holding a pistol on Porter for the purpose of intimidating him against resistance. The case, on account of the prominence of the parties and its novelty, has attracted great interest.

Accused of Safe Blowing.

Ernest Stevenson, a white man claiming to be from Virginia, has been arrested in Birmingham on suspicion of being one of the men who broke into the postoffice at Warrior on Tuesday night and blew the safe therein open. He was begging on the streets when pointed out and Officer Culpepper on complaint of Postmaster Hughes of Birmingham, took the man in charge. Stevenson was carried before United States Commissioner Cornish and his preliminary trial was fixed the next Saturday. His bond was placed at $500 and failing to give it he was committed to jail. He admits having been in Warrior Tuesday evening but denies [illegible] robbery.

State Fair Opens This Week.

Thursday the gates to the State Fair at Birmingham will be thrown open to the public, and the people of Alabama will be given an opportunity to see the greatest collection of the state's resources ever before gotten together. They will find there products of the field, the forest, the mine and the mill, as well as live stock and machinery. There will also be amusement for all who seek it. The Midway will have all of the attractions usually found in a place of that kind, from the snake-eater and the fat boy to the high diver and the Streets of Cairo with their Egyptian dancers and the German Village.

Movement for a New County.

Bessemer people are once more enthused on the subject of a new county. At a meeting of the executive board of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association it was decided to take immediate steps to inaugurate a campaign for the establishment of a new county. A call for a mass meeting of the citizens of the territory to be included has been issued to meet next Saturday when arrangements for the work will be effected.

Monster Parade in Chicago.

For six hours and a half Saturday workingmen from every branch of industry in Chicago, lawyers, merchants, railroad men and others marched through the down-town streets of the city in the parade of republican voters which was planned as the culmination of the national campaign in Chicago. Between two solid lines of spectators stretching from the starting point of the line of march on Michigan avenue to its disbanding place on Jackson boulevard near the river, and underneath the hundreds of flags and banners, stretched between the big office buildings and waving from the windows and roofs, the paraders tramped from 10 in the morning until 4:30 in the afternoon.

The parade was reviewed by Senators Hanna, Mason and Culloms, National Committeemen Henry C. Payne, Perry Heath and others.

Democratic Demonstration.

INCREASE OF THE NAVY

Vaster Programme Than Ever Before Conceived Under Consideration

BY THE BOARD OF NAVAL CONSTRUCTION

Project Involves Construction of Not Fewer Than Forty War Vessels, Including Six of Heavy Type.

A vaster programme for an increase of the navy than has ever before been contemplated on this side of the Atlantic is now under consideration by the Board of Construction, says a Washington dispatch, and if approved by the president as it is expected to be it is to be urged upon congress at the coming session.

The project involves the construction of no less than forty warships, including several specialities not heretofore built for naval purposes. The Board of Rear Admirals, which has taken up the subject under special direction from Secretary Long, is availing itself of the highest expert opinions in the service in order that its report will not be open to unfavorable criticism among naval officers, it being the expressed intention of the navy department to discourage any opposition to a line of policy when once adopted.

The program will include six ships of the heaviest armor and most destructive ordinance, with the highest possible speed, the greatest attainable radius of action upon a displacement of about 15,000 tons, combining the most desirable features of line-of-battle ships and cruisers.

At least twenty gunboats are proposed of several types, all of light draft, with large rapid-fire batteries and accommodations to give comfort to officers and crews stationed in the tropics. All of these gunboats will be able to go out to Manila, and then, if necessary, to China interior ports under their own steam.

Provision is made in the programme for an increase in the torpedo flotilla by ten new vessels, including a new type of torpedo cruiser on the lines of existing torpedo-boat destroyers, which can accompany a fleet of battle-ships across the ocean.

The programme will also include three armed colliers, larger than any vessels of this class ever built for a government. They are to have enormous capacity, enabling each of them to deliver 10,000 tons of coal to Manila, Guam or Pago Pago. A large unarmed ship which is recommended is a floating machine shop of about 5,000 displacement for duty in repairing vessels at great distances from government yards, especially in the Philippines.

DARK AGES OUTRIVALED.

Filipino Captain Convicted of Burying a Seaman Alive.

The rebel captain, Novicio, has been tried by a military commission at Baler, northern Luzon, charged with burying alive a seaman named McDonald, of Lieutenant Gilmore's Yorktown party. Novicio was found guilty and sentenced to death. The commission's sentence is now in the hands of General MacArthur for approval.

Testimony was produced at the trial showing Novicio also caused the death of Veuville, another member of Lieutenant Gilmore's party, by delivering him into the hands of the native tribesmen known as Iloggotes, who, under the pretext of going fishing, lured Veuville into the woods and murdered him with two Spanish friends, who were his fellow captives. The tribesmen bound Veuville, opened his veins and sucked his blood until he was dead.

A DEEP WATER ASSOCIATION.

Towns Along the Chattahoochee are Now at Work.

At a meeting of Columbus business men Friday at which the interests of Apalachicola, Eufaula and other Chattahoochee river points were presented, the Columbus and Apalachicola Deep Water association was organized. The constitution of the association states that the object of the association "shall be to procure proper legislation on the part of the national government to provide and maintain an open channel from the city of Apalachicola to the deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico of sufficient depth and width to admit of passage of sea-going vessels, and also to provide and maintain a depth of channel in the Chattahoochee, Flint and Apalachicola rivers to admit free passage of river steamers from Columbus to Apalachicola and from Bainbridge to Chattahoochee junction at all times of the year."

Candidate Drops Dead.

George W. Blake, nominee for the house of representatives on the democratic ticket in LaSalle county, dropped dead at Dana, Ill., while closing a political speech.

Transvaal a Part of England.

A Pretoria dispatch says: The Transvaal was Friday proclaimed a part of the British empire, the proclamation being attended with impressive ceremonies. The royal standard was hoisted in the main square of the city, the Grenadiers presented arms, massed bands played the national anthem, Sir Alfred Milner read the proclamation and 6,200 troops representing Great Britain and her colonies marched past.

Contributions received at Galveston for the relief fund to October 25, inclusive. $1,140,368.82.

Col. John M. Fleming Dead.

Colonel John M. Fleming, aged 68 years, and for many years editor of the old Knoxville Tribune, and later the Sentinel, died Sunday evening at the East Tennessee hospital for the insane, where he has been for the past seven years. Deceased was a noted Confederate soldier, and a prominent politician. His health failed and he had to be sent to the asylum.

THE CUBAN OUTLOOK.

Congress Must Act Before Uncle Sam Vacates the Island.

The evacuation of Cuba by the United States is not likely to take place quite so soon as has been anticipated in some quarters, says a Washington dispatch. The withdrawal of the American troops will not take place until some form of domestic government has been established, and is not likely to be ordered by the executive department of the government without the authority of congress.

The Cuban convention, which meets in November, is likely to be in session several months, probably much longer than after the adjournment of the coming session of congress on March 4, 1901.

The new congress, to be elected on November 6 next will not meet in regular session until December, 1901, and will hardly do any important business until the spring of 1902. By that time representatives of the new Cuban republic may be ready to demonstrate to the appropriate committees of congress that they have the government completely organized and capable of maintaining treaty obligations with other powers. Such government can hardly exercise its functions until authorized by congress. Whether it shall be permitted to exercise them without the supervision of the United States will be for congress to determine.

NOT ON THE PROGRAMME.

Thrilling Experience of a Circus Rider at New Decatur.

A scene that was not down on the programme was enacted at John Robinson's circus at New Decatur, Ala., Saturday night. On the hippodrome track a ladies' horse race was in progress, in which three riders took part. They had been once around and were coming in on the home stretch and just as they made the last turn, before reaching the judges' stand, the inside horse fell and rolled over on its rider.

The horse soon regained its feet, however, and being badly frightened, made a mad rush toward the crowded seats, dragging its rider, whose skirts became fastened to the saddle, with her head downward. The rider was carried to her dressing-room in an unconscious condition. It was found that she was badly bruised up.

DEBS IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Leader of the Social Democracy Greeted in Boston.

The social democrats of Boston and vicinity gave an enthusiastic greeting to Eugene V. Debs, the presidential candidate, Sunday, and listened to two speeches from him. The note of Mr. Debs' speeches was the necessity of the working class having possession of the tool of production, by which he means the tools of construction as they exist today—mills, machinery, etc. He said so long as these were owned by private capital, so long will the workingman be oppressed. His remedy is public ownership and management of the "tool of production."

Savannah's New Cathedral Dedicated.

Sunday morning, upon the feast day of St. Simon and St. Jude, the magnificent cathedral of St. John the Baptist, at Savannah, Ga., was dedicated by Monsignor Sebastiano Martinelli, delegate of the pope to the United States, assisted by some fifty priests, including ten bishops. The new cathedral, built upon the ruins of the cathedral begun by Bishop Persico in 1873, dedicated by Bishop Gross in 1876 and destroyed by fire two years ago, is probably the handsomest specimen of gothic architecture in the south.

Cotton Destroyed by Worms.

W. S. Robson, one of the most extensive cotton planters in Texas, has gathered statistics from the Brazos and Colorado valleys and declares that the boll weavel has destroyed $6,000,000 worth of this year's cotton crop.

Cleveland Offered College Presidency.

According to a dispatch from Winchester, Va., the presidency of Washington and Lee University, made vacant by the death of William L. Wilson, will be offered to ex-President Grover Cleveland.

Two Powers Decline to Accept.

The semi-official Politche Correspondence at Vienna asserts that France and Russia, after discussion, have declined to accept the Anglo-German agreement.

Jockey Injured.

Jockey Chalman, on Tony Hig, in the hurdle race at the Inter-State Fair, at Atlanta, was badly injured internally Friday.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It is not generally known that it is unlawful in Ohio to keep any native song bird in confinement. During a month 28 people were arrested in Cincinnati for this offense, and it is estimated that over 25,000 birds have been given their freedom within the past year.

According to a statement published by the English insurance companies, 7 per cent. of the British officers who served in the South African war were either killed or died of their wounds, while the mortality of the rank and file from the same causes was less than 2 per cent. The statement shows the excellence of the Boer sharpshooting, which was directed at the officers through the war, particularly in its earlier stages.

According to a report published by the Home Office in London showing the mineral productions of the world for the last year, the United States easily leads all its rivals in this form of wealth. Great Britain ranks second, but far behind the leader, the total product of the United States having been about $720,000,000, while that of Great Britain was $400,000,000. Germany stands third, with nearly $250,000,000.

The latest statistics from the International Peace Bureau, in Berne, Switzerland, give the number of members as 35,000. There are 91 societies, 347 groups, and the membership is scattered among 18 European and other countries. The society has recently published an extensive report relative to the war in the Transvaal, which, among other things, includes the correspondence between the society and President McKinley relative to intervention.

The Philadelphia Times remarks: "There seems to be a considerable demand for the whipping post for wife beaters, based upon the general idea that no punishment is too severe for those who thus offend the laws of chivalry and decency. But those who urge it do not stop to think that flogging is a vindictive punishment, which, like other extreme penalties, never did the man who received it, the arm that administered it, or the society that sought to correct its errors in this way, any kind of good."

While the cultivation of the olive is increasing in this country, Mr. Skinner, United States consul at Marsellies, writes to the state department that the acreage devoted to olives in France is annually becoming less and the outlook for olives and olive oil in France is not encouraging. Even in that home of the olive, peanut, or arachis oil, extracted from the African ground nuts, which are imported in vast quantities, is considered superior for frying purposes. Not only is this oil used to adulterate olive oil, but is frequently used in place of it in packing the cheap brands of sardines.

There is no perceptible difference in physical courage between men of the lowest and men of the highest intelligence, men of the weakest and men of the strongest bodies, men of the simplest and men of the most luxurious tastes. If the instinct is appealed to in the right way, all men are brave, and so are the women, and so are the children. If the instinct is not appealed to in the right way, is there any human being who is free from cowardice? The very man who has shown himself a poltroon may in the next moment put to shame those who were sneering at him.

It is not often that a country wishes to celebrate a disastrous defeat, such as, for example, the French suffered at Waterloo. But that is just what is going to be done, for a wealthy Frenchman, M. Osiris, who gave Malmaison to the French government, has, with the approval of his government, acquired land in the great plain where the battle was fought, and will erect a monument in commemoration of the defeat under the shadow of the victorious lion, which stands on the knoll. The monument will be in the form of a great column surmounted by an immense eagle, whose outspread wings have been pierced by bullets.

The question of Austrian immigration is again troubling New Zealand legislators. The gum fields of northern New Zealand seem to be a happy hunting ground for Dalmatians, and the foreigners' wants are so few and so easily satisfied as to bring down the earnings of a gum digger below the standard at which a New Zealand laborer can live. Though their earnings are small, the Dalmatians seem able to save some money, and one of the complaints against them is that they "pick the eyes out of the country," and in a few years return with their savings to their homes, leaving the hard and necessary work of settling the virgin land of New Zealand to those whom their intervention has driven from temporary employment on the gum fields. During last session Parliament took steps to stop the immigration of Austrians by the passing of an act which makes it necessary for every gum digger to have a license, no license to be given to any person until he has been three months a resident in the country.

Hitherto two views have prevailed as to how we read. One is that reading is effected solely by spelling, each letter being grasped and perceived for and by itself; the other is that the words are not grasped exclusively letter by letter, but in small groups of letters in the same space of time. Erdmann and Dodge have ascertained that while the head was kept in a steady position in reading an easily comprehensible text there is a regular change between periods of rest for the eye and periods of movement. The number of pauses, however, is much less than the number of letters over which the eye glides, and its position remains in a given case almost unchanged as long as a legible text is used. If the text becomes more difficult, and where attention is given almost exclusively to the formation of words, as in printers' proofs, the number becomes three times as large. Both investigators came to the conclusion that reading is effected exclusively during pauses for rest. On an average, the eye glides during a definite movement on the line over a definite space of 1.52 to 2.08 centimeters, a space that contains about twelve to thirteen letters.

The enormous economic value of birds to man in preventing the undue increase of insects, as well as in devouring small rodents; in acting as scavengers, and in destroying the seed of harmful plants, is suggested by the fact that insects cause an annual loss of at least $200,000,000 to the agricultural interests of the United States every year, exclusive of the damage done to ornamental shrubbery, shade and forest trees. During the day swallows and swifts forage through the air, to be followed at night by the nighthawks and whippoorwills. The woodpeckers, nuthatches and creepers look after the tree trunks and limbs, picking out the eggs and larvae of insects from the bark or excavating for the ants and borers they hear at work within. On the ground the hunt is continued by the thrushes, sparrows and other birds, which feed upon the innumerable forms of terrestrial insects. In a report of the Audubon society it is stated that the killing of immense numbers of herons and other littoral birds in Yucatan has been followed by an increase in human mortality among the inhabitants of the coast, a direct result of the destruction of the birds that formerly helped to keep the beaches and bayous free from decaying animal matter.

London has a new sensation, to which the papers of that city are now devoting much space. Twelve hundred Chinamen have been imported for the purpose of washing its clothes, in opposition to the established laundries. John Chinaman is not as familiar a figure in London as he is in this country, and the people of that city have taken to him with all the zest that accompanies a novelty. London laundries are said to be notoriously inefficient, ruining the clothes without cleaning them, and as the company which has imported the Chinamen guarantees clean clothes without the use of destructive acids, and all hand work, the success of the venture has been assured from the beginning. Since the coming of the laundrymen many requests have been made for Chinese servants, for the servant question in England has grown to be as serious as it is in this country, and it is more than likely that if the demand grows large enough to warrant the large expense of importing Chinamen for domestic work that will be done.

Critics who have complained for years that theatrical managers never gave native playwrights a chance ought to be satisfied at last. Judging from preliminary announcements and from the first productions of new plays already given, the stage is to be almost monopolized during the coming season by American-made dramas, observes the Chicago Tribune. Practically every one of the novels by American writers which was successful during the last year has been dramatized and awaits production by a star of greater or less magnitude. The result of the season, from a box-office standpoint, should be a fair test of the drawing power of home-made dramas. If a majority of the new plays are financially successful hereafter the United States will be independent of the effete monarchies of Europe in a dramatic way, as it has recently become in so many other directions. Before long we may have England, Germany and France sending over to this country for dramas and farces, as they now send for canned beef and wheat.

Power of a Uniform.

The United States army is clever enough to appreciate the attractive power of a handsome uniform. The gaudy posters, printed in blue, red, white and gold, which the recruiting offices stick up in government buildings and on trees, fences and cliffs, barn doors, roofs and assembly rooms, illustrating the several branches of the service, do more to secure enlistment than all the war talk and promises of promotion put together. The prospect of strutting around in a bright uniform causes young and old men to bury the thought o hardship. The ambition to show off is well-nigh universal.—New York Press.

The population of India in 1891 amounted to 284,000,000; at a very moderate estimate now, it may be put down to 300,000,000.

SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL.

Plants, like animals, are continually wandering to fresh fields and pastures. Of the present flora of Ohio no less than 450 are immigrants. Almost all are from Europe.

The number of stars distinctly visible without the aid of a glass is put by Gould at 5,333. Professor Newcomb says their number is near 7,647. These are up to the sixth magnitude. Professor Newcomb estimates the number up to the 14.5 magnitude at two hundred million.

A very convenient filter for carrying in the pocket or attachment to a canteen has just been invented. It is small and light, being constructed of aluminum. All foreign substances that are either in solution or suspension are removed first by perforated metal disk and next by a filter paper. At one end is a rubber tube so that the water may be sucked through as fast as it is filtered, and fast enough to quench the thirst. This will be of great value to soldiers who are traveling in a country where the water is unwholesome and impure.

A novel use of leather is in the manufacture of fibroleum, a new paper product, which is the invention of G. Brigalant, of Barentin, in France. This is a sort of leather paper on board, which is made from waste cuttings of skins. It is made by cutting up the pieces of skin into small bits, and then immersing them in a large vat containing an alkaline solution which dissolves the glutinous matter, but leaves the fibres unaltered. The resultant fibre is then beaten and afterwards pressed through a refiner. The stuff is run on to the wire and a very thin paper is made, which is cut into sheets, and while wet is placed in piles and subjected to pressure to squeeze the water out.

Some fairly successful experiments have recently been made in drilling holes in and engraving on metal by means of electrolytic solutions. A nozzle of special construction was used. The lower end, which was pressed against the metal plate, is divided into two compartments, through which the electrolytic fluid flows. The upper end has two openings; through one the electrolyte flows in, down to the lower end against the plate, and finally up and out of the other. The end of the nozzle, which is pressed against the plate to be drilled, is fitted with a rubber washer, whose shape determines that of the hole bored. A strong electric current is caused to flow through the plate into the electrolyte and back to the source of electricity. The nozzle circulation of the electrolyte in the nozzle carries off the metal as fast as the electrolysis liberates it. Some of the best results for iron were obtained with sulphuric acid as the electrolyte, but good work was also done with ordinary salt water.

The extermination of rats by the application of a bacteriological process has recently been suggested by M. J. Danysz, of the Pasteur Institute, of Paris. This scientist has found a microbe which will produce a deadly pestilence when introduced into a population of rats and cause their annihilation, or at least make them a negligible quantity. The bacillus in question was derived from field mice suffering from a spontaneous epidemic disease, and by elaborate processes of repeated cultures was trahsmitted through a series of mice and rats. In this way its virulence was increased, and it was found surely pathogenic for the rats when eaten. In addition to the experiments in the laboratory, trials were made in a large number of farms, warehouses, and other places infested by rats. It is reported that in 50 per cent. of the experiments there was a complete disappearance of the rats, that in 30 per cent. their number greatly decreased, while in 20 per cent. the method failed.

Booming a Subscriber.

An exchange, unknown to fame, thus gives its home undertaker a boost: "One of the pleasantest sights we have had in this town for a long time was the artistic manner in which John Griffin buried Bill Kruger, who died since our last issue. Mr. Griffin has his trade at his finger's end, and he handled our dead citizen with an ability that was startling in its originality. He was everywhere at once, weeping with the bereaved widow, discussing crop prospects with the farmers, and soliciting business from the other attendants at the funeral. He will doubtless be able to get all the business in these parts. Before leaving for home he subscribed for this great weekly, paying one year in advance."

Smart Child.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "have you any doubts remaining about baby's being the smartest child in the world?"

"I must confess," he answered, as he rattled his newspaper rather irritably, "that I have seen no proofs of any superlative intellectual superiority."

"That simply shows you are not observing. Do you remember how you read that long list of Chinese names last night?"

"Yes."

"Well, baby was trying to talk today, and it sounded exactly as if he had learned every one of them by heart."—Washington Star.

The New Orleans Times Democrat, speaking of the cotton crop, says:

"The concensus of opinion appears to be that, making allowances for a moderate increase of acreage, a maximum yield of 9,750,000 bales is on the cards This would mean an excess of about 600,000 as compared with the actual production of 1899 The superabundance of Texas has been offset by the comparative dearth of the remainder of the belt"

THE last week of the campaign is nearly at a close, and most men have made up their minds for whom they are going to vote It is a duty devolving upon every voter to go to the polls, and in our opinion vote for the ticket at the head of this column; we have more to hope from the election of Bryan and a Democratic congress than from any other party, and the prospect is bright for our getting them

At the time of writing this alticle, the Democratic National committee has issued, or has under preparation, more than one hundred and fifty-eight different documents, of which over 25,000,000 have been distributted I have seen a bundle of documents sent out by the Republicans which exceeded this number whether it was a complete list or not I do not know Every language spoken by civilized men is includen in this list One speech of Mr Bryan's, that on "Imperialism," has been put in not less than eleven languages by the Democratic Literary Bureau, and there hardly passes a day that there does not come a demand from some State chairman for this document in some other foreign language Greek, Finnish, and Yiddish figure among the recent demands for foreign literature The total number copies of this speech issued exceeded 8,000,000, and I have seen a report from Republican headquartors that more than 7 000,000 copies of President McKinley's letter of acceptance were circulated I have no way of knowing what troubles beset the gentlemen who conduct the Republican Literary Bureau. but I have no doubt that they encounter the same pressure for literature in foreign tongues, we sometimes feel a natural exultation that the Indians are not purmitted to vote, and that the committee is saved the expense of putting out documents in choctaw and Sioux—From "The management of the Democratic campaign," by willis J Abbot, in The American monthly Review of Reviews for November

IN THE HOLY LAND.

Jericho, Aug. 29, 1900

I said I would write you again from Jerusalem But I have been fighting the Jericho mosquito for some hours, and sleep is impossible. And I have lit my candle, and in order to kill time from now (two o'clock a.m.) till day I will write to you. These mosquitoes differ from the American from the fact that no music at all is thrown in when they present their bill for lodging, neither do they make any excuse for scarcity of water, or explain their great number in the absence of water, their reputed breeding place. If they would sing you could better tell where to strike with your wet towel (the best weapon I could devise for them) but they bite and fly away instantly. I know they are extra poisonous as a Chilton county piney woods tick is the only insult that made me even scratch before. One poor lady had her arms to actually break out in large blisters after being bitten by these pests. If I prove too detailed and dry in this letter, and tell you a lot of dry facts that history, travelers and guide books have told you before, you, who know these things must be patient, as I know some of my readers wish these things stated; we entered Jerusalem on the west took carriage at the station was driven like Jehu of old to the hotel Howard. Next morning we entered the city through the Joppa gate (our hotel being on the outside.) These gates are now left open all the time. David's tower stands to the right as we enter Joppa gate, and we walk down David's street running east and west, until we came to Christian street, that runs north and south; down this street we went turning off into a street that led down to the Tyropaeon valley, (now a street) which separates Mt Moriah from Mt Zion; we then entered the gate into the old Temple Arena, now occupied by the mosque of Omar, and containing 35 acres of ground.

A church was built on this site at one time by Justinian, the Byzantine emperor at Constantinople, but after the Moslem occupation it was changed into the mosque of Omar. Under one of the two mosques that occupy the site of the temple arena are what is usually called Solomon's stables. Our guide tells us this is an error, that they were the granaries in which was stored the tithes due by the people to the temple service, and that the name of stables were subsequently applied to them because the crusaders used them for stables during their occupation of the city; we next see the pool of Bethesda of the pooches I tried very hard to make out what was meant by the expression five pooches but could not to my satisfaction, unless it meant five sided. Saw the via Dolorosa, the reputed route through

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. } Probate Court.

To James M. Davenport, Mary E. Gibbons, Rufus Davenport, Annie Shoults, Birdie Shoults, Emmett Shoults, Cathrine Shoults and Pearl Shoults:

You will please take notice that on the 17th day of September, 1900, a petition was filed in the Probate Court of said county, by E. Z. Nix, as Administrator of the estate of D H. Davenport, deceased, praying for an order to sell certain lands particularly described in said petition, as belonging to the estate of said D H. Davenport, deceased, for the purpose of division among the heirs and distributees of said estate, and the 20th day of November, 1900, is appointed as the day for the hearing thereof, at which time you can appear and contest the same if you see proper.

Given under my hand, this 20th day of October, 1900.

S. M. ADAMS, Judge of Probate.

A Famous Prison.

The celebrated Mamertine prison furnished an important scene in Sienkiewicz's story, "Quo Vadis." It is located on the slope of the Capitoline, in Rome, and, according to tradition, it was begun by Ancus Martius and later enlarged by Servius Tullius. Jugurtha is said to have been starved to death here, the accomplices of Catiline strangled by command of Cicero and Sejanus, the minister and favorite of Tiberius, executed. Church tradition has consecrated this prison as the place where St. Peter and St. Paul were confined by order of Nero. Historian Hillard says of it:

"The Mamertine prison is a hideous vault divided into an upper and lower portion scooped out of the solid rock and lined with massive blocks in the Etruscan style of architecture. A more heartbreaking place of confinement it is not easy to imagine. According to the traditions of the church, St. Peter was imprisoned here by order of Nero, and the pillar to which he was bound and a fountain which sprang up miraculously to furnish the water of baptism to his jailers, whom he converted, are shown to the visitor. There is no reason to doubt that Jugurtha was starved to death in these pitiless vaults. Here, too, the companions of Catiline were strangled. It is a curious fact that the chances of literature and history should have carried two such names as these of fallout and Cicero on those Cyclopean walls."

Gone Democratic.

Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little, menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are filling graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Della M. Steyer, Tully, Kan., writes: "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything, in fact was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

REMEMBER PORTO RICO.

REPUBLICANS WOULD WANTONLY ENSLAVE THAT UNHAPPY ISLE.

Will Those Who Perpetrate So Foul a Deed Spoke the American Workingman, the American Farmer, When They Have Gained the Power They Aspire to Hold?

Let the American voters remember our broken promises to Porto Rico and by his ballot erase the stain from the folds of our national emblem.

President Schurman, of the Philippine Commission, who, as "a gentleman and a scholar," has endeavored to throw the robe of rhetoric and the pious apology over the crimes of President McKinley and his abettors in the Philippines, could not stand the Porto Rican tariff act. In a letter to a friend, quoted in Senator Proctor's speech, President Schurman said:

"We are bound to this course by solemn promises. The supreme and irrefutible reason for removing all customs barriers between the United States and Porto Rico is the promise made by General Miles, when first landing American forces on the island, that the Porto Ricans should enjoy the same rights, privileges and immunities as the people of the United States. On this understanding the Portbo Ricans accepted American sovereignty, not only without opposition, but with joyful trust and confidence.

"The present issue is simply this: Shall we repudiate or shall we fulfill the national engagements? Shall this great republic break faith with the little island of Porto Rico? Having secured the fruits of General Miles's promise, shall we now renounce the promise?

"The American people will not tolerate any faltering with solemn obligations. Recognizing the national good faith as the nation's chiefest good, they will condemn any violation of it as the blackest crime. All over the country this Porto Rican question has stirred to the deepest the national heart and conscience; legislation, inspired by a breach of good faith, will bring a terrible nemesis.

"It is said that a tariff is needed between Porto Rico and the United States to provide a case for the courts to determine the extent of our jurisdiction over the new dependencies, especially the Philippines. I answer that no convenience, no expediency, no other obligation, ever justified a breach of the national good faith. Let me add, too, that this Porto Rican legislation is testing us before the eyes of the Filipinos, who keep well informed of all our doings. They will judge by this legislation of the value of American promises. When the ablest and most statesmanlike of Aguinaldo's emissaries to the Philippine Commission once expressed the fear that the American Government might not keep the promise it was making—'for Spain,' said he, 'made promises and broke them'—I silenced him with the reply: 'Signor, the United States is not Spain.'

"Is he now to learn—are all the Filipinos now to learn—that in the first legislation for our new dependencies we prove faithless to our pledges and recreant to our obligations? Such an exhibition of ourselves will strengthen the hands of Aguinaldo and the insurgents, because, unhappily, it can be used to support their persistent statement that the Americans are no more trustworthy than the Spaniards.

"At the very moment when we need to inspire confidence in the minds of the conquered Filipinos, shall we commit an act which will confirm their distrust of us, quicken their suspicions and breed new and perhaps ineradicable antipathies? God forbid."

A Thunderbolt From Bryan.

"The Republican party is not prepared to defend itself on the trust question, therefore they try to get it out of the campaign. The Republican party is not prepared to defend itself on the army question. They say there is no question of militarism, and yet an army four times as great as the standing army of 1898 is demanded by the President's message of December, 1898. How much do we spend for education in the United States? Less than $200,000,000 a year. How much do the Republicans want to spend on a military establishment? One hundred million dollars a year. They want to spend more than half as much for a military establishment as we spend for the education of all the children in the United States. Is not that a step toward militarism? (Applause.) What reason can they give for it? They only give one. But I will give the one they do not give. There are two reasons which lead men in this country to want a large standing army. One is a domestic one; the other is connected with our foreign affairs. What domestic reason is there for a large army? To protect us from the Indians? No, the less Indians we have the more army the Republican party wants. That is not the cause.

"Why do they want it? So that they can build a fort near every large city and use the army to suppress by force the discontent that ought to be cured by remedial legislation."—W. J. Bryan.

The Democratic Policy.

"The forcible anexation of territory to be governed by arbitrary power, differs as much from the acquisition of territory to be built up into States as a monarchy differs from a democracy. The Democratic party does not oppose expansion, when expansion enlarges the area of the republic and incorporates land which can be settled by American citizens, or adds to our population people who are willing to become citizens and are capable of discharging their duties as such."—W. J. Bryan.

McKINLEY MILITARISM.

A Pretty Penny to Pay for the Imperialism.

It is announced from Washington that the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy will call upon Congress for more than $200,000,000 for the support of the army and navy for the next fiscal year. The appropriations for the army are being figured on a basis of 100,000 men.

It is pertinent in this connection to note the increased cost of the army and navy under the administration of William McKinley. For the year 1897 the army and navy, in round numbers, cost $83,400,000. The estimate of $200,000,000 for the next fiscal year is not to meet some emergency, but it is proposed as an permanent charge. The increase of over $115,000,000 a year represents the fixed charge that Oriental empire will place upon the republic.

This is a pretty penny to pay for the imperial enterprises for which McKinley stands. If it could be shown that the money was spent in a righteous cause; that it was for the spread of free institutions and the uplifting and betterment of mankind, it might be excusable. But it is for none of these things. It is being squandered to build up an Oriental empire, of which Great Britain's Indian empire is a model, for the enrichment of a favored few and for exploitation by syndicates. It is being spent to crush the aspirations of a people to attain freedom and independence that they may take their place among the nations of the earth.

And the American people are called upon to approve such a policy, to make permanent expenditures for the army and navy more than double the expenditures made for our military establishment prior to the war with Spain, that Mr. McKinley and Hanna and the trusts may have four years more of a "full dinner pail!"

What Bryan Would Do.

The Republican party says we are prosperous. Who's we?

The man who can get private concessions from the Republican Administration is prosperous, of course. Is he the only one worth talking about?

The world has no example of the opportunities afforded to those who can pay for legislation as is now on view.

He (Roosevelt) spends more time in denouncing those who denounce the trusts than he does in denouncing the trusts themselves.

While Mr. Hanna says there are no trusts, there is one trust—that is an Ice Trust. But there are others trusts.

We draw the line between honest and predatory wealth.

The laboring man wants more than protection from blackmail or a government by injunction.

It can't be that the Ice Trust is any worse than any other form of trust, or our Republican Governor would not be out West making speeches instead of being here curbing the trusts.

The laboring man will have to pray in the future "Give us our daily bread" to the trust magnate instead of to the Almighty.

A government for the people will be impossible under the regime of the trusts.

I don't believe God ever made a man good enough to stand at the head of a private monopoly and fix the price of that commodity.

A wise man gets an idea into his head. A foolish man gets it in the neck.

My first act as President will be to call Congress together to do what should have been done a year and a half ago for the Filipinos.—W. J. Bryan.

The "Good" Trusts.

Chairman Hanna says there are no trusts and the Republican National Committee confirms his declaration by issuing a campaign folder by millions in defense of trusts. This folder, on the strength of Carroll D. Wright's "statistics," shows that trusts are the workingman's only true friend.

However, it is to be noted that most of the Republican organs and orators admit that there are trusts and that they are of two kinds—good and bad. The good trusts are those that fill Mr. Hanna's campaign dinner pail; the bad ones are the trade unions. And according to the campaign folders which the Republicans are spreading broadcast the trusts have been an unmixed blessing to labor. They have increased employment, they have increased wages, and they have lowered prices. They are therefore the crowning beneficence of McKinleyism.

But it must be remembered that the "statistics" upon which this charming Republican fantasy is built were supplied by Col. Carroll D. Wright. It is understood that the figures used by the trusts themselves are dreamed by him. Their reliability is therefore not to be questioned by any Republican organ or orator.

Yet it is an interesting fact that Col. Wright is a thoroughly discredited statistician. He has been shown up in a light so utterly dishonorable that what he says must always be regarded with suspicion. He understands that his job depends upon properly "cooked" prosperity figures; and with an expert knowledge of what is wanted he is always ready to meet the demands upon him.

However, the really significant thing about this folder is, that it commits the Republicans to an open defense of the trusts.

The Real Calamity Howlers.

Men who shut down the mill "till they see how the election goes" are the real calamity howlers. Men who say the industries of the country will be paralyzed if Bryan is elected are the calamity howlers. Men who threaten a panic unless McKinley is chosen—they are the true and genuine calamity howlers, and they are more harmful to the nation than an army of rebels would be.

REPUBLICAN COERCION

WORKINGMEN DRAGOONED VOTING FOR M'KINLEY

Forcing Americans to Give Up the Dearest and Proudest Privilege of Their Citizenship—It Is Imperialism at Home—A Form of Political Slavery.

One of the most sinister features of the Presidential contest this year is the policy of coercion and intimidation alleged to have been adopted by the McKinleyite employers of labor in all parts of the country. Persuasion and argument having failed to convert workingmen into supporters of McKinleyism, more drastic measures, it is charged, have been resorted to in order to assure the continued supremacy of the Republican party in national affairs. The workingman, the employe of the trust and corporations, the toilers in factories, mills and mines, are to be driven, it is said, into voting for Mr. McKinley against their convictions by methods which are as coercive as if the victims were dragged to the polls by a corporal's squad. This is the despotism to which we have come under the rule of the trusts, the moneyed interests and our "Napoleon" of "practical politics" and shyster finance.

The American people are a sober, law-abiding people, who abhor anarchy. The men who are promoting anarchy in this country are not the ridiculous creatures like Herr [illegible] and his absurd followers. The most dangerous anarchists are those who prevent a fair expression of the people's will at the polls. They hold to the un-American theory that when they buy a man's labor his vote goes with it, and that vote must be cast for policies which will make the employer prosperous even if at the expense of the employe. Such men assume prerogatives more fitting an absolute despotism than a free republic. They are destroying the foundations upon which this Government was built. They are establishing a system of political serfdom against which there will one day be a mighty and irresistible revolt. They are the anarchists who are undermining our free institutions as effectively as if they employed the bayonet to assert their mastery. They are forcing the American workingman to give up the dearest and proudest privilege of his citizenship in order that they may have a government which will bestow extraordinary favors upon them. They are sowing the wind and they will be fortunate if they do not reap the whirlwind. Imperialism abroad is bad enough. Imperialism at home, as embodied in the coercion and intimidation of employes, involves the degradation of the citizen. It is a form of political slavery which will make the American people a nation of serfs wearing the collars of their masters, the trusts, financial institutions and favored interests which are endeavoring to control the Government.—Baltimore Sun.

Bryan's Remedies For Trusts.

"We have a remedy and our remedy is, first, to put every trust-made article on the free-list; second, we propose that Congress shall provide that before any corporation does business outside of the State of its origin it shall take out a license from the Federal Government, and this license shall only be given when the corporation shows that it has no water in its stock and that it is not attempting to monopolize any branch of business. I believe that would be a great remedy for the trusts. I believe that no private monopoly could exist."—W. J. Bryan.

"Destiny is not a matter of chance, it is a matter of choice; it is not a thing to be waited for, it is a thing to be achieved."—W. J. Bryan.

"The fruits of imperialism, be they bitter or sweet, must be left to the subjects of monarchy. This is the one tree of which the citizens of a republic may not partake. It is the voice of the serpent, not the voice of God, that bids us eat."—W. J. Bryan.

"Wars of conquest have their origin in covetousness, and the history of the human race has been written in characters of blood, because rulers have looked with longing eyes upon the land of others."—W. J. Bryan.

Pulling Down the Flag.

Don't you Republican gentlemen get serious about the pulling down of the flag. You are the only people who have nailed down the Stars and Stripes. When John Hay gave up the gold lands of Alaska to England, and pulled down the starry banner which has floated over that region since Grant bought it of Russia and paid for it, he closed the mouths of his partisans to the one wild cry they love.

And here is a result of it. This is a dispatch from Vancouver, B. C., under date of September 29:

"Dispatches from Porcupine City, Alaska, say that the British flag was raised over the Porcupine mining district September 17. The flag was raised by Archer Martin, head of the British Commission and Justice of the Supreme Court of British Columbia. Martin issued a declaration that American owners of mines must have their titles confirmed by the commission. The American miners are hotly indignant over the matter and threaten trouble."

American owners of American mines must have the titles of their own property confirmed by British officials, paying American money in fees to British appointees. And the "flag of the free" is trailed across the mud and ice to a new frontier which England designates.

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT D. D. THE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: A Precious Burden—Scion of the House of David in Jehosheba's Arms—A Lesson From the Slaughter of the Princes—Loyal Children to Christ.

[Copyright 1899.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse on a neglected incident of the Bible Dr. Talmage draws some comforting lessons, and shows that all around us are royal pictures that we may help deliver. The text is II. Kings xi, 2, 3: "Jehosheba, the daughter of King Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash, the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain, and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain. And he was with her hid in the house of the Lord six years."

Grandmothers are more lenient with their children's children than they were with their own. At forty years of age if discipline be necessary chastisement is used, but at seventy the grandmother, looking upon the misbehavior of the grandchild in apologetic and disposed to substitute confectionery for whip. There is nothing more beautiful than childhood. Grandmother takes out her pocket handkerchief and wipes her spectacles and puts them on and looks down into the face of her mischievous and rebellious descendant and says: "I don't think he meant to do it. Let him off this time. I'll be responsible for his behavior in the future." My mother, with the second generation around her, a boisterous crew, said one day: "I suppose they ought to be disciplined, but I can't do it. Grandmothers are not fit to bring up grandchildren." But here in my text we have a grandmother of a different type.

I have been at Jerusalem, where the occurrence of the text took place, and the whole scene came vividly before me while I was going over the site of the ancient temple and climbing the towers of the king's palace. Here in the text it is old Athaliah, the royal murderess. She ought to have been honorable. Her father was a king. Her husband was a king. Her son was a king. And yet we find her plotting for the extermination of the entire royal family, including her own grandchildren. The executioners' knives are sharpened. The palace is red with the blood of princes and princesses. On all sides are shrieks and hands thrown up and struggle and death groan. No mercy! Kill! kill! But while the ivory floors of the palace run with carnage and the whole land is under the shadow of a great horror a fleet footed woman, a clergyman's wife, Jehosheba by name, stealthily approaches the imperial nursery, seizes upon the grandchild that had somehow as yet escaped massacre, wraps it up tenderly, but in haste, snuggles it against her, flies down the palace stairs, her heart in her throat lest she be discovered in this compassionate abduction. Get her out of the way as quick as you can, for she carries a precious burden, even a young king. With this youthful prize she presses into the room of the ancient temple, the church of olden time, unwraps the young king and puts him down, sound asleep as he is and unconscious of the peril that has been threatened, and there for six years he is secreted in that church apartment. Meanwhile old Athaliah smacks her lips with satisfaction and thinks that all the royal family are dead. But the six years expire, and it is time for young Joash to come forth and take the throne and to push back into disgrace and death old Athaliah.

The arrangements are all made for political revolution. The military come and take possession of the temple, swear loyalty to the boy Joash and stand around for his defense. See the sharpened swords and the burnished shields! Everything is ready. Now Joash, half affrighted at the armed tramp of his defenders, scared at the vociferation of his admirers, is brought forth in full regalia. The scroll of authority is put in his hands, the coronet of government is put on his brow, and the people clapped and waved and huzzaed and trumpeted. "What is that?" said Athaliah. "What is that sound over in the temple?" And she flies to see, and on her way they meet her and say: "Why, haven't you heard? You thought you had slain all the royal family, but Joash has come to light." Then the royal murderess, frantic with rage, grabbed her mantle and tore it to tatters and cried until she foamed at the mouth: "You have no right to crown my grandson. You have no right to take the government from my shoulders. Treason, treason!"

While she stood there crying the military started for her arrest, and she took a short cut through a back door of the temple and ran through the royal stables, but the battleaxes of the military fell on her in the barnyard, and for many a day when the horses were being unloosened from the chariot after drawing out young Joash the fiery steeds would snort and rear passing the place as they smell the place of the carnage.

The first thought I hand you from this subject is that the extermination of righteousness is an impossibility. When a woman is good she is apt to be very good, and when she is bad she is apt to be very bad, and this Athaliah was one of the latter sort. She would exterminate the last scion of the house of David, through whom Jesus was to come. There was plenty of work for embalmers and undertakers. She would clear the land of all God fearing and God loving people. She would put an end to everything that could in anywise interfere with her imperial criminality. She folds her hands and says: "The work is done. It is completely done." Is it? In the swaddling clothes of that church apartment are wrapped the cause of God and the cause of good government. That is the scion of the house of David. It is Joash, the God-worshiping reformer. It is Joash, the friend of God. It is Joash, the demoralizer of Baalitish idolatry. Rock him tenderly, nurse him gently. Athaliah, you may kill all the other children, but you cannot kill him. Eternal defenses are thrown all around him, and this clergyman's wife, Jehosheba, will snatch him up from the palace nursery and will run down with him into the house of the Lord, and there she will hide him for six years, and at the end of that time he will come forth for your dethronement and obliteration.

Well, my friends, just as poor a botch does the world always make of extinguishing righteousness. Superstition rises up and says, "I will just put an end to pure religion." Domitian slew 40,000 Christians, Diocletian slew 844,000 Christians. And the scythe of persecution has been swung through all the ages, and the flames hissed and the guillotine chopped, and the Bastile groaned, but did the foes of Christianity exterminate it? Did they exterminate Alban, the first British sacrifice, or Zwingli, the Swiss reformer, or John Oldcastle, the Christian nobleman, or Abdallah, the Arabian martyr, or Anne Askew or Sanders or Cranmer? Great work of extermination they made of it. Just at the time when they thought they had slain all the royal family of Jesus some Joash would spring up and out and take the throne of power and wield a very scepter of Christian dominion.

Infidelity says, "I will exterminate the Bible," and the Scriptures were thrown into the street for the mob to trample on, and they were piled up in the public squares and set on fire, and mountains of indignant contempt were hurled on them, and learned universities decreed the Bible out of existence. Thomas Paine said: "In my 'Age of Reason' I have annihilated the Scriptures. Your Washington is a pusillanimous Christian, but I am the foe of Bibles and of churches." Oh, how many results upon that word! All the hostilities that have ever been created on earth are not to be compared with the hostilities against that one book. Said one man in his infidel desperation to his wife, "You must not be reading that Bible," and he snatched it away from her. And though in that Bible was a lock of hair of the dead child—the only child that God had ever given them—he pitched the book with its contents into the fire and stirred it with the tongs and spat on it and cursed it and said, "Susan, never have any more of that damnable stuff here."

How many individual and organized attempts have been made to exterminate that Bible? Have its enemies done it? Have they exterminated the American, the British and Foreign Bible Society? Have they exterminated the thousands of Christian institutions whose only object it is to multiply copies of the Scriptures and spread them broadcast around the world? They have exterminated until instead of one or two copies of the Bible in our houses we have eight or ten, and we pile them up in the corners of our Sabbath school rooms and send great boxes of them everywhere. If they get on as well as they are now going on in the work of extermination, I do not know but that our children may live to see the millennium. Yea, if there should come a time of persecution in which all the known Bibles of the earth should be destroyed, all these lamps of life that blaze in our pulpits and in our families extinguished, in the very day that infidelity and sin should be holding jubilee over the universal extinction there would be in some closet of a backwoods church a secreted copy of the Bible and this Joash of eternal literature would come out and come up and take the throne, and the Athaliah of infidelity and persecution would fly out the back door of the palace and drop her miserable carcass under the hoofs of the horses of the king's stables. You cannot exterminate Christianity. You cannot kill Joash!

The second thought I hand you from my subject is that there are opportunities in which you may save royal life. You know that profane history is replete with stories of strangled monarchs and of young princes who have been put out of the way. Here is the story of a young king saved. How Jehosheba, the clergyman's wife, must have trembled as she rushed into the imperial nursery and snatched up Joash! How she hushed him lest by his cry he hinder the escape! Fly with him, Jehosheba! You hold in your arms the cause of God and good government. Fell and he is slain. Succeed, and you turn the tide of the world's history in the right direction. It seems as if between that young king and his assassins there is nothing but the frail arm of a woman. But why should we spend our time in praising this bravery of expedition when God asks the same thing of you and me? All around us the imperiled children of a great king. They are born of Almighty parentage, and will come to a throne or a crown if permitted. But sin, the old Athaliah, goes forth to the massacre. Murderous temptations are out for the assassination. Valens, the Emperor, was told that there was somebody in his realm who would usurp his throne, and that the name of the man who should be the usurper would begin with the letters T. H. E. O. D, and the edict went forth from the Emperor's throne, "Kill everybody whose name begins with T. H. E. O. D." And hundreds of thousands were slain, hoping by that massacre to put an end to that one usurper. But sin is more terrific in its denunciation. It matters not how you spell your name, you come under its knife, under its sword, under its doom, unless there be some omnipotent relief brought to the rescue. But, blessed be God, there is such a thing as delivering a royal soul. Who will snatch away Joash?

How few of us appreciate the fact that the church of God is a hiding place. There are many people who put the church at so low a mark that they begrudge it everything, even the few dollars they give toward it. They make no sacrifices. They dole a little out of their surplusage. They pay their butcher's bill, and they pay their doctor's bill, and they pay their landlord, and they pay everybody but the Lord, and they come in at the last to pay the Lord in His church and frown as they say: "There, Lord, it is. Send me a receipt in full, and don't bother me soon again!"

There is not more than one man out of a thousand that appreciates what the church is. Where are the souls that put aside one-tenth for Christian institutions—one-tenth of their income? Where are those who, having put aside that one-tenth draw upon it cheerfully? Why, it is dull and drag and a hold on and grab and clutch, and giving is an affliction to most people when it ought to be an exhilaration and a rapture.

Oh, that God would remodel our souls on this subject and that we might appreciate the house of God as the great refuge! If your children are to come up to lives of virtue and happiness, they will come up under the shadow of the church. If the church does not get them, the world will.

Ah, when you pass away—and it will not be long before you do—when you pass away, it will be a satisfaction to see your children in Christian society. You want to have them sitting at the holy sacraments. You want them mingling in Christian associations. You would like to have them die in the sacred precincts.

When you are on your dying bed and your little ones come up to take your last word, and you look into their bewildered faces, you will want to leave them under the church's benediction. I do not care how hard you are, that is so.

And so, though you may have been wanderers from God, and though you may have sometimes caricatured the church of Jesus, it is your great desire that your sons and daughters should be standing all their lives within this sacred inclosure.

More than that. You yourself will want the church for a hiding place when the mortgage is foreclosed, when your daughter, just blooming into womanhood, suddenly clasps her hands in a slumber that knows no waking; when the gaunt trouble walks through the parlor and the sitting room and the dining hall and the nursery, you will want some shelter from the tempest. Ah, some of you have been run upon by misfortune and trial. Why do you not come into the shelter?

I said to a widowed mother after she had buried her only son—months after—I said to her, "How do you get along nowadays?" "Oh," she replied, "I get along tolerably well except when the sun shines." I said, "What do you mean by that?" when she said: "I can't bear to see the sun shine. My heart is so dark that all the brightness of the natural world seems a mockery to me."

O darkened soul! O broken hearted man, broken hearted woman! Why do you not come into the shelter? I spring it from wall to wall. Come in! Come in! You want a place where your troubles shall be interpreted, where your burdens shall be unstrapped, where your tears shall be wiped away.

Church of God, be a hiding place to all these people! Give them a seat where they can rest their weary souls. Flash some light from your chandeliers upon their darkness. With some soothing hymn hush these griefs.

Oh, church of God, gate of heaven, let me go through it! All other institutions are going to fall but the church of God—its foundation is the Rock of Ages; its charter is for everlasting years, its keys are held by the universal Proprietor, its dividend is heaven, its president is God!

"Sure as Thy truth shall be given
To Zion shall be given
The highest glories earth can yield
And brightest bliss of heaven."

God grant that all this audience, the youngest, the oldest, the worst, the best, may find their safe and glorious hiding place where Joash found it—in the temple.

God's Sympathy Always Free.

The late Dr. W. M. Baxter preached a sermon [illegible] shall come down like rain upon mown grass," in which [illegible] and skill of which he was showed how the most [illegible] the condition to be entered, and in how many ways [illegible] rain ministers to the needs of the [illegible] drawing therefrom unspeakable comfort and consolation [illegible] trim. It was a beautiful [illegible] the peculiar receptivity [illegible] have been afflicted and [illegible] accept affliction in a [illegible] for the peculiar benefits [illegible] can bestow at the [illegible] no other mood. God [illegible] through and through, and [illegible] a mistake in dealing with [illegible] we might never learn, separately, [illegible] the possibilities of the [illegible] derness and compassion [illegible] reduced by sorrow in some form [illegible] a state as to need them. [illegible] whole side of the divine [illegible] which is revealed in our [illegible] but for affliction, might go [illegible] unnoticed. The price [illegible] ing, even by suffering [illegible] brings this precious [illegible] divine presence and [illegible] other time does our [illegible] appear more winsome [illegible] sympathy always is [illegible] we are conscious of [illegible] cause at no other time is our [illegible] need equally great, at no other [illegible] his revelation of himself [illegible] hearts so unspeakably sweet and [illegible] ing. Like the gentle summer rain [illegible] falls softly and is absorbed into [illegible] the grass which has been [illegible] cropped, so the ministrations [illegible] descends upon the stricken [illegible] to soothe and fortify the [illegible] strengthen it. The gentleness [illegible] made me great," said the psalmist [illegible] ly it must have been as he looked [illegible] upon a time of affliction or [illegible] some kind that he said it.

The Scent of Sweetness.

I walked over a meadow, and [illegible] was full of delicious fragrance. [illegible] could see no flowers. There [illegible] grass waving on all sides, but [illegible] grance did not come from the [illegible] Then I parted the grass and looked [illegible] neath it, and there, close to the [illegible] hidden out of sight by the [illegible] growths in the meadow, were [illegible] tudes of lowly little flowers. I [illegible] the secret of the sweetness—[illegible] out from these humble, hiding [illegible] This is a picture of what is true [illegible] where in life. Not from the [illegible] conspicuous, the famed in any [illegible] ty, comes the fragrance which [illegible] sweetens the air, but from the [illegible] hidden, obscure, unpraised, where [illegible] out the aroma of unselfishness, [illegible] ness, of gentleness. In many [illegible] is from the room of an invalid [illegible] ferer, that the sweetness [illegible] fills all the house. We know [illegible] from the cross of Christ that [illegible] lowing influence flowed [illegible] these centuries has been reaching [illegible] riching and softening the world. [illegible] So it is always—out of weakness, [illegible] suffering, and from crushed [illegible] lives, comes the blessing that [illegible] and heals the world.

"The healing of the [illegible]
Is in its nameless saints."

—J. R. Miller, D. D., in "The [illegible] of Character."

Touching the Divine Spirit.

We need the seeing eye, the [illegible] ear, the feeling heart. Do you [illegible] catch brief and fugitive glimpses [illegible] hidden sacredness in the faces [illegible] the occupations of life, in the [illegible] scenes and places? I do. I [illegible] other day in Burnet Woods [illegible] at the summit of a hill [illegible] stood a sentinel line of [illegible] brown leaves still clinging [illegible] their bared limbs in shreds [illegible] like the worn garments of [illegible] beggars. I had looked long [illegible] one of those fits of abstraction [illegible] the soul seems unconsciously [illegible] yearning for and searching [illegible] crets of the universe, and [illegible] spiritual beauty which lurks [illegible] landscape, when suddenly it [illegible] me for an instant and was [illegible] not describe it. I could not [illegible] had vanished utterly, but I [illegible] I had seen it! My heart [illegible] bosom heaved, my eyes filled [illegible] I had touched in some way [illegible] the garment of the Divine [illegible] It was a mystery, but it was [illegible] and I have perceived it often [illegible] and times, and occupations, [illegible] but it flits as quickly as it [illegible] Charles Frederic Goss in [illegible] Misses."

Trusting in God.

We bless Thee, Heavenly Father, [illegible] we know thee; all the way [illegible] ly life thou hast held our hand, [illegible] walked with thee, and we [illegible] thou art Love. In the hour [illegible] we have offered our sacrifice, [illegible] now that the dark hour [illegible] heart is fixed, trusting in thee, [illegible] fering we discover—new [illegible] fresh every evening—the [illegible] abiding. The burden of [illegible] shows to more thy love. [illegible] ment, loneliness, make [illegible] and out from the ashes of [illegible] pain springs the deeper, [illegible] eternal peace of the soul [illegible] thee. Through Jesus Christ [illegible] thee, Father, and give [illegible] praise. Amen.

The quiet way of doing [illegible] best and most effective [illegible] moves the planets with [illegible] we make moving a [illegible] rolls through the street.

I trust in God, whatever His

Whatever clouds obscure my sun
He sends and guides them all.

I am not wise to frame a creed,
Or talk of things divine
I only draw a little right and
A fanciful boundary line.

I cannot tell what saints shall fill
The shining courts above,
I only know this blessed truth,
That God is boundless love.

And knowing this, I cannot fix

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 4.

Subject: The Unjust Steward, Luke xvi. 1-13 — Golden Text: Luke xvi., 13 — Memory Verses, 10-12 — Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

1. "Unto His disciples." This parable was spoken primarily to "His disciples," but the Pharisees were present listening carefully, and when He was through they derided Him. V. 14. The disciples to whom this parable was addressed were not merely the apostles, but those publicans and sinners whom Jesus had received, to the great displeasure of the Pharisees. "A certain rich man." This rich man can only represent God, who is possessor of all things. "A steward." All the children of men are stewards of what they have in this world. "Was accused." The rich man had put confidence in his steward before this, and had allowed him great liberty in managing his affairs. "Had wasted." Was wasting. R. V. He was either dishonest or careless and suffered his master's goods to be lost.

2. "Give an account." Bring your accounts for inspection. Produce books and vouchers. "No longer steward." The steward did not deny the charges against him, and was told plainly that he could not retain his position. The time is coming when we will be required to give an account of our stewardship, and if we have wasted that which has been committed to our trust we will receive no more favor than did this steward.

3. "What shall I do?" The steward began to consider the course he had better pursue so that when he was dismissed from the stewardship he could still maintain a livelihood. "I cannot dig." He could not work at manual labor for lack of strength. See R. V.

4. "I am resolved what to do." An idea comes to him by which he will make many friends, so that when he is put out of the stewardship they will invite him into their houses.

5. "Of his lord's debtors." His plan was, during the remaining time that he was yet steward, to show favor to all who owed his master, so that when he was dismissed they would show favor to him. "Unto the first." Two specimen cases are given here, but so he went through the whole list, making reductions to all.

6. "A hundred measures of oil." A hundred baths. Each bath was equivalent to seven or eight gallons. "Sit down quickly." Evidently a secret and hurried arrangement; the debtors, too, seem to have been dealt with separately and privately. "And write fifty." The steward made this debtor a present of about 400 gallons of oil.

7. "A hundred measures of wheat." A hundreds cors or homers. The cor contained ten baths. The original debt was 800 to 1000 bushels. "Write four-score." Making him a present of about 200 bushels.

8. "And his lord commended," (R. V.)—The rich man commended the shrewdness of his wicked steward. What he had done was dishonest in the extreme. "Done wisely." He had acted skilfully. "The children of this world." Those who seek earthly things as their chief good. "Are for their own generation," (R. V.)—That is, in looking after their worldly interests. "Wiser." More skilful in the application of means to obtain temporal good, than Christians are to obtain eternal good.

9. "I say unto you." The truths to be learned from this parable are focused in the teachings of this verse. Jesus draws a lesson for us from the course pursued by this dishonest steward. "Make to yourselves friends." Not merely acquaintances in this world, but make "friends" in that deeper sense referred to by Jesus in John 15: 14, 15. That is, do all you can to lead people to Christ and thus make true "friends," of Christians. "By means of the mammon of unrighteousness." (R. V.)—The word "mammon" is a Chaldee word signifying riches. It is here called the mammon of unrighteousness, as being with unrighteous men the great object of pursuit, and too commonly sought, morover, by unrighteous means. In a wider sense the mammon of unrighteousness has reference to whatever of earthly goods we may possess, "be they," as Ederaheim says, "of money, of knowledge, of strength, or of opportunities." We are, then, to so use whatever God has put in our hands that these earthly possessions will be the means of making "friends," or of brining people to Christ and heaven. "That when ye fail." That when it shall fail (R. V.); when your stewardship in this world shall end. "They may receive you." That is, the friends you have made, by bestowing your earthly goods in deeds of love and mercy, will welcome you. Matt. 25: 34-46. "Into the eternal tabernacles." (R. V.)—Into heaven. 2 Cor. 5: 1.

10. "Faithful." As God's steward. "In that which is least." Our Saviour teaches that it is not the quantity committed to us that God will regard, but our fidelity in using it; we are as thoroughly tried by a small as by a large amount of property or influence. Character is as really tested by little things as by great things. "He that is unjust in the least." Little acts of wrong show that we have unholy hearts. To intentionally cheat another out of five cents would as really prove a man dishonest as though it were a thousand dollars. We need not thank to excuse our sins because they are small, or few. Poison enough can be put on the point of a needle to kill a man. It is the "little foxes that spoil the vines."

11. "Have not been faithful." If we have not carefully and properly used the things of this world with which God has entrusted us, we need not expect that He will give us the true riches of grace and glory and heavenly treasures.

12. "Which is another man's." Our earthly possessions are called "another's" (R. V.) because, 1. They belong to God. 2. They are continually changing their possessors, and going from one to another. "That which is your own." Spiritual and eternal riches are our own. They enter into the soul that becomes possessed of them. If we make Christ and the promises and heaven ours, we have that which we may truly call our own.

13. "Two masters." The heart will be either wholly taken up with God or wholly engrossed with the world. A man cannot be in perfect indifference between two objects which are incompatible: he will be inclined to despise and hate whatever he does not love supremely, when the necessity of a choice presents itself. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." So divided are their interests that their services can never be joined. If we decide to serve the Lord we must forsake the service of the world. There is no concord between Christ and Belial. When the Christian undertakes to live the life of the worldling he sinks to the level of the worldling and thus ceases to be a Christian.

Marble Exhibit at the Fair.

The marble shaft from the quarry of the Alabama Marble and Stone company, of Talladega county, was received at the fair grounds in Birmingham Saturday. This is said to be the largest single shaft of marble ever rotten out in this country. It is about thirty-three feet high and two and a half feet thick. It weighs about 85,000 pounds, or seventeen and a half tons.

GUILT PURSUED THEM

ELOPERS FOUND THE WORLD TOO SMALL.

This Couple Couldn't Find a Hiding Place on Earth—A Divorce Wanted—Arrest Averted a Bloody Tragedy.

"I never knew until now how small this world is and what little chance a person has of hiding in it," wrote Mrs. Julia Falcone of 552 Second avenue, New York, to her well-to-do tailor husband, who had sent her to Europe for her health. His brother, Giovanni Falcone, it is alleged, had found her visiting the Paris fair with Guiseppi Cavalieri, her husband's barber.

Falcone has brought suit for absolute divorce and has sued Cavalieri, who is wealthy and lives at 305 East Thirtieth street, for $30,000 damages for alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

Falcone began to patronize Cavalieri's barber shop two years ago, and soon became friendly with the barber. Cavalieri often called at Falcone's house, and, according to her husband's complaint, became infatuated with Mrs. Falcone. She reciprocated his affection, it is said, and grew cold toward her husband, who declares that for two years his wife cooked the barber's dinner and sent it to his shop. At the time the husband did not know this.

Mrs. Falcone complained that her health was undermined. Her husband bought her a ticket for the steamship Patria, and she sailed for Marseilles April 10. Three weeks later the husband swears he received a letter from his brother, who lives in France, saying he had seen his wife at the Paris exposition with Cavalieri.

Falcone, a short time ago, received information that Cavalieri was coming back to this country to dispose of his house, and in the future would live abroad. He also received a letter from his wife stating she had run off with the barber because she loved him and no longer cared for her husband.

Cavalieri arrived in New York a few days ago. The husband obtained an order for his arrest from Judge Dugro, and he was lodged in Ludlow street jail. He is now held under $1,000 bonds to await the outcome of the suit.

A. J. Olshei of 302 Broadway, the husband's lawyer, told a reporter that Cavalieri's arrest saved his life, as his client was waiting for him in a hallway, intending to shoot him on sight

Rich Men Too Greedy.

If I had my way there would be a law requiring men to retire from business as soon as they gain a competency, says a writer in the New York Press. Our population is increasing so rapidly that there is nothing for the newcomers to do. The aged encumber the ground. We don't want the dear old veterans to die, but to retire to ease and comfort on the interest of their investments. What a happy jolly, contented world this would be if the successful man should step down and out at 50 and give the boys a chance. But he will never do it. He works harder at 60 than at 40, harder at 70 than at 30. It is a kind of insanity. The poor, starved, friendless creature is obliged to toil on and die in his poverty, but the rich man, the fortunate millionaire, toils on because his soul is filled with greed for gold and dies in his riches poorer than the other.

Growth of the Button Industry.

The shell or button industry on the upper Mississippi river is growing to enormous proportions. The crew of the Gen. Barnard have had occasion to observe this. They report that on their down trip between La Crosse, Wis., and Clarkesville, Mo., they counted 1,627 men and women in the main channel of the river engaged in getting out shells from the stream. About a year ago they counted only 716. Of course there are a great many in the sloughs behind the islands, etc., that were not counted. They estimate that no less than 6,000 people earn a living gathering shells. Just below Dubuque 120 were counted in one patch. Button factories have been established in every town along the river and in Muscatine there are twenty-two. Five or six steamboats of 100 tons capacity do nothing else but tow shells.

Yale Graduates.

Of the graduates of Yale university from 1895 to 1899 only 29 per cent were from New England, while 38 per cent were from the middle Atlantic states, 22 per cent from the north central states and 7 per cent from the South. It is also a striking fact that a large proportion of the graduates adopt business careers. At the beginning of the century a mere handful became business men, while now the percentage is one-third, another third entering the law.

Found a Submarine Volcano.

The British cruiser Ringarooma, while practicing recently off the New Hebrides, lost a torpedo, which sunk suddenly at seventeen fathoms. Three divers attempted to descend and recover it, but were unable, as they came upon a submarine volcano in activity. The water below the surface was boiling hot; the men bled from the ears and the nose, and their diving dress was injured by the heat.

FORESTS FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Pennsylvania Mountains May Be Changed to Resorts.

State Forestry Commissioner Bothrock, who, with other members of the commission has completed an inspection of the forests of Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, has outlined in brief the purpose of the state in acquiring large tracts, says the Philadelphia Ledger. He said: "The duty of the commission is to purchase three timber reservations of 40,000 acres each at the headwaters of the three principal rivers, the Delaware, Susquehanna and Ohio. The idea of these forest preserves is to raise timber on ground that will not produce anything else. The state wants to put the timber back, and cultivate and rear forests of the same order as the extensive Black Forest in Germany was started. The culmination in our present ideas may not be in this generation. It took Germany 200 years to make the famous Black Forest what it is now. But the United States will probably make as much progress in that line in fifty years as Germany has done in two centuries. The climate of Pennsylvania is far more healthful than that of any other state in the Union, but the people do not know it. Besides, they can not enjoy outdoor life at present without trespassing on some one's or some corporation's domains. There will be no need for our citizens to go to the Adirondacks, to Colorado, California, Florida or elsewhere when we have got these timber preserves in full operation, for healthful outdoor recreation. One out of every 1,000 persons dies of pulmonary consumption in the Adirondacks region, while in the Keystone State the rate is only one in every 1,330 persons. It is only a question of time when Pennsylvania will be called upon to take care of its consumptives, and find a way to prevent the spread of that dreaded disease. Our state timber reservations will be the remedy to help the state out of that dilemma."

HOW WEAK CHILDREN ARE MADE STRONG, VIGOROUS AND WELL

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., have cause to thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for restoring to health, and probably preserving the life of their little son. Almost from infancy Everett Hallows was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles, and nothing seemed to help him. Finally Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended and tried with success. A few bottles were sufficient to effect a cure, and to-day the little one is enjoying the best of health. By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the sickly child was transformed into a happy, hearty, robust boy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura | for the Blood and Nerves

Thousands of other children can thank Dr. Greene and his wonderful remedy for the strength and health they enjoy. Children to whom it is given have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. Parents should realize that it is their duty to give it to every child who is not in perfect health. There are no diseases more dreaded by parents than fits, epilepsy, and St. Vitus' dance. Yet no child would be troubled by them if Dr. Greene's Nervura were given when the first symptoms appear.

Charles L. McBay, a highly esteemed police officer, who resides at 14 Myrtle St., New Bedford, Mass., says:

"About two years ago my little daughter became run down in health and suffered from St. Vitus' dance. Soon after she was prostrated by rheumatism, which severely affected her low limbs.

"After trying various remedies without obtaining relief, she began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and experienced immediate benefit. She continued its use, and after taking five bottles her rheumatism was practically cured. Her appetite returned, her pains disappeared, she was again able to walk without lameness, her general health was restored, and she was able to attend school and to play like other children."

Dr. Greene's Nervura, blood and nerve remedy, is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York City, who is the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic complaints, and he can be consulted in any case, free of charge, personally or by letter.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE "NECESSARY" MAGAZINE

The best-informed men and women in the world use the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS to keep well informed, and call it the "necessary" and "indispensable" magazine. In the busy rush of to-day ambitious men and women must know about the important questions of the month, and not only this, they want to know about them at the right time. When the whole country is puzzled over the gigantic combination of trusts, a well-informed article is printed in the AMERICAN MONTHLY, giving the facts, and its editor discusses the theory; when the Dreyfus affair is in everyone's mouth, the best story of Dreyfus and the great case comes out in this magazine.

Every month, in "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw gives a comprehensive picture of the world's history during the previous thirty days. In the departments, the valuable articles and books that have been published during the past month are reviewed and quoted from, so that the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY can get the gist of them. In every issue nearly a hundred pictures are printed, including the portraits of the men and women who are making the history of the month.

To be thoroughly well informed helps any man or woman in his or her work. A subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS represents an investment for the best kind of profit, as well as entertainment. One subscriber has just written: "Count me a life subscriber, and when you send me a number beyond the limit of my subscription and secure no renewal from me, consider it a notice of my death."

Price 25 cents per number, $2.50 a year.

A sample copy will be sent on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

A Chinese Solomon.

Three men appeared before a judge in Honan, China, and each laid claim to the same woman as his wife. Not one of them would retire in favor of the other two, but each insisted that justice should be done to him. Finally the judge exclaimed, "Well, if you three men cannot come to some agreement nothing remains for me but to order that the woman shall be killed, as there is no other way in which the matter can be satisfactorily settled." He then called for a large cup of wine, and when it was brought he poured into it some dark powder and compelled the woman to drink it. Excited as she was, the woman speedily began to feel the effect of the strong liquor. She stammered when she tried to speak, and her flushed cheeks were an indication to the observers that the poison was working and that her end was near at hand.

This was the climax for which the judge had waited. When he saw that the woman was apparently dying, he called one of the three men who claimed her as wife and bade him remove her from the courtroom. This man, however, showed no inclination to do so, and the judge thereupon insisted that he renounce all rights to her. This he willingly did and so did the second man. Only one claimant was now left, and he agreed to remove the woman and to care for her until she died. Satisfied that he was her real husband, the judge called him and said: "You will not be sorry for acting in this manner. Have no fear for your wife, since she is in no danger of death. The liquor which she has drunk was ordinary wine, and the powder which I poured into it was nothing but brown sugar."

English Red Tape.

At the present time, when the system of red tape is being attacked and ridiculed, the following somewhat amusing methods of dealing with matters are still adopted in one of the great government departments.

For instance, a hairbrush and comb must be purchased under the head of service "clothing," whereas a toothbrush is under "fuel" and spectacles under "medicines." A clothesbasket is "clothing," but clothes pegs are "incidentals." The funniest of all, however, are guano and straw, they being purchased under "victualing."

A good instance of red tape is told in connection with the office. An officer had entered in the inquiry column of his return: "March 13. Dog dead." This did not satisfy his superior, who told him to inquire again, which the obedient officer did, recording: "April 10. Dog still dead."—London Standard.

Encouraged to Hope.

When the Empress Frederick, eldest daughter of Queen Victoria, was a little girl, her disposition, to the great grief of the queen, was haughty and arrogant. Once, when about to embark on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, she was lifted across to the deck of the boat by one of the sailors, who, as he was putting her down gently, said, "There you are, my little lady."

"I am not a 'little lady;' I am a princess!" was the prompt and indignant reply. The queen, who had overheard the conversation, detained the man with gesture, and, turning to her spoiled little daughter, said:

"Tell the kind sailor that you are much indebted to him for his civility and that, although you are not a 'little lady' yet, you confidently hope to merit the title before long."

Got Their Fees Answer.

McJigger—Young Dr. Downs recently made $50 in a guessing contest.

Thingumbob—The only one who guessed correctly, eh?

McJigger—Oh, no. Two other doctors got the same, and all three of them guessed wrong. You see, they were called in consultation over a patient.—Philadelphia Press.

Stanton.

Mr. Marvin Fuqua and Miss Bama Clanton of Dunkinsville, were happily married last Thursday and came down to Stanton Friday for a few days visit to relatives. The couple will reside at Dunkinsville; we wish them much happiness and a long prosperous life.

The cool weather came last week and give us a chance to get into our winter suits.

Happiness entered the home of Mr and Mrs. John Gantt Monday night by the arrival of a fine girl baby. Rev Windsor, of Brierfield, was in town Monday. Mr J H Sexton, of Adams, paid relatives a visit here Monday. Mr and Mrs Lee Parnell paid the former's parents a visit at Riderville Sunday.

Mr C C McDowell and his sister, Miss Mary, of Clanton, paid friends a pleasant visit here recently.

Not Too Dead.

"I am not prepared to state that the dead can come to life," said a Pennsylvania man, "but the experience of a friend of mine in a Pennsylvania German town would seem to incline one that way.

"In the town where he was visiting he became acquainted with the local undertaker and in that way was enabled to be present at the funeral of a young woman who had expired from shock at seeing her husband fall from a load of hay. He was not hurt at all, but she was, to all intents and purposes, as dead as the proverbial door nail. The body was laid out in the parlor, and all the relatives and friends had assembled to pay their last respects to the dead.

"As is customary in that locality, a big funeral dinner was served. In the midst of the meal the parlor door opened and in walked the corpse. It didn't take a minute to clear the room, leaving the intruder from the spirit world in sole possession. The undertaker finally plucked up courage to return to the dining room and found his subject enjoying a hearty meal after her enforced fast.

"Her first question was, 'Was Jake hurt much?'"—Philadelphia Record.

Ancient Sundials.

It is probable that the earliest sundial was simply the spear of some nomad chief stuck upright in the ground before his tent. Among those desert wanderers, keen to observe their surroundings, it would not be a difficult thing to notice that the shadow shortened as the sun rose higher in the sky and that the shortened shadow always pointed in the same direction—north. The recognition would have followed very soon that this noonday shadow changed in its length from day to day. A six foot spear would give a shadow at noonday in latitude 40 degrees of 12 feet at one time of the year, of less than two feet at another.

This instrument, so simple, so easily carried, so easily set up, may well have begun the scientific study of astronomy, for it lent itself to measurement, and science is measurement, and probably we see it expressed in permanent form in the obelisks of Egyptian solar temples, though these no doubt were retained merely as solar reflectors even after their use as actual instruments of observation had ceased. An upright stick carefully pounded standing on some level surface may therefore well make the first advance upon the natural horizon. A look at the top of the stick will be found to render the shadow more easily observed.—R. Walter Maunder in Knowledge.

FEDERAL POSTAL REPORT.

Magnificent Progress of the Service is Shown.

The report of the auditor of the postoffice department covering the fiscal year ended June 30, 1900, shows that the total revenues for the department for that period were $102,354,579 and the expenditures $107,249,298, leaving a deficit of $4,894,718. The amount of stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers and postal cards sold during the year was $94,013,699. The amount of second-class postage collected from publishers and news agents was $3,825,389.

The inland mail transportation account shows a total expenditure of $54,781,599 and the foreign account an expenditure of $1,956,701. The receipts from the domestic money order system during the year is shown to have been $1,915,462, and the expenditures $668,867, net revenue of $1,246,596. Notwithstanding this favorable showing, the auditor says that if charged its proper share of the expenses of the service there would be shown a net loss of at least $100,000 annually.

The report shows that the population of the United States in 1790 was 4,000,000; in 1900 it is over 76,000,000. The wealth of the people in real and personal property probably aggregated $2,000,000,000 in 1790, and is conservatively estimated at $80,000,000,000 in 1900. The number of postoffices was seventy-nine in 1790, and is 76,691 in 1900. The postal revenues were $37,975 in 1790 and $102,354,579 in 1900.

Therefore, while the population of the country has increased 19 to 1 in 110 years, and the wealth of the people 40 to 1, the number of postoffices has increased 1,000 to 1 and the revenues of the service 2,700 to 1.

HOT FIGHT WITH CHINESE.

Anglo-German Force Meets With Stubborn Resistance.

A dispatch from Ichow dated October 28, says heavy fighting has occurred in the mountains on the Shansi frontier. An Anglo-German force of 1,500 men, commanded by Colonel Von Norman, stormed Tzching-Kung Pass. The Chinese occupied a strong position on the crest and stubbornly resisted. They poured a hot infilading fire on the advance party of eighty Germans under Maj. Von Forrester, but the British Bengal cavalry and Mounted Sappers dismounted, scaled the heights and turned the enemy's flank and relieved the Germans.

American Firm Wins.

In competition with European manufacturers, says a London dispatch, an American steel company has obtained an order for $5,000,000 worth of rolling stock for South African railways. Wehner, Belt & Co., one of the great South African mining corporations, asked for a bid on coal wagons, to be delivered to the mines at the earliest possible date. The Pressed Steel Car Company, of Pittsburg, is the successful bidder.

Aguinaldo Killed Again.

James C. Hussey, of National City, Cal., has received a letter from James Thompson, a private in C company, Twenty-seventh infantry, written while he was in the hospital at Manila, and dated September 1, in which the writer says that a young Filipino occupying a bed next to him in the hospital stated that Aguinaldo was really shot dead as reported some time ago, but that it was to be kept quiet for political reasons.

The extemporaneous prayer in conventions and public meetings is a relic of the past. The up-to-date minister now prepares his supplication in advance, furnishes it to the papers, and the "release" of a prayer at any great public function takes its place with the "release" of whatever addresses may be made by more or less distinguished citizens.

THE REPUBLICANS ARE VICTORIOUS

Returns Indicate the Election of McKinley and Roosevelt by Overwhelming Majority.

DOUBTFUL STATES GO AGAINST DEMOCRATS

Indications Point to a Republican Majority in Congress—Maryland and Indiana in the McKinley Column—Kentucky Hangs in the Balance—Roll of the States Given—Claims of Various Managers.

New York, November 6.—It became evident at a very early hour this evening that the election of McKinley and Roosevelt was assured. At 8:30 o'clock returns from nearly two-thirds of the election districts of Greater New York had been received, indicating beyond question that Bryan and Stevenson could not expect more than 25,000 or 30,000 plurality in this democratic stronghold, and unless there was a landslide in the outside counties beyond all reasonable expectation, the pivotal state of New York had declared in unmistakable terms, although by a greatly reduced majority, for the republican candidates.

The returns from Illinois betrayed a like condition.

In Ohio, the returns from Indiana, Michigan, the two Dakotas, Utah and Wyoming, as well as Nebraska, seemed to indicate strong republican gains over 1896. Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia had given decisive republican pluralities.

The count in several of the far western states was so delayed as to give little indication of the outcome there, but they had ceased to have a determining character, and before 10 o'clock the democratic leaders had given up the contest and it was announced that Mr. Bryan had gone to bed and was sound asleep. The rest of the story was easily and briefly told. The republican ticket would have a larger electoral vote than four years ago, but in the larger states of the east and middle west, the pluralities had been greatly reduced.

Massachusetts had fallen from 174,000 to 80,000; New York from 268,000 to 135,000, and Illinois from 142,000 to 100,000 or less.

The roll call of the states at this hour is apparently as follows:

FOR M'KINLEY.

Connecticut, 6; Delaware, 3; Illinois, 24; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Massachusetts, 15; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 9; New Hampshire, 4; New Jersey, 10; New York, 36; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 23; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 4; Vermont, 4; West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 12; California, 9; Oregon, 4; Washington, 4; Total, 264.

FOR BRYAN.

Alabama, 11; Arkansas, 8; Colorado, 4; Florida, 4; Georgia, 13; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 17; Montana, 3; North Carolina, 11; South Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 15; Utah, 3; Virginia, 12; Nevada, 3. Total, 142.

IN DOUBT.

Idaho, 3; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 13; Nebraska, 8; South Dakota, 4; Wyoming, 3. Total, 41.

If all the unreported states should turn out as democratic, a highly improbable contingency, it would not change the result. The first returns from Nebraska indicate a republican plurality. The Fifty-seventh congress seems to be republican by a working majority.

The gubernatorial tickets have apparently followed the national, and Odel is elected in New York and Yates in Illinois.

At Republican Headquarters.

A Chicago dispatch says: At 11 o'clock vice-chairman Payne of the republican national committee issued the following statement:

"McKinley has surely carried all the states claimed by me excepting possibly Kentucky, and returns indicate that we have beaten Bryan in Nebraska."

There was high good humor at republican headquarters all through the early part of the night and as the republicans kept on in a way to add to the good feeling, the crowd that thronged the headquarters rent the air with applause and cheers. A message from the president was received by Mr. Payne reading as follows:

"All New England, Maryland and West Virginia are in the republican column."

Stone Doesn't Give Up.

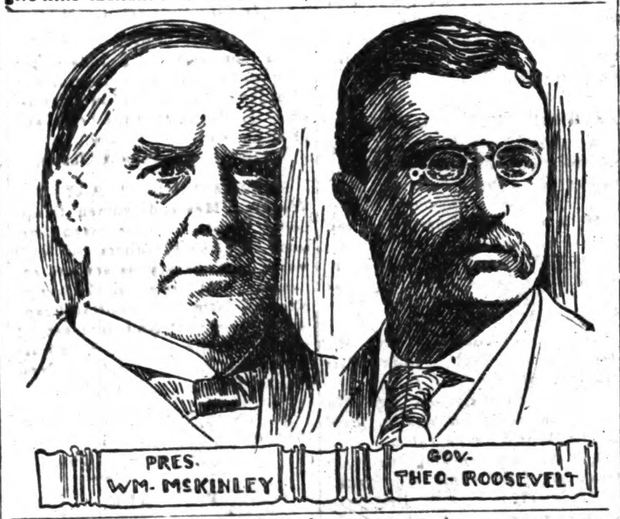
Ex-Governor Stone at midnight made the following statement:

"I don't give up. The returns telegraphed these headquarters from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, show that these states have gone republican. Returns from Maryland and West Virginia are incomplete. My information from the middle and western states is so indefinite that I cannot form an opinion as to the result."

Mr. Stone then closed the democratic national headquarters in New York for the night.

Complexion of Congress.

Returns received at Chicago from 272 of the 356 congressional districts show that the republicans have elected 141, the democrats 128, the fusionists 1, the silver republicans 1 and the populists 1.



RIOT AT DENVER, COL.

Two Officers Killed and Four Others Severely Wounded.

A dispatch from Denver, Col., says two men dead and four wounded, one of whom will probably die, was the result of a clash which occurred early Tuesday between members of the police force and a posse of deputy sheriffs at the polling place at Twenty-second and Larimer streets, in the down-town district.

Allen, a negro deputy sheriff, was shot and instantly killed, and Steward Harvey, white, policeman, died later.

Before a ballot was cast the trouble between the police department and the sheriff's office, which had been predicted, had begun, and one man was dead an four seriously wounded as the result.

Fifteen hundred special policemen had been sworn in for the day, and about 1,000 special deputies.

ELECTION IN AEAABMA.

Nine Democratic Congressmen Have Been Elected.

Returns received at a late hour Tuesday night indicate that Alabama will send to the next congress a solid delegation of democrats. With the exception of the fights in the Seventh and Fifth districts there was practically no opposition to the democratic candidates and the following men will probably compose the next congressional delegation from Alabama:

First district—George W. Taylor.
Second district—A. A. Wiley.
Third district—Henry D. Clayton.
Fourth district—Sidney J. Bowie.
Fifth district—Charles W. Thompson.
Seventh district—John L. Burnett.
Eighth district—William Richardson.
Ninth district—Oscar W. Underwood.

The contests in the Fifth and Seventh districts have been close and exciting, but every indication points to the election of both democratic candidates.

In the Seventh Congressman Burnett has defeated Mr. Spears, the republican-populist candidate, by 1800. Mr. Burnett carried Etowah by 1500 majority, Cherokee by 200, DeKalb by 200 and Cullman by 400. Spears succeeded in carrying only one county, receiving 500 majority in St. Clair.

News from the Fifth district is very meagre, but private messages from the friends of Colonel Thompson say that he has carried the district over Milstead, the republican candidate by a safe majority. In Coosa county the result will be very close. Goodwater beat, the largest precinct in the county, gave Milstead a small majority. Indications are that Clay county will give Milstead a very small majority. Lowndes county gave Thompson a large vote.

CHAIRMAN JONES

Says Later Returns Will Show a Decided Change.

Chicago, Ill.—At 10 o'clock tonight (Tuesday) Chairman Jones of the democratic committee said:

"I cannot predict the result. The returns are so insufficient as to preclude all possibility of a good guess. The figures from New York indicate that the republicans have carried the state, and I see that they are claiming Maryland and Ohio. The former claim may be right, but I am unable to say as to Ohio, for the reason that we do not yet know how the vote stands. The full returns will be late in coming in and they may make some surprising changes from the present apparent stand."

Ovation for McKinley.

At midnight Canton was in a frenzy of enthusiasm which knew no bounds. The crowds which had been burning red fire down town marched en masse to the McKinley residence with bands playing, rockets sending lurid streamers across the midnight sky and tumultuous cheers, mingled with the din of horns and steam whistles.

The crowd clamored for the president and he appeared, waving his acknowledgement of the deafening cheers. The president said:

"Fellow citizens: I thank you for the very great compliment of this call on this inclement night and at this late hour (cries of 'You're welcome'). Of the many gratifying reports from every part of the country none have given me more genuine and sincere gratitude than these from my one city and my own county of Stark. And I appear now only to do as I have done on so many former occasions, to thank you once more for the warm and hearty endorsement which you have today given my public acts."

GOV-ELECT SAMFORD ILL.

Suffering From an Attack of Acute Indigestion.

Governor-elect William J. Samford is seriously ill in Opelika.

Late Tuesday night the following telegram was received from Opelika: "Hon. William J. Samford, Governor-elect of Alabama is dangerously ill at the residence of his son, Hon. T. D. Samford, of this city. While he is in no immediate critical danger, his condition is such as to cause his friends much apprehension."

Croker to Bryan.

The following telegram was sent by Richard Croker to Mr. Bryan:

"As you no doubt already know, the state has gone against us, but whereas this county in 1896 gave McKinley 23,000 majority, it gives you today 33,000, a gain of 56,000. We are defeated, but not disgraced.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN MARENGO COUNTY.

General Wheeler Voices His Fealty to Democracy—Big Increase in Birmingham's Bank Clearings—Brevities.

A terrible tragedy was enacted near Linden a few days ago, according to the reports which have been received, resulting in the shooting down of J. I. Breckenridge, a well-known planter, by his eldest son, Ed, who acted in defense of his mother and himself, who were threatened with death by the infuriated husband and father whose anger had been aroused while under the influence of liquor. It seems that the old gentleman's madness, influenced by the effects of liquor, reached its climax, when he ran upon Eddie and his mother with a gun, saying: "I've said I was going to kill you both and now is my time," whereupon Ed fired upon him with a shotgun, killing him instantly. A few years ago Breckenridge shot and killed a Mr. Nolan.

Sensational Whipping Near Florence.

The sensational whipping of Wm. Philips near Rogersville, Colbert county, by the indignant people of that community for the alleged inhuman treatment of his wife, whom it is charged died from the results of his shameful treatment, has caused a genuine sensation. Williams was arrested and tried on the charge of causing the death of his wife, and was committed to jail. He was taken from the constable in charge by forty citizens and whipped with hickories. The party acted in an orderly manner and turned the prisoner over to the constable after they had finished their work. Mrs. Williams was a consumptive, formerly of Tennessee. The most prominent citizens in the east end of the county took part in the whipping.

Joseph Seldon, one of Marengo county's best known and most beloved citizens, died at Uniontown Saturday. Captain Seldon was fatally burned in his apartments at the Pickering hotel during the morning. During the war between the states Captain Seldon raised and equipped, at his own expense, the famous Seldon's battery. He was a gallant soldier and had innumerable friends throughout Alabama.

[illegible] Director of the Census, in announcing the population of the United States, made a statement, which, in part, follows:

The figures of the population are the result of a careful computation by means of the latest tabulating machines. It has been the custom heretofore to make a rough count, using the figures on the schedules as a basis, but for this decade it was determined to, if possible, avoid the errors likely to arise from a preliminary count, and also the necessary expense and delay incident to such a proceeding. The plan was adopted of verifying the count at once by the use of the electrical contrivance referred to above.

The early completion of the tabulation of the population of the States enables the Census Office to submit the figures to Congress as soon as it convenes in December, thus giving that body the information necessary to dispose of the question of the reapportionment of Representatives at the coming session.

The cost of the administration of the bureau up to this date, including the expense incident to the preliminary work, as well as the cost of the enumeration and supervision, is $6,361,951; for which over $4,000,000 has been expended for supervision and enumeration.

THANKSGIVING DAY SET.

The Annual Proclamation Issued by President McKinley.

He Designates November 29, as a Day of Thanks to a Kind Providence For National Blessings.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—The following Thanksgiving Day proclamation has been issued:

"It has pleased Almighty God to bring our Nation in safety and honor through another year. The works of religion and charity have everywhere been manifest. Our country through all its extent has been blessed with abundant harvests. Labor and the great industries of the people have prospered beyond all precedent. Our commerce has spread over the world. Our power and influence in the cause of freedom and enlightenment have extended over distant seas and lands. The lives of our official representatives and many of our people in China have been marvelously preserved. We have been generally exempt from pestilence and other great calamities and even the tragic visitation which overwhelmed the city of Galveston made evident the sentiments of sympathy and Christian charity, by virtue of which we are one united people.

"Now, therefore, I, William McKinley, President of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, November 29, next, to be observed by all the people of the United States, at home and abroad, as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Him who holds the nations in the hollow of His hand. I recommend that they gather in their several places of worship and devoutly give Him thanks for the prosperity wherewith He has endowed us, for seed time and harvest, for the valor, devotion and humanity of our armies and navies, and for all His benefits to us as individuals and as a Nation; and that they humbly pray for the continuance of His divine favor, for concord and amity with other nations, and for righteousness and peace in all our ways.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this 29th day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand and nine hundred, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fifth.

"WILLIAM McKINLEY.
"JOHN HAY, Secretary of State."

TO EXCLUDE EMPRESS DOWAGER

From Participation in the Government of China.

A Washington dispatch says: It was stated Saturday that outside of the questions of indemnity, punishments, etc., now under negotiation at Pekin, there are three vital and far-reaching questions to be determined, viz: First, the removal of the empress dowager, personally and through the influence of her advisors, from all participation in the Chinese government; second, the creation of an indemnity by an increase of China's customs revenue, either by the payment of the duties in gold, instead of depreciated silver, as at present; or else by doubling the present silver duties from 5 per cent. to 10 per cent ad valorem, and, third, the establishment of a minister of foreign affairs in place of the old and cumbersome Tsung Li Yamen.

The demand for the retirement of empress is said to result from the conclusion now generally accepted that the imperial government of China was responsible for the Boxer uprising. As the empress dowager was the ruling authority of the imperial government during the uprising this responsibility is brought home directly to her. There is understood to be no purpose, however, to visit upon her any personal punishment or indignity, but merely to so form the reconstructed government as to exclude her from all participation in it.

The plan of doubling China's customs duties has arisen from the need of finding a source to pay war indemnities, which the various powers demand.

ACTIVE SCOUTING.

Philippine Rebels Have Failed to Crush a Single Garrison.

Last week was devoted to active scouting in the Philippines. The insurgents, having failed to crush a single garrison, are now expecting a reaction.

Lieutenants Wilson and Dority, of the Forty-six Volunteer Infantry, destroyed large stores of rice, four garrisons and a barracks near Balo.

Captain Atkinson, with thirty-four men of the Thirty-seventh Volunteer Infantry, attacked 190 insurgents under Colonel Valenia, recovering two American prisoners and capturing a considerable quantity of ammunition and supplies.

A native orchestra lured the United States troops from their quarters near Dagupan, while the insurgents attacked the rear, killing two Americans and wounding three.

McSweeney Acts as Rabbi.

Governor McSweeney, of South Carolina, made a journey of 125 miles Saturday to perform a marriage ceremony, uniting Jewish maidens to gentile friends of the governor. Dr. William S. Lynch and Lawyer H. G. Askins were married to Esther Benjamin and Rose Lillian Benjamin respectively. The governor was asked to perform the ceremony as a compromise, the bride's declining to be married by Christian ministers and the grooms objecting to the Jewish ceremony. The service and prayer used by the governor contained about 800 words and were made up from the services of several denominations.

Aged Woman Burned to Death.

The residence of the Rev. J. B. Wheatley, at Wheatley, Ky., was destroyed by fire a few days since. Mrs. Wheatley's aged mother, Mrs. A. J. Alexander, perished, and Rev. and Mrs. Wheatley were seriously injured while escaping from the burning building. The family is one of the most prominent in the county.

Engagement With Boers.

Lord Roberts, in a dispatch from Johannesburg dated November 2, reports no less than eight fights at different points, all unimportant, but significant of the activity of the Boers.

General Kitchener, after a night march, surprised Schoeman's laager at Steenkampsburg, and then pushed on to Schalkburger's laager at Rookrans, but the British were prevented from following up the Boers, who trekked north. Prisoners in the hands of the British say the Boer losses in the fight with General Barton October 25 were 140 killed, wounded or missing.

Hearst Offers Big Reward.

W. R. Hearst, president of the National Association of Democratic clubs, has issued a statement to the 1,500,000 members of these organizations, in which he offers $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of persons guilty of altering election returns, and $5,000 for the first person telegraphing him information of this character which may lead to such a conviction.

ELEVEN MEN WERE KILLED

And Several More Injured in a Mine Explosion.

CONFLICTING REPORTS OF THE CAUSE

Mine Owners Say It Was Caused by Dynamite, and Men Say It Was Due to Fire Damp.

At 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning a terrific explosion occurred at the Southern Coal and Transportation company's mines at Berrysburg, six miles from Philippi, W. Va. Eleven dead bodies have been taken from the mines. The mine owners refuse to discuss the explosion, saying it was caused by too heavy a charge of powder being used. The miners say it was caused by fire damp. It is not known how many were killed and injured. Not until roll call can this be determined. As soon as the mine had cleared sufficiently rescuers began the removal of the dead. The following had been taken out dead: Lewis Pack, Andrew Blackwell, Richard Johnston, Albert Brown, Peck Adams, Joseph Jackson, Lawrence Duncan, Ivan Petroch, Poznauski, Walter Walenski and Ollie Franks. The public boss on duty and his brother, Will Merks, were taken out unconscious and cannot possibly recover.

COST OF MAIL SERVICE.

Second Assistant Postmaster-General Submits Annual Report.

The annual report of W. S. Shallenberger, second assistant postmaster-general, was made public Saturday. It shows that on June 30, last, the annual rate of expenditure for inland mails was $55,146,060, for foreign service $2,014,588; total expenditures, $57,160,598.

The experiment of box delivery on star routes, whereby persons along the line could have the mail brought from the next office by the star route carried and left in a box erected by such persons, has worked satisfactorily so far, and the next star route contracts will provide for such service, increasing the mail facilities in the rural districts at a moderate increase in cost.

GALVESTON FORTIFICATIONS.

Board of Army Engineers to Recommend Rehabilitation.

It is learned from an unofficial source that the board of army engineers which recently sat in Washington will recommend the rehabilitation of all the Galveston fortifications and the repairing of and raising of the jetties. The jetties cost about $7,000,000 and the fortifications $1,500,000. The total damage to all by the storm was about $1,750,000. The work which the engineers will recommend will cost about $3,500,000.

Gould Will Pay Court's Debts.

On the authority of an "intimate friend of the late Jay Gould," the New York World announces that the debts of Count Boni de Castellane will be paid in full by the Goulds at once." The scandal attending the claims, amounting to $4,000,000, against the spend-thrift husband of Countess Anna is to be stopped. A lump sum probably will be contributed by George, Helen, Howard, Edwin and Frank Gould to wipe out these debts, as they consider the honor of the Gould family is involved. The total value of the Gould estate is now over $125,000,000."

Killed by Hazing.

Thomas Finlay Brown, 12 years old, is dead from injuries received while being hazed at the Porter Military Academy, Charleston, S. C. Brown was new at the academy, and the older boys, following their former custom, dropped him into a cemented swimming basin twelve feet deep. The basin was dry at the time, and the lad received internal injuries from the fall. Before he died he did not give the names of the cadets who had illtreated him, and it is said no action will be taken in the matter.

Steamer Goes Down.

The steamer Hill City, plying between St. Louis and New Orleans, struck a hidden obstruction in Tennessee chute just below Memphis Sunday morning and sunk. The water covers the lower deck, but the steamer lies in a good position and can easily be raised. The steamer had a full cargo, thirty passengers and a crew of forty. All the people got safely ashore in the yawls.

ALABAMA NEWS BREVITIES.

Much Work for the Coming Legislature. Important Measures.

Within a few days of the assembling of the general assembly of Alabama legislative politics are receiving considerable attention in the capital city, says a Montgomery dispatch. During the past week several personages said to be active in matters of legislation during the session have been here. During the next week many more will come, and by the end of the week practically all of the leaders will have assembled.

The exceptionally strong personnel of the legislature renders its meeting of more importance than possibly any that has convened in this state for a score of years. There are not so many offices to be filled as two years ago, but legislation of far-reaching importance will come up for consideration.

It will be but a mere matter of form to elect a United States senator to succeed the Hon. John Tyler Morgan, as he is now without opposition.

Of the more important legislation to be considered the bill calling for the submission for a vote to the people as to whether a constitutional convention may be held is the most important.

The public school question will again be prominent, as it seems that all Alabamians are becoming aroused as to the very great importance of raising the intellectual standard of the masses. Then there is the dispensary issue that is sure to come again.

Amendments to, or the repeal of the tax commission law will prove another question of general interest.

Representative Wallace will introduce a bill to have constructed a suitable home for the governor and is another important measure.

A measure of further importance will be suggested from the secretary of state's office, seeking authority to employ a thorough land man to have properly arranged land books in the department of state. These books have never been correctly kept and it will require several years of diligent labor to complete the work. There is no doubt that much of the state's valuable land is in possession of parties who are without clear titles to the same.

There are many more measures of importance to be considered by the general assembly that will mark it as a hard-worked body.

Selma Wants a Street Fair.

J. F. Hatch, a street fair promoter, is in Selma with a view of getting up a fair for December 3d to 8th. Prominent merchants called a meeting and a committee was named to canvass the merchants. Hatch proposes to raise $1,500, guaranteeing to put up $400 himself as an evidence of good faith. Twelve attractions will be booked. The merchants are enthusiastic and think it will be a success.

Will Move to Texas.

A number of families from Lawrence county are making preparations to move to Texas and the Indian Territory. The exodus is caused by the short crops in this section. Many have gone from this section during the past few years and quite a good number have returned, while others write advising their friends to remain where they are, and say they would return if they had the means.

To Establish Automobile Factory.

Birmingham is to have an automobile factory—the first one in the south. The first machine has been made and is of the gasoline type. It is run by exploding gasoline by an electric spark in the cylinders of the engine. It is made up in the shape of a single buggy.

Revenue Collections.

The internal revenue collections for Alabama for the month of October amounted to $54,055.87. The collections for the same month last year were $46,866.12. This shows an increase of $7,189 75.

A Negro Killed.

James Edwards, colored, was run over by a train on the Louisville and Nashville railroad in Birmingham and he was so badly injured that he died shortly afterward.

Wickersham's Place Filled.

It is announced that John A. Dodson has been appointed general superintendent of the Alabama Great Southern railroad, with offices at Chattanooga, Tenn. Mr. Dodson succeeds C. A. Wickersham, recently made president and general manager of the Atlanta and West Point and Western Railway of Alabama, at Atlanta.

GOD'S MESSAGE TO MAN.

PREGNANT THOUGHTS FROM THE WORLD'S GREATEST PROPHETS.

Little Kindnesses — Bear Your Burdens Cheerfully — Do Not Starve Your Soul — Prayer for Spiritual Strength — Free From Selfishness — Growth in Grace.

You gave on the way a pleasant smile
And thought no more about it,
It cheered a life that was cold the while,
That might have been wrecked without it.
And so for the smile and its fruitage fair
You'll reap a crown some time—somewhere.

You spoke one day a cheering word,
And passed to other duties,
It warmed a heart, new promise stirred,
And painted a life with beauties.
And so for the word and its silent prayer
You'll reap a palm some time—somewhere.

You lent a hand to a fallen one,
A lift in kindness given,
It saved a soul when help was none,
And won a heart for heaven.
And so for the help you proffered there
You'll reap a joy some time—somewhere.

—D. C. Bickers.

Bear Your Burdens Cheerfully.

In one of Schiller's poems is a beautiful story about the birds, that when they were first created they had no wings; and the story is, that God made the wings, put them down before the birds, and said, "Now, come and take the burdens up and bear them." The birds had beautiful plumage, but they took up their wings with their beaks and laid them upon their shoulders, and at first they seemed to be a heavy load and rather difficult to bear, but as they cheerfully and patiently bore them and folded them over their hearts, lo! the wings grew fast, and that which they once borg now bore them. The burdens became plumes, and the weights became wings. We are the wingless birds, and our duties are the pinions; and when at first we assume them they seem loads; but if we cheerfully bear them, going after Jesus, the burdens change to plumes, and we, who once thought we were nothing but servants bearing loads, find that we are sons and heirs of God, free to mount up with wings as eagles, running without being weary, walking without being faint.—Arthur T. Pierson, D. D.

Do Not Starve Your Soul.

To Jesus, knowing the nature both of God and of man, it seemed preposterous that a human being could starve or stint his Godward side; that houses and lands, stocks and bonds could fill the cup of his peace and happiness so that God was not to be thought of or reckoned with. Jesus could only apply the word "fool" to such a man who, ignoring his divine capabilities and possibilities, cares simply to eat, drink and be merry. How his heart yearns to-day over the thousands who are absolutely poor toward God and who know not that they are poor and naked and destitute. The normal thing for a man, in his view, is fellowship with the highest, companionship with the Maker of the universe and the Father of all. Not that Christ disesteemed the things that add to our comfort and make life pleasant, but he held them infinitely lower in the scale of values than love and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost and service in the kingdom of Christ.

Prayer for Spiritual Strength.

God of all patience, who in the fullness of time hast revealed Thyself to men in Jesus Christ our Lord, have mercy upon us in the uncertainty and discouragement of human life! When we wait in darkness, longing earnestly to see, and see no anything; when we grope in ignorance, and knowledge comes not or comes too late; when we are eager to choose and act, and have no light upon decision; when the shadow of our own sin brings doubt upon our way, have pity upon us, O God! Help us to remember the sure working of Thy will for good in all Thy children's lives, the rest that remaineth, the assurance of eternal hope. Strengthen our hearts for earth's endeavor, and may our restlessness be turned to peace as we remove our thoughts from the uncertainties of life to fix them upon Thee. And this we ask in the name of Him who suffered and overcame. Amen.—Closet and Altar.

Free From Selfishness.

Is it possible for any Christian to be actually free from all selfishness? Is there any Christian now living who has this freedom? Will any one declare that he knows that he has not a particle of selfishness in him? If there be such an one, will he tell us how he knows that he is thus free? By what standard does he judge himself in this respect? These are vital questions. Entire freedom from selfishness in any form presupposes the utter eradication from a person of all carnality. It means the absolute removal from one's personality of all that pertained to the old nature. It means a perfectly pure personality. If one have such a personality, then it may be truly said of him that he is entirely free from selfishness in every form, and his works will be its witness.

Growth in Grace.

When a plant grows naturally, it does not grow now and then, by fits and starts, but continuously. It is either moving on in its daily march of continuous growth, or it is in danger of moving in the direction of decay and death. So with those who are growing in grace. They grow continuously. They do not make a rapid growth one year or one month, and then suddenly cease growing till the following year or the following month. Their growth, if healthy, is not intermittent, but steadily continued. Whilst they live they grow, and when they cease to grow there is danger that they no longer live. When there is no spiritual growth, there is always the danger of spiritual declension, decay, death.—Rev. H. G. Youard.

God does not expect our garment of life to be of white cloth when we are done with it here. He knows the wear and tear of this troubled earthly pilgrimage of ours, and his loving heart is very tender toward the patched garment, the garment of rents and stains, if we have only done our best to keep it whole—even as the mother sheds tears of love over the little outgrown frock of her child, disfigured with patches and seamed with many a hastily gathered rent.

Dependence is not altogether dependence, but in a sense mutual support—a sort of leaning together, as it were. In its human relation this analogy is strikingly true. We gain new strength, new courage, new inspiration, from those who lean lovingly upon us.

Do not draw a line of separation between the house of God and the house of business. The counting-house and the shop may be as much the house of God as the holiest shrine where generations have knelt in prayer.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

ALABAMA sends a solid delegation of nine Democratic congressmen to Washington.

THE new board of county commissioners met on Monday and adjourned Wednesday. The new board has made a satisfactory beginning.

HON. Sydney J. Bowie was duly elected to congress from this district, and we are confident the district has elected an excellent representative.

FROM the election returns to hand this morning, Wm. McKinley has been re-elected President of the United States, and Theodore Roosevelt Vice-president.

OUT of the 447 votes in the electoral college, McKinley has 282, and Bryan 143, with Kentucky, Nebraska and Wyoming to be heard from.

WE are inclined to think that many Populists who voted the Republican ticket did so, not as believers in Republican doctrine, and not as permanent opponents to the Democratic party, but more as a compromise with themselves at the present moment. They recognize that the Populist organization is no more, and have not yet determined as to their course in the future.

NEWS of the very serious illness of Governor-elect W. J. Samford was received here with great regret on Tuesday evening. It was unexpected, and while all hope for the speedy recovery of the honorable gentleman speculation was rife as to what effect his death would have upon the governorship. If he recovers, and we sincerely hope he will, Col. Samford will be inaugurated governor on December 1, and if he should succomb before that time it is a moot question as to who will be entitled to the governorship. The constitution of the State provides for filling the vacancy, if caused by the death of the governor during his term of office, by the President of the Senate succeeding to the governorship. But Col. Samford is not yet governor. The Legislature has to meet in joint session and officially declare he has been elected, or to use the words of the constitution, "the person having the highest number of votes shall be declared duly elected."

If the worst should happen to Col. Samford it appears to us that "the person having the highest number of votes" would be John A. Steele, the Republican candidate in the August election, and he would be entitled to the office, although owing to the small total vote he received we cannot think it would be satisfactory to the large majority of the voters of the State. The constitution certainly needs amending in this particular. It is an interesting question, but we trust it will not come up at this time and that Col. Samford will be quite well and duly inaugurated on December 1.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to desolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Clanton drug co., and D. I. peramus, Verbena.

Liszt's Feat of Memory.

In The Century William Mason, the veteran American musician, tells of a remarkable feat of memory performed by the composer Liszt:

My friend knew Liszt very well, and having taken a fancy to a composition of mine, "Les Perles de Rosee," which was still in manuscript, he said: "Let me have it for publication. Dedicate it to Liszt. I can easily get Liszt to accept the dedication. I am going directly from here to Weimar and will see him about it. At the same time I will prepare the way for your reception later as a pupil."

Not long afterward I received a letter from my friend in which he told me that when he handed the music to Liszt the latter looked at the manuscript, hummed it over, then sat down and played it from memory. Then, going to his desk, he took a pen and accepted the dedication by writing his name at the top of the title page.

Idle, but Witty.

He was an idle Irish boy, but he had the Celtic wit. He had shipped on board of a man-of-war, where he annoyed the boatswain by his laziness.

Seeing him on the mainstep one morning gazing idly out to sea, the boatswain called out to him:

"Come down out of that, ye rashcal! Come down out of that, and Oi'll give ye a dozen whacks wid me rope!"

"Faith, sorr," replied the boy, "Oi wouldn't come if ye offered me two dozen."—Harper's Young People.

A Particular Point.

"I presume," said the client, "that you refer to my pocketbook."—Indianapolis Sun.

IN THE HOLY LAND

Jericho, Aug. 20, 1900

How they found out her name I do not know. It is my first hearing of the old lady. We walked back to our hotel and passed through David street again—a sore punishment, as the filth covered by-ways of Constantinople, the rotten bazars of Tripoli, the Slums of the French quarter in New Orleans, Buzzards Roost, Birmingham, all fall short of the stench and squalor and dirt of this stench alley with its great name of Isreal's greatest king.

We took carriages after lunch and went out to Mt. Olivet, east of the city. Off to the east we see the Jordan valley and the Dead sea and the mountains of Moab, seeming a mile or so away; while they really are from 30 to 50 miles. So clear is the air here.

Just such a scene of desolation as this view presents, I feel sure can't be surpassed in the whole world. Not a riding switch for 18 miles of the way to be had in this God-for-saken land that was once the land of milk and honey. I think of the prophet Daniel and his "Abomination of desolation" and think perhaps this was what he saw in his dream. We got out of our carriages here and walked down the Bethany road into the valley of Jehosephat, saw the tomb of the Virgin, (so they say.) Any place suits me so I see. In this church (for all things are marked by a church) a Greek priest was distributing holy water; as it smelled good and the Pilgrims bad (some of whom I recognized as our fellow voyagers on the Russian steamer previously described) I extended my handkerchief and he gave me a sprinkle on it instead of my head. The crew and throng here was occasioned by the feast of the Virgin previously mentioned. We next went into Gethsemane. I confess that here I felt the most solemn and awe-inspiring feeling of my whole life; for I know that here it was our Saviour had the struggle of his life, in which his decision was made to die for me. I fell on my knees when my companions had gone out of sight and thanked the Lord in one brief moment, that of all earth's teachers Jesus the man of Nazerith was mine, and not others of the many the east has produced.

We see an occasional negro; same looking old thing as in America, only that they are so miserably dressed, nothing but rags attached one to the other for garments, and just one garment at that—a shirt. We took carriage next day at 5 a.m. for this place, Jericho; see Bethany and tomb of Lazarus and home of Martha and Mary, where the Saviour stayed many times; see cave where Elijah was fed by the ravens; mount of our Lord's temptation; see brook of Cherith that flowed by the cave of Elijah, see is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

A Doctor's Letter.

A well known St. P. tells an amusing story of an old aunt of his. Being on one occasion very nervous, she told her physician she thought Bath would do her good.

"It's very odd," said Dr. W., "but that's the very thing that I was going to recommend to you. I will write the particulars of your case to a very clever man there, in whose hands you will be well taken care of."

The lady, furnished with the letter, set off. On arriving at Bath, feeling, as usual, very nervous, she said to a footman:

"Long as Dr. Walter has attended me he has never explained to me what ails me. I have a great mind to open his letter and see what he has stated of my case to the Bath physician."

In vain her friend represented to her the breach of confidence this would be. She opened the letter and read:

Dear Davis—Keep the old lady three weeks and then beg back again.

A Football Incident in New York.

Mr. Frank W. Graves during his newspaper career witnessed many singular scenes, but the oddest one happened, according to Mr. Graves, in the old days when the big college football teams played their star games on the New York polo grounds on Thanksgiving day.

On the occasion mentioned Yale and Princeton had played and Yale had won.

Going up Broadway there walked a dapper young Princeton man and a girl. Going down Broadway at the same moment were eight victorious young Yale men. They were happy, but silent, and they came straight down the street until they spied the Princeton pair.

Then still in silence, moved by a single purpose, the Yale men formed a circle, and as the other pedestrians made way for them they went around and around the Princeton pair. At first the young man was surprised, then angered, and at last he raised his cane and made a dash for liberty, whereupon the Yale men stepped and, without a word, fell upon him as they do in football, quietly, heavily and quickly.

Then, straightening themselves again into a line, the eight Yalensians stepped a moment and in concert raised their hats to the thoroughly frightened girl and silently resumed their march down the street.—Saturday Evening Post.

Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are killing graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Della M. Strayer, Tully, Kans., writes: "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything. At first was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

"KRUMP'S KORNER."

The owner of this Korner has again returned to it, after wandering many days in foreign lands older, uglier and we trust a little wiser in some respects. He rejoices at his return, and would be glad to see all of the good and bad people of Chilton county. I only ask don't all of you come same day, as I have not got enough to go round for dinner. I have enough yarns however to make up shortness in grubb. Come to see me anyhow and we will talk it over, and no charge for the yarns. Please remember I keep all things the farmer needs, and I will sell him

A suit, a hat, a pair shoes or a knife,

PORK AND BEANS

There is one flavor in pork and beans that all people like. It was devised in the rural homes of New England. It has made Boston the synonym of beans.

In our kitchen we get exactly that flavor. Our beans are cooked by an expert. We put them up in key-opening cans. Your grocer will supply you.

Plenty of other canned beans, but that flavor comes only in Libby's.

Growth of Philadelphia.

As originally laid out by William Penn, the city was two miles long and one mile wide. Township after township was annexed till at last the city boundaries coincided with those of a county twenty-two miles long. Boston overran the old county lines and took in five outlying towns. Greater New York and Chicago now exceed in area and population some European principalities. In each case consolidation has been accomplished by the joint action of the city and suburbs, with legislative authorization.

Sahara's Water Supply.

The wells of Erg, in the Sahara desert, occupy the bottom of the depressions. As the surface of the ground in which they are excavated is covered with a thick layer of sand they have to be protected against the falling in of the latter. Their very narrow orifice is, therefore, hermetically closed by means of wide stones sealed through a mortar composed of sand and mud. Each caravan undoes the work in order to obtain water and then carefully seals the wells up again before departing.

Wolseley Particular About Uniforms.

Lord Wolseley, commander in chief of the British army, is particular about appearing in uniform when going about officially, and expects all officers to appear similarly attired. On arriving at a certain town to inspect the troops a dinner party was given in his honor, to which the officers were invited. One of the officers inquired if he was to dress as "an officer or a gentleman." He was ordered to dress as an officer, whatever else he might be.

PURE BLOOD AND STRONG NERVES

With glowing health all things are possible, small annoyances fade into nothingness and real troubles are battled with successfully. Women who are blessed with perfect health are a constant joy to themselves and all around them. The beauty which health alone can make permanent is a crown which raises a woman above other women. Such beauty is always accompanied by a sweet disposition, for snappishness is a sure sign of ill-health and leaves its mark quickly on the features.

It seems to be the fashion for women to ignore health and sacrifice it to the little every-day trials, or offer it up on the altar of devotion to daily tasks. Then again the nervous organization of women is constantly attacked by woman's natural experiences, so that it is practically impossible for her to retain the beauty which nature gave her, unless she has discriminating advice and right support.

Dr. Greene's Nervura
for the Blood and Nerves.

Trials and troubles are easily overcome by the women whose strength is the genuine strength of perfect health. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, bridges the chasm that separates the sickly woman from happiness. It fills her veins with blood that is pure and clean.

MRS. WM. E. BOSSE, of 85 Farrington St., Flushing, L. I., says:

"In regard to myself, I have suffered for years with disease, having been troubled with great nervousness, female complaints, indigestion, and great weakness and prostration. I did not have strength to do much of anything. Knowing the great value of health and strength I consulted doctors and took many medicines, but they all failed to cure me, and I grew worse rather than better. I happened to see in the papers how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was doing in restoring to health every one who took it, and I thought I would try a bottle. I used it and to my surprise I began to gain strength every day. I am so thankful that I tried it! It is certainly the most excellent tonic and strength giver. I recommend it very highly and wish that other people who are troubled in any way would take warning and use it."

TO PRESERVE WOMANLY BEAUTY

At all the stages of a woman's life Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is shown to be efficient to ward off the results of nervousness, or overwork, or impure blood. From early girlhood to advanced years, this world-renowned medicine builds up the forces destroyed by disease, grief, or overexertion, and the effects of this great medicine are quickly felt and permanently retained. Let women guard well their health, and consult Dr. Greene freely. Nothing they can possibly do will so surely keep them strong and well, or repair the exhaustion from acute illness, nothing will work so continually to the preservation of beauty as the great health-giving Nervura. Dr. Greene's office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, where he may be consulted either by personal call or by letter. Women may write in perfect confidence, and get Dr. Greene's advice free.

The End For White Wood.

There is a craze on at the present time, superinduced by the find for colonial houses, of having white woodwork. Several years past all the fashionable houses were finished in hard wood. Now they are all painted white and papered in yellow to give the correct colonial effect, with their mahogany fournishings.

An Excellent Pickle.

Happy the housewife that has a generous and varied supply of pickles. An especially good pickle for fish and oysters is made of sliced cucumbers. Slice two dozen cucumbers half an inch thick and pour over them a strong, hot brine, allowing them to stand in it for twelve hours. The brine should be sufficiently strong to bear up an egg. At the end of the time pour off the brine and rinse the cucumbers in cold water. Put one gallon of vinegar into a preserving kettle with the cucumbers over the fire and add to it two teaspoonfuls of ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful of powdered alum, one teaspoonful of ground cloves, two saltspoonfuls of cayenne pepper, one tablespoonful of grated horseradish, one and a half tablespoonfuls of white mustard seed, one tablespoonful of ginger, one pound of sugar and one sliced garlic. Stir all together, cover and cook until the cucumbers are tender. Remove them and fill glass jars seven-eighths full of them. Fill the remaining space with the boiling vinegar and seal at once while hot.

Feathers and Feather Curling.

Feather curling is a business by itself, and to excel in it requires long practice. It saves time and patience to pay some one else to do it, but a few directions will be given, for you might find yourself so situated that you would be obliged to do it yourself. Take an old feather to practice on. Buy a regular curling knife; they are kept at most hardware stores. The blade is a peculiar shape, short and narrow, and has a curve.

Have ready a teakettle of boiling water, and hold the head of the feather over the steam for a few moments. Now take the feather in both hands, and spreading out the flues to their full length, pass back and forth through the steam, but do not let it get too wet. In the same manner wave it from side to side—not up and down—for a few moments, to partially dry it. When dry enough it is ready for curling. Begin at the stem on the right side, holding the feather with the fingers of the left hand underneath and the thumb on top. The motion in curling is outward and downward, taking a few flues at a time, and the feather should be so curled that the ends are hidden or rolled under.

As the broad part of the feather is reached, the knife must extend farther out, not making as abrupt a curve. When the head is reached, a short curve is all that is required, and as you begin to curl the opposite side you change the position of the left hand; this time put the hand over the feather instead of under, but the motion of curling is the same. After both sides are curled, the stem at the head must be concealed, and this is done by "heading up." Holding the feather firmly with the thumb on top, take up a few flues, and pressing them sharply against the thumb nail, lay them over the stem.

Do the same on the opposite side, and continue to do this four times. By looking at a well-curled feather you will get a clearer idea of this, as it is something that really requires to be demonstrated. To curve the feather, place the blade of the knife underneath the stem and press against the thumb. Beginning at the base work up to the head, until the desired curve is obtained.—Harper's Bazar.

Grape Catsup—Stew five pounds of grapes over a slow fire until soft. Strain; add two and one-half pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, one tablespoonful each of allspice, cloves, pepper and cinnamon, and one-half tablespoonful of salt. Boil until thick and bottle.

Welsh Rarebit—Place in a chafing dish or a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, one-fourth cupful of rich cream cheese, cut into bits. Beat one egg, stir into it one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a speck of cayenne. When the cheese is melted add the egg and cook until it thickens.

Diced Toast and Tomatoes—Cut dry bread into one-inch cubes, place in oven and brown thoroughly. Take two-thirds quart of finely chopped tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful each of salt and chili (Mexican pepper). Boil ten minutes, and pour over diced toast. Serve immediately with fish rolls.

Tomato Custards—Mix one pint of stewed tomatoes with a fourth of a cup of bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper; pour into a buttered baking dish; beat four eggs, add quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar and a cup and a half of milk; stir over hot water until thickened slightly, pour over the tomato mixture, bake in a slow oven until set—about three-quarters of an hour.

It was in a high school classroom where a modern foreign language is taught. One of the boys was wrestling with a translation from a reading book which happened to be a famous romance.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

The ants in one nest are not all of the same sho. A Swiss professor has found them as different as so many human beings, with dwarfs, giants, cripples, etc.

Latest advices from St. Petersburg are to the effect that the Russian Government has appropriated an amount of 500,000 rubles for the establishment of a mountain observatory in the Caucasus, on the top of a mountain in the neighborhood of Tiplis, the capital of the Caucasus. The observatory will be provided with the latest and most improved scientific instruments, and it is reported that the requisite buildings will be erected in the course of the present year. Well known Russian scientific men will be in charge of the new observatory.

E. C. Green, of the Ceylon botanic gardens, reports a remarkable case of web-spinning by red ants. A breach having been made in a structure of leaves on which a colony were at work, the ants at once set to work to repair the damage. Some of them went to a distant nest and brought two young ants that were in the grub stage and passed them back and forth across the gap repeatedly. At length it was seen that a web was being spun, the silken threads issuing from the mouths of the grubs. In this way the breach was mended. The mature ants must have passed the spinning stage; hence they impressed the youngsters.

The preservation of juicy fruits, mushrooms, etc., may, according to a German technical journal, be effected by placing the articles in a warm, five per cent. gelatin solution, and after cooling, submerging them in a mixture of twenty parts of formic aldehyde and ninety parts of water. By this means an insoluble gelatin envelope is formed, which serves to keep intact the natural form and color of all fruits and succulent plants subjected to the treatment; moreover, fermentative bacteria are completely destroyed thereby. It would be important, perhaps, before eating the fruit, to get rid of the strongly antiseptic covering, out of respect to the stomach.

It is a matter of common observation that cats always fall upon their feet. Recently a Maltese kitten about two-thirds grown, belonging to Mr. J. H. Serviss, of Closter, N. J., was chased by a dog and took refuge in a tall tree, which has almost no branches up to a height of sixty feet. The kitten ascended to that elevation, and apparently through terror refused to descend. It remained on its lofty perch four days and nights, including one night of tempestuous rain and lightning. Finally a boy, armed with climbers, was sent after the kitten. On his approach, it ran out on a slender branch and leaped. Mr. Serviss watched it descend and observed that its legs were widely sprawled, and that it kept its belly toward the ground, until, striking a small branch of a neighboring tree about fifteen feet from the ground, its balance was destroyed, and it fell on its side. No bones were broken, but it was severely bruised, and for several days it would swallow nothing but water. Soon it entirely recovered.

In Albuquerque, New Mexico, which has an altitude of about 5000 feet, the recipes and regulations laid down by the ordinary cook-book are, it seems, worthless. Water boils there at 202 degrees Fahrenheit instead of at 212 degrees, as at sea level; hence articles of food to be boiled require a much longer cooking than the usual cook-book prescribes. On account of the extreme dryness of the air, farinaceous foods, such as beans, corn, etc., lose so much of their moisture that they require long soaking in water before cooking. The worst difficulty, however, is said to be with cake and break making. Ordinary directions as to the number of eggs and amount of baking powder break down altogether. "As the barometric pressure largely determines the effectiveness of the 'raiser,' this may explain the unusual action of the baking soda and egg batter."

John Chinaman on Velvet.

Whatever lay next to the Malay's hand in Malaya has been elbowed away by the Chinaman. As with things little, so with things great. The rich mines and the great organizations of labor—down to the performance in detail of the labor itself—are exploited and dominated by the Chinaman. So what do I see when I go to the metropolis of Singapore or to those lesser stars in the galaxy of Malay cities—Penang and Malacca? Why, John Chinaman, spreading himself squarely on his profits, and in luxurious clubs and whitewashed palaces spending a part of them royally. And more—in the cool of the evening—behind high stepping horses and coachman and footman gorgeously liveried—knee-breeches, buckles, silver buttons, and all the rest of it—and seated in the scarlet-lined landau, I again behold John Chinaman, imperturbable, yellow, wrinkled, gorgeous with the silken costume of his country on his body, and absurdly grotesque with the gray felt bowler of Europe on his head.—London Mail.

Ruskin's Letters.

A collection of the autograph correspondence between John Ruskin and Mr. Rawdon Brown, who for many years was British Consul at Venice, has been presented to the British Museum by Mr. Cavendish Bentinck. The correspondence covers a period of over fifty years, including the time when Ruskin was prosecuting his art studies in Italy.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 13.

Subject: The Rich Man and Lazarus—Luke xvi. 19-31—Golden Text, Verse xvi., 20—Memory Verses, 19-21—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

19. "There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day." The Jews considered purple and fine linen as the richest clothing. Egypt was famous for its fine linen, and purple was produced from a shellfish found on the coasts of Phoenicia, Greece and Africa. The Romans had a law that only the emperor should wear purple, but it was worn by kings and princes generally. Josephus tells us that the high priest's garments were made of fine linen, and that the priests were clothed in linen. Rich men and princes were clothed in purple and fine linen, and lived in luxury and splendor.

20. "And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores." Lazarus was a beggar, and was so poor that he was laid at the rich man's gate. He was full of sores, and was in a most miserable condition. Desiring that his desires might be satisfied, he was laid at the gate of the rich, that he might receive the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. Full of sores, and in a most miserable condition, he was laid at the gate of the rich man, that he might receive the crumbs which were left from the rich man's table. The wild dogs that roam in the streets of Eastern cities and act as scavengers, and with the inhumanity of the Orient, the beggar is set the prey of the dogs, which licked his sores as they came. The wild dogs that roam in the streets of Eastern cities and act as scavengers, and with the inhumanity of the Orient, the beggar is set the prey of the dogs, which licked his sores as they came.

We have before us the lives of two men occupying different positions in this world, the one a leader in society, very much respected, the other was a poor beggar. But to God upon men as we do. He looks on the heart, and is never deceived by appearances. He looks on the heart, and is never deceived by appearances. In the next world things change places, the beggar is in heaven and the rich man is in hell.

22. "The beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried." His burial was so inferior that no mention is made of it. He filled a pauper's grave. There was no pauper's grave. There was no mourners. "And there was a rustling of angels came to bid the soul welcome home to God. "Abraham's bosom," that is, the happy side of Hades, where the saints were regarded as being. Abraham's bosom was a term used among the Jews to express the happiness of the saints with God. It is an allusion to the custom of persons reclining on the breast of the other at feasts; the person whose head was on the breast of the other was said to be in his bosom. "The rich man also died, and was buried." Death comes to the rich as well as to the poor. "And was buried." There was a long procession of the funeral solemnity through the streets of Jerusalem, a crowd of hired mourners, spices and ointment wrapping his body, and the costly sepulchre on which the virtues of the departed were recorded. This, however, profits him nothing, for death has fixed for him an awakening from his fatal dream of ease and self-enjoyment to the stern and terrible realities of eternity.

23. "And in hell." "In Hades." (R. V.) The Scriptures contain four words that are rendered "hell" in the Authorized Version. They are Hades, Sheol, Gehenna and Tartaros. Sheol is a Hebrew word, and is equivalent to the Greek word Hades. Gehenna, as used by Christ, designates a state or place of retribution. Tartaros is a dark prison where the fallen angels await their doom. Hades is the word in the New Testament as the abode of the departed. The good are in the paradise of Hades, or Abraham's bosom; the bad are in the Tartaros of Hades, the place of darkness and torment. In so far as concerned, its right front foot in New York, its left front foot in Chicago, its right back foot in Charleston, its left back foot in New Orleans, and when it itself it shakes the world. Oh, this mighty god—the golden calf of the text's worship!

Its temple is vaster than St. Paul's every god must have its temple, and golden calf of the text is no exception. Cathedral in England, and St. Peter's in Rome, and the Alhambra of the Spaniards, the Parthenon of the Greeks, and the Mahal of the Hindoos, and all the cathedrals put together. Its pillars are fluted with gold, and its arches are hovering gold, and its chandeliers are descending gold, and its walls are tesselated gold, and its vaults are crowded heaps of gold and its spires and domes are soaring gold, and its organ pipes are resounding gold, and its pedals are stamping gold, and its stops pulled out flashing gold, while, standing at the door of the temple, as the presiding deity, the hoofs and shoulders and eyes and nostrils of the calf of gold.

27. "I pray thee, etc." How earnest does this lost soul desire to have the request granted. His influence had not led his brethren to live in the same sinful way that he had lived.

28. "Lest they also come into more interest in them now than he had when he was with them on earth. He might justly fear lest their repentance should add to his own misery.

29. "Moses and the prophets." The books written by Moses and the prophets. "Let them hear them." Let them listen to the warnings and instructions given them in the Scriptures.

30. "From the dead." Moses and the prophets had failed to lead him to repentance, and he feared his brethren would be lost. "They will repent." He thought his knowledge that he had failed to repent, and that his torment was just. He now sees that the only way to be saved is by repenting.

31. "Neither, will they be persuaded." The Scriptures contain all that is necessary to lead men to God. If they will not have the Bible, and gospel preaching, and repent, there is no influence that could be brought to bear upon them that would be availing. Even a message from the dead could add nothing to the written Word, and such a message would be much more uncertain; those who reject the Bible would certainly reject a testimony.

Teachings—Men should beware of ruining themselves in their riches, love, or His displeasure, caused by outward circumstances. He who may "flourish like the green bay tree," while His own people may, for wise reasons, be "destitute, afflicted, tormented."

offered in one sacrifice on one 22,000 oxen and 120,000 sheep, was a tame sacrifice compared with the multitude of men who are sacrificing themselves on this altar of the golden calf and sacrificing their families with them. The soldiers of General Havelock in India walked literally ankle deep in the blood of "the house of massacre," where 200 white women and children had been slain by the sepoys. But the blood about this altar of the golden calf flows up to the knee, flows up to the girdle, flows to the shoulder, flows to the lip. Great God of heaven and earth, have mercy on those who immolate themselves on this altar! The golden calf has none.

Still the degrading worship goes on, and the devotees kneel and kiss the dust and count their golden beads and cross themselves with the blood of their own sacrifice. The music rolls on under the arches. It is made of clinking silver and clinking gold and the rattling specie of the banks and brokers' shops and the voices of all the exchanges. The soprano of the worship is carried by the timid voices of men who have just begun to speculate, while the deep bass rolls out from those who for ten years have been steeped in the seething cauldron. Chorus of voices rejoicing over what they have made; chorus of voices wailing over what they have lost. This temple of which I speak stands open day and night, and there is the glittering god with his four feet on broken hearts, and there is the smoking altar of sacrifice, new victims every moment on it, and there are the kneeling devotees, and the doxology of the worship rolls on, while death stands with moldy and skeleton arm beating time for the chorus—"More, more, more!"

Some people are very much surprised at the actions of people in the Stock Exchange, New York. Indeed it is a scene sometimes that paralyzes description and is beyond the imagination of any one who has never looked in. What stamping of finger and thumb and wild gesticulation and raving like hyenas, and stamping like buffaloes, and swaying to and fro, and jostling and running one upon another, and deafening uproar, until the president of the exchange strikes with his mallet four or five times, crying, "Order, order!" and the astonished spectator goes out into the fresh air feeling that he has escaped from pandemonium. What does it all mean? I will tell you what it means. The devotees of every heathen temple cut themselves to pieces and yell and gyrate. This vociferation and gyration of the Stock Exchange is all appropriate. This is the worship of the golden calf.

But my text suggests that this worship has to be broken up, as the behavior of Moses on this occasion indicated. There are those who say that this golden calf spoken of in the text was hollow and merely plated with gold. Otherwise Moses could not have carried it. I do not know it. But somehow, perhaps by the assistance of his friends, he takes up this golden calf, which is an infernal insult to God and man, and throws it into the fire, and it is melted. And then it comes out and is cooled off, and by some chemical applance or by an old fashioned file it is pulverized, and it is thrown into the brook, and as a punishment the people are compelled to drink the nauseating stuff. So you may depend upon it that God will burn and He will grind to pieces the golden calf of modern idolatry, and He will compel the people in their agony to drink it. If not before, it will be on the last day. I know not where the fire will begin, whether at the Battery or Lombard street, whether at Shoreditch or West End, but it will be a very hot blaze. All the Government securities of the United States and Great Britain will curl up in the first blast. All the money safes and deposit vaults will melt under the first touch. The sea will burn like tinder, and the shipping will be abandoned forever. The melting gold in the broker's window will burst through the melted window glass into the street. But the flying population will not stop to scoop it up. The cry of "Fire!" from the mountain will be answered by the cry of "Fire!" in the plain. The conflagration will burn out from the continent toward the sea and then burn in from the sea toward the land. New York and London, with one cut of the red scythe of destruction, will go down. Twenty-five thousand miles of conflagration! The earth will wrap itself round and round in shroud of flame and lie down to perish. What then will become of your golden calf? Who then so poor as to worship it? Melted or between the upper and nether millstones of falling mountains ground to powder. Dagon down, Moloch down, Juggernaut down, golden calf down!

The judgments of God, like Moses in the text, will rush in and break up this worship, and I say let the work go on until every man shall learn to speak truth with his neighbor, and those who make engagements shall fell themselves bound to keep them, and when a man who will not repent of his business iniquity, but goes on wishing to satiate his cannibal appetite by devouring widows' houses, shall, by the law of the land, be compelled to exchange the brownstone front for the penitentiary. Let the golden calf perish!

But if we have made this world our god when we come to die we shall sell our idol demolished. How much of this world are you going to take with you into the next? Will you have two pockets—one in each side of your shroud? Will you cush on your casket with bonds and mortgages and certificates of stock? Ah, no! The ferryboat that crosses this Jordan takes no baggage—nothing heavier than an immaterial spirit.

Where are the men who tried Warren Hastings in Westminster hall? Where are the pilgrim fathers who put out for America? Where are the veterans who on the Fourth of July, 1794, marched from New York park to the Battery and fired a salute and then marched back again? And the Society of the Cincinnati, who dined that afternoon at Tontine Coffee House, on Wall street, and Grant Thorburn, who that afternoon waited fifteen minutes at the foot of Maiden lane for the Brooklyn ferryboat, then got in and was rowed across by two men with oars, the tide so strong that it was an hour and ten minutes before they landed? Where are the veterans that fired the salute, and the men of the Cincinnati Society who that afternoon drank to the patriotic toast, and the oarsmen that rowed the boat, and the people who were transported? Gone! Oh, this is a fleeting world. It is a dying world. A man who had worshiped it all his days in his dying moment described himself when he said, "Fool, fool, fool!"

When your parents have breathed their last and the old, wrinkled and trembling hands can no more be put upon your head for a blessing; God will be to you a father and mother both, giving you the defense of the one and the comfort of the other. For have we not Paul's blessed hope that as Jesus died and rose again, "Even so them also which sleep in Jesus shall God bring with Him?" And when your children go away from you, the sweet darlings, you will not kiss them and say good-by forever. He only wants to hold them for you a little while. He will give them back to you again, and He will have them all waiting for you at the gates of eternal welcome. Oh, what a God He is! He will allow you to come so close that you can put your arms around His neck, while He in response will put His arms around your neck, and all the windows of heaven will be hoisted to let the redeemed look out and see the spectacle of a rejoicing Father and a returned prodigal locked in that glorious embrace. Quit worshiping the golden calf, and bow this day before Him in whose presence we must all appear when the world has turned to ashes.

When shriveling like a parched scroll,
The flaming heavens together roll,
When louder yet and yet more dread
Swells the high trump that wakes the dead

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

The great trouble in trying to sell what are called patent medicines is that so many claims have been made for them that people don't or won't believe what honest makers say.

We have been telling our story sixty years. Did we ever deceive you once? If we make any statement that isn't so, we will stand the loss. Go to the druggist and get your money back.

Here's an example. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a good cure for a cough that comes from a cold. Your cough, if you have one, may not come from a cold; your doctor will tell you about that.

It is a straight medicine with sixty years of cures back of it. There isn't a ghost of the ordinary patent thing about it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Expert Fighting of Chinese.

From the improved fighting qualities of the Chinese soldier and his expert use of artillery and small arms it is evident that he has profited by the later war with Japan and taken lessons in the gentle art of shooting the head off from European instructors. It may be that after the Chinese trouble is settled the nations of Europe will think twice before allowing their military officers to instruct in war the savage and semi-savage people elsewhere.

SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Inks Composed Mainly of Salts and Cobalt Are the Best.

Of the many invisible and sympathetic inks that have been used for secret correspondence perhaps the best known are those composed mainly of salts of cobalt. Marks made with these fluids remained invisible until they were subjected to heat, and then were revealed in lines of pale green. The phenomenon was transient and entirely dependent on the temperature. As soon as the sheet of paper grew cool writing would disappear. Now, to those who had occasion to employ such means of communication it was desirable to know whether any one tampered with their letters or not. So long as the fact of the correspondence was kept secret, of course, there would be no danger. But if that once became known the contents of a private letter might be ascertained by anyone through whose hands the letter passed. Cobalt writing can be made to appear and disappear a dozen times without giving the least evidence of having been read. But a patent was recently granted in Germany which meets this difficulty, and in some other respects, also, is an improvement on the old system. In the first place the paper used in soaked in the cobalt solution and is prepared in advance. The inventor aims to put his stationery on the market. The writing is done with a solution of common salt and behaves as the cobalt ink did formerly. It can be seen only when warmed and disappears immediately on cooling. Moreover, it appears as often as heat is applied. Its color is a bluish green. But the German also provides what he calls a "control ink." This may be prepared by adding two grains of resorcin to eight drops of water and six drops of sulphuric acid. When a person has written his letter with salt water he makes a few supplementary remarks, in a spot previously agreed upon, with the control ink. So long as the letter remains cool these test marks are invisible, but when the heat is applied they come out and they come out to stay. They are of a brown hue, different from that of the salt writing, and they will not disappear when the green writing does. If the authorized recipient of a letter finds these marks on a letter before he himself warms it he has reason to suspect that his secret is known. But if they are missing the opposite conclusion is justified.

HETTY GREEN'S WEALTH.

Would Have a City of Palaces if Her Mortgages Were Foreclosed.

No one knows precisely the extent of Hetty Green's wealth. It consists for the most part of government bonds, railroad stocks and mortgages, according to the Ladies' Home Journal. She says she is not so fond of government bonds since the finances of the nation have become polluted with politics. Good mortgages of any kind are now her favorite form of investment. If all the mortgages she holds were foreclosed tomorrow twenty-eight churches of various denominations, in almost as many states, would become hers, and four cemeteries would be added to her real estate. Besides there would be blocks of great business buildings and splendid city houses, theaters, livery stables and hotels, country residences, farms and ranches, factory buildings and thousands of acres of valuable land in all parts of the country. Several years ago she made a tour of inspection of all the property on which she held mortgages. She spent two years traveling and staid at forty hotels in as many cities. Since then she has added largely to her holdings of this kind. The most conservative estimates places Mrs. Green's wealth at $60,000,000, but it is probably more. She, herself, won't discuss the matter, except to say that it is overstated.

PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children?

How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

"DEAR MR. PINKHAM:—From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound: and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

Mighty Bad Luck.

The colored gentleman who collects paper scraps has a disabled "right." Only the thumb is of much service. Asked how it happened he hesitated and replied, "Dat ar was a piece of bad luck, boss; yes, sah, mighty bad luck."

"How was that?"

"Ah doan' like ter tell, but 'twas mighty bad luck."

Finally he consented to explain:

"Two fellers rushed me in a place across de street heah, an Ah stabbed in mah breasle dem out. De second fellah Ah stabbed was stanin' 'cross me an an iron gittah dat supported de roof. Jes' as Ah was erbout ter hand him a wipin on de nose dat nigguh stepped one side an mah hand cotched de gittah instead. Hit done broke ebry one of mah fingers, an dey 're been stiff ever since. Yes, sah, dat was sho'ly bad luck."

"But what about the first fellow you went up against? You didn't say what became of him?"

"Oh, dat fellah? Yah, yah! Boss, Ah kin show you dat nigguh any time. 'E work jus' a block from heah. 'E ain't got no nose an only bitty piece one ear!"—

"How'd he lose 'em?"

"How'd 'e lose 'em? Boss, 'e didn't lose 'em. Boy was took from 'im, an Ah's de man what done hit. Ah done bit 'em bofe off. Yes, sah, Ah bit 'em off while we'se rollin round on de flo'."—Detroit News.

The Pitching of an Ocean Steamer.

E. W. Howe, writing in the Atchison Globe of his experience during a voyage across the Atlantic ocean, says:

"I believe I made a discovery in seasickness. One night when the ship was pitching badly I remarked that when there was a particularly hard plunge the screws came out of the water and whirled round so rapidly as to almost throw me out of bed. I was sleeping with my head forward, and after awhile I discovered that the screws seemed to come out of the water when the prow was in the air. Then it occurred to me that this was impossible. Of course the screws came out when the stern was in the air.

"So my discovery was that in seasickness, particularly when you are in bed at night or have your eyes closed, the ship really pitches upward when you think it pitches downward. This confusion may assist in muddling the brain and stomach. I certainly had this experience all through one night. When my head seemed in the air, the screws came out of the water, although my heels were really in the air at the time."

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE "NECESSARY" MAGAZINE.

The best-informed men and women in the world use the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS to keep well informed, and call it the "necessary" and "indispensable" magazine. In the busy rush of to-day ambitious men and women must know about the important questions of the month, and not only this, they want to know about them at the right time. When the whole country is puzzled over the gigantic combination of trusts, a well-informed article is printed in the AMERICAN MONTHLY, giving the facts, and its editor discusses the theory; when the Dreyfus affair is in everyone's mouth, the best story of Dreyfus and the great case comes out in this magazine.

Every month, in "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw gives a comprehensive picture of the world's history during the previous thirty days. In the departments, the valuable articles and books that have been published during the past month are reviewed and quoted from, so that the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY can get the gist of them. In every issue nearly a hundred pictures are printed, including the portraits of the men and women who are making the history of the month.

To be thoroughly well informed helps any man or woman in his or her work. A subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS represents an investment for the best kind of profit, as well as entertainment. One subscriber has just written: "Count me a life subscriber, and when you send me a number beyond the limit of my subscription and accept no renewal from me, consider it a notice of my death."

Price 25 cents per number, $2.50 a year.

A sample copy will be sent on receipt of ten cents in stamps.

Well, anyhow, I am [illegible] glad to see cotton [illegible] as near as I can te[illegible] was bound to go up, so I [illegible] get.

The legislature is now in session. I suppose there will be some legislation effecting Cotton introduced, although up to present I have heard of none. It seems to me that proposed [illegible] of any sort cannot have much publicity before it gets to the law-making body. Let the people know what is proposed, and if they like it they will say so, and if it would not be pleasing to them can depend upon it they will let you know it. At all events are entitled to know what legislation is proposed for them. That's my sentiments.

Hon. L. B. Pounds left on Monday to take his seat in the House of Representatives, and I am sure he will be glad to do all in his power further the interests of his constituents.

Hon. L. H. Reynolds went down to Montgomery on Tuesday night after his contest for his seat in the Senate. I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet so cannot know how he will come out in the matter, but I am bound to say, from all that I can learn, he is unquestionably entitled to take his seat in the Senate chamber.

Judge Adams, for the sake of old times, I suppose, went down to the opening of the legislative session.

You know the Judge is an old legislator himself, having represented Bibb county in the House of Representatives for two sessions. He is a charm in meeting old friends and acquaintances, and I am sure to say Judge Adams has as large a circle of friends as any man in Alabama.

Mr. Tipton Mullins was another Miltonian present at the commencement of the legislature, so that both sides were represented. There may have been others, but these are all that I know of.

I have heard a good many grumbling about the jury lists not being published, but on the whole I am inclined to think it is a good thing in the interests of justice, and I expect it saves many a juryman from being worried to death.

Mr. I. O. Retherford showed me the other day a real nice sample of home meal, or as he called it "this home flour." It was made from a little corn he raised himself, and the meal was as white as wheat flour and had such an appetizing look about it I am quite ready to say a good word for it that it makes excellent biscuit.

We are indebted to Mr. Monroe Bell for a fine bunch of red pepper enough to keep me warm all winter. I counted fifteen pods in a cluster, and some of the pods were eight inches in length. Is there one other gentleman in Clanton I do not think "that's too much pepper."

"I have been sitting on the porch listening to the sighing of the wind," she said sentimentally by way of explanation of her long absence from the house.

"Yes; I heard him sigh," promptly put in the small boy.

THE VOTE IN KENTUCKY.

Bryan's Majority is Over 7,000 and Beckham's 4,000.

With unofficial returns from every precinct in Kentucky the Courier-Journal puts Bryan's majority at 7,365 and Beckham's at 4,110. The county boards canvassed the returns in every county in the state Friday, and fifty counties out of 119 in the state, whose official returns had been received, did not materially change the majorities given in the foregoing.

Chairman Leslie Combs, of the republican campaign committee, said he wished to state his position as to the contest. He does not want to be understood as saying authoritatively that the Kentucky election will be contested. He says he will advise with national and state leaders as to whether or not contests should be made. He does not say that contests will be made over the third, ninth and tenth congressional districts in which charges of fraud is made, but says that if his information about the election in those districts is correct, contests should be made. No contest for the governorship will be made.

COLLISION ON THE SOUTHERN.

Engineer Thomas Will Die and Four Others Seriously Injured.

A fast passenger and a double-header freight collided Friday morning at Hodges station, on the Southern railway, twenty miles east of Knoxville, Tenn. Engineer W. C. Thompson was fatally injured. Engineer Richard Parrott's arm and leg were broken and he was otherwise seriously injured. Mail Clerks I. N. Thomas, W. H. Roberts and L. H. Harris were also seriously injured. The three engines were completely demolished.

Bitterness Engendered.

Some bitterness among the Confederate veterans cropped out Saturday, says a New Orleans dispatch, when the Army of Northern Virginia, Camp No. 1, which is the first organized camp of the United Confederate Veterans, not only repudiated the action of their delegates to the late Confederate reunion in Louisville in voting $250 for the erection of a monument over the grave of Jefferson Davis, declaring that the delegates had no authority to pledge the camp to this purpose, but refused to give any money to the Jefferson Davis monument.

All of Them Were Injured.

A distressing accident occurred near DeFuniak Springs, Fla. Duncan McLain, a wealthy mill operator, and his wife and two children were driving in a carriage when the horses ran away. All of the occupants were thrown violently to the ground. The seven-months-old child was killed instantly, the four-year-old child painfully bruised, the father had his legs broken and may die, and the mother was severely injured and is in a serious condition.

Mr. Bryan's Future.

Mr. Bryan is in receipt of many requests for a statement concerning his future plans and his attitude on public questions, in view of Tuesday's result. He intimated that he would before long enlighten the public fully, but for the present he had private matters which needed his attention.

Would-Be Lynchers Convicted.

William Daniels and Ross Johnson were convicted of murder at Lake Charles, La., and sentenced to the state penitentiary for life. On September 27th of this year an attempt was made by a negro at Lake Charles to assault a white woman. The fellow was immediately captured and lodged in jail. At night a mob gathered and attempted to break into the prison. The sheriff's deputies resisted and during the melee one of them was killed. Daniels and Johnson were convicted of doing the killing.

Nebraska Goes Republican.

Almost complete returns give McKinley a plurality in Nebraska of over 6,000. The republican state ticket is apparently elected by from 1,500 to 2,000. The legislature, the returns on which are not yet completed, will probably stand: Senate—Republicans, 16; fusionists 16; vacant, 1. House—Republicans, 51; fusionists, 49.

THE LEGISLATURE CONVENES

First Day's Session Was Marked by Unusual Proceedings.

BOTH BRANCHES QUICKLY ORGANIZED

William D. Jelks Elected President of the Senate and Francis L. Pettus Speaker of the House—Two Important Bills.

The first day of the present session of the general assembly of Alabama has been an extraordinary one. Both houses have accomplished the work that it has heretofore required three days to complete. Both houses completed organization, the vote of the August election was canvassed and published and two bills of great importance were introduced in the house.

There was no surprise in the selection of important officials for the two houses. For president of the senate William D. Jelks, of Barbour, was without opposition before the senate caucus, and the same was the case with Francis L. Pettus for speaker of the house.

A lively contest for engrossing and enrolling clerk of the senate between Mrs. Lulu Woods-Francis, of Birmingham, Mrs. Gesner and Frank B. McCall, of Montgomery, took place. Mrs. Francis won the contest.

The serious illness of Governor-elect Samford and the complications that would probably arise in case of his death is the one serious question now confronting the legislators. The counting and declaring of the vote of the August election has given some light upon the matter, inasmuch as it does away with the possible claim of any other candidate at the August election to the position. The plan to have the oath of office administered to the governor by a notary public at his home in Opelika has been practically abandoned, but it may be that the legislature will go to Opelika in a body that the constitution may be complied with and the oath administered in the presence of both houses of the general assembly.

Two bills were introduced into the house looking to a straightening out of the possible complication. The first was by Mr. Bulger, the full text of which follows:

H. 1—To amend section 1953 of the Civil Code of Alobama.

Section 1—Be it enacted by the general assembly of Alabama that section 1953 of the Civil code of 1896 be amended so as to read as follows:

"Section 1952 (66) (65) (53)—Governor's oath. By whom and when administered. The oath required by the fifteenth article of the constitution of this state may be administered to the governor by the presiding officer of either house of the general assembly, or by any officer authorized to administer an oath." The bill was referred to the rules committee.

Mr. Tunstall, of Hale, offered this bill, which was read one time and referred to the rules committee:

A bill to be entitled an act providing who shall discharge the duties of the office of governor of the state of Alabama in the event that the governor-elect should die before entering upon the discharge of the duties of the office.

Section 1—Be it enacted by the general assembly of Alabama, that in the event of the death of the governor-elect before he enters upon the discharge of the duties of the office of governor of Alabama, the president of the senate shall exercise all the power and authority appertaining to the office of governor until the time appointed for the election of governor shall arrive.

THE HOUSE.

Speaker Waller called to order the session at 12:08 p. m. Prayer was offered by Rev. F. P. Culver, of Tuscaloosa. The minister was earnest in his petition to God to restore the health of Governor-elect Samford.

Speaker Waller addressed briefly the body, taking a firm position in advocacy of the passage of a constitutional convention bill. He believed the regulation of the franchise to be the paramount issue.

The members of the house were then enrolled and the oath of office administered.

B. H. Screws, of Montgomery, was nominated and elected chairman of the democratic caucus and R. D. Eckelberger, of Madison, secretary.

Mr. Pankhead moved that all candidates without opposition for house offices be nominated, and the motion carried.

The result of this motion was the selection of J. C. Adams, of Dale, for clerk; Francis L. Pettus, of Dallas, for speaker; Frank N. Julian, of Colbert, for assistant clerk; J. Robert D. Hanson, of Etowah, for doorkeeper; Thomas J. Fain, of Dale, for assistant doorkeeper.

Mr. Pettus then took the oath of office as speaker and declared the house ready for business.

The speaker named the following committee on rules: The speaker, Messrs. Clarke, of Mobile; Tunstall, of Hale; Chapman, of Sumpter; Dill, of Jefferson; Wilson, of Clark; Wallace, of Madison.

SENATE.

The senate convened in bi-annial session at 12:15 sharp. President R. M. Cunningham called the meeting to order. Prayer was offered by Dr. Ott.

The secretary called the roll, which showed thirty-two senators present.

The new senators elected from the odd districts and certified to by the secretary of state, were duly sworn in by the president.

At this juncture the senate recessed to hold a caucus. Senator Moore was appointed as permanent chairman of the caucus, Senator Arrington was elected unanimously as secretary, and the following senate officers were nominated and elected: W. D. Jelks, president; Elmore Garrett, secretary; Kyle, assistant secretary; Mrs. Lula Wood Francis, engrossing clerk; J. C. Ott, doorkeeper; W. N. Cook, assistant doorkeeper.

As this completed the order of business, a motion to adjourn was made and carried, and the caucus adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

Dr. Russell M. Cunningham made an eloquent speech upon retiring from the senate presidency.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Summary of the Progress of the State For the Past Four Years.

Governor Johnston's message went to the general assembly Tuesday afternoon. The governor summarizes the progress that has been made in the past four years of democratic administration as follows:

1. The deficit has disappeared.
2. The credit of our state is at the highest point of its history.
3. Not a dollar of money has been borrowed in four years, and for more than three years every just claim has been paid promptly on presentation.
4. Substantial progress has been made in securing better assessments and compelling all to contribute their just share to the burdens of government.
5. The convict department, from being a drag on our treasury, is now contributing nearly $50,000 annually to lessen the burdens of the people.
6. Our direct appropriations for common schools has been doubled, and the schools are taught better and the term has increased from 66 days to five months.
7. School teachers have not been compelled to discount their well-earned compensation.
8. Many thousand acres of school lands have been recovered or compensation obtained for the same.
9. All officials receiving public revenues are faithfully and promptly accounting for the same, and the state has not lost a dollar by any defaulter in over three years.
10. Very few errors, and these generally of small amounts, are now found in the accounts of public officials.
11. Crime has diminished 15 per cent as shown by the report of the attorney-general.
12. The volunteer troops are in an admirable state of efficiency and the expense of maintaining them has been largely decreased.
13. Confederate pensioners are now receiving nearly twice as much as a year ago.
14. A beginning has been made in the rescue of wayward and criminally-disposed children.

In regard to the financial condition of the state the governor says:

"I am confident that you can, with safety, reduce the general tax of the state nearly, or quite, one-fourth without in any manner crippling the efficient administration of the law or affecting the high credit of our state, and I earnestly recommend that this be done. The reduction will tend to increase the assessed value of our property and bring out much that is now escaping its just share of taxation. Methods can always be found to get money out of a full treasury. It invites the cupidity of many and appeals to the generosity of the lawmakers. But a few months since a great clamor was raised by some because we had over a million dollars in cash in the treasury. There was no cause for it then, and we should avoid any just cause for such a complaint. If our present tax rate is continued and assessments maintained, it will provide largely more money than is needed for the economical administration of the government. It is much wiser and more patriotic and democratic to have this surplus in the pockets of the people rather than pile it up in the treasury."

Near where Mr. Thrasher made his discovery another miner is said to be picking up nuggets worth from $10 to $15 each.

The Cleburne fields around Arbacoochee and the Pinetucky field, in Randolph county, not far away, both promise to be the scenes of unusual mining activity in the near future. The Cleburne field is being worked more extensively now than at any time since the war and is paying well. FORTY-FOUR DROWNED

The Steamer City of Monticello Goes Down in the Bay of Fundy.

DASHED TO PIECES ON THE ROCKS

Storm Was Raging and the Billows Ran Mountain High During the Vessel On to Destruction.

The worst marine disaster in the long list of steamers wrecked among the rocks and reefs at the entrance of the Bay of Fundy occurred Saturday morning when the sidewheel steamer City of Monticello, bound from St. John for Yarmouth was overwhelmed by the mountainous seas only four miles from her destination and engulfed with thirty-four of her passengers and crew. A heavy gale was raging at the time and there was a tremendous sea.

The place where the Monticello struck is at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy, where the waters of the bay join those of the Atlantic. There are many reefs and shoals at this point and the currents are many and changeable, it being one of the most dangerous places on the coast. The gale Saturday kicked up a tremendous sea and at the time the vessels struck the waves were beating upon the rocks and sending sprays for hundreds of feet over the land.

The Monticello was on her way from St. John to Yarmouth with a full freight and fairly large passenger list. Just before she foundered an attempt was made to reach the land in a small boat in charge of the quartermaster, and it contained Third Officer Flemming a stewardess named Smith and three passengers. This boat was smashed by a huge timber, the occupants being hurled high upon the beach at Pembroke uninjured. It is believed these are the only survivors.

"Pressed by the common desire for a speedy termination of present conditions, the foreign envoys have finally agreed to the following terms, to be presented in a conjoint note, which is subject to approval of the government treaty: "China shall erect a monument to Baron von Ketteler on the site where he was murdered, and send an imperial prince to Germany to convey an apology. The indemnity is to include compensation for Chinese who suffered through being employed by foreigners, but not compensation for native Christians. The words missionary and Christion do not occur in the note.

Nashville Bank Victimized.

The arrest of T. P. Brady upon a federal warrant sworn out by F. O. Watts, cashier of the First National bank, has stirred up a sensation in Nashville, Tenn. The firm of Connor & Brady, composed of J. H. Connor and T. P. Brady, wholesale grocers and liquor dealers, made an assignment Monday and the arrest of Brady followed. In this connection the disappearance last July of W. W. Lea, an individual book keeper of the First National bank, is explained. The two are charged with collusion in defrauding the bank out of $44,000.

Shot Through the Heart and Lives.

Annie Norton, a middle-aged woman of Chattanooga, shot herself with a pistol in the breast a few days ago, and it was thought at the time that she could not live. She is in a fair way to recover, however. The city physician, Dr. Shoff, who has charge of the case, states that he carefully probed the wound and found that the bullet penetrated the heart, going through it. He gives this as one of the very few cases of survival after a bullet wound through that vital organ.

Rural Mail Delivery.

The appropriation for rural free delivery service, which the postmaster-general will ask from congress for the next fiscal year, probably will be upwards of $2,500,000.

HORRIBLE HOTEL DISASTER

Many Dead and Injured in a Fire at Poplar Bluff, Mo.

GUESTS CAUGHT LIKE RATS IN A TRAP

And Leaped From the Windows—Four Known to Be Dead and Others Missing—A Dozen or More Bodies May Be Found.

A special from Poplar Bluff, Mo., says:

"A fire, accompanied by terrible fatality, occurred here Monday morning, resulting in the total destruction of the Gifford house, a large three-story frame building. The list of known dead is as follows: Heck Clark, Donephan, Mo.; Rebecca Owens, Shelby DeHart and Curly Berry, Poplar Bluff.

"Fatally injured: Etta Hargrove, Poplar Bluff; Winslow Stowe, Tennessee.

"Missing: Eugene Dalton, Ho Springs, Ark.

"The following were badly hurt or injured by jumping from windows: T. A. Smith, Poplar Bluff; Barney Pernaud, Desoto, Mo.; Charles Stradley, Benjamin Shelby, Mrs. Benjamin Shelby, Pink Berry, Elmer Freshear and James Upchurch, all of Poplar Bluff.

"An unknown woman is also thought to be fatally injured and about a dozen more were slightly burned or received bruises in escaping from the building.

"The fire originated in the rear of the hotel, and a few minutes later the hotel building, which was entirely of wood, was a mass of flames. There were in the neighborhood of forty-five guests in the building. The porter, the only person awake in the hotel, was unable to give an alarm, the smoke and flames driving him back.

"The guests on the second and third floors were caught like rats in a trap, the fire preventing their escape by the stairs, and they leaped from the second and third story windows.

"Benjamin Shelby asserts that he saw ten or fifteen persons in the hallway overcome by smoke. If this is the case a dozen or more bodies may be found in the ruins.

"A number of the guests were not registered and their names are unknown. Every room in the house, forty-five in number, was occupied. Men are now at work on the ruins, but it will probably be several days before the complete list of deaths will be obtainable."

Marcus Daly is Dead.

Marcus Daly, of Montana, died Monday morning at the Hotel Netherland, New York. Mr. Daly's death had been expected for weeks. Bright's disease complicated with heart weakness was the cause of death.

Marcus Daly was born in Ireland in 1842. He came to the United States early in life, and since 1876 has been a citizen of Montana. He became general manager of the Alice silver mine and later came into control of the Anaconda copper mine. At the time of his death he was president of the Amalgamated Copper company. In politics he was a democrat.

Feud Results in Three Deaths.

King Campbell shot and instantly killed his 10-year-old brother while out hunting, near Bristol, Tenn. Campbell's shotgun was accidentally discharged and the full load penetrated the boy's abdomen.

Two killings are reported in Scott county, Virginia. James Berry shot Mitchell Sorbers, it is said, for having made him dismount from his horse and crawl on his hands and knees.

James Smith killed Henry Stallard on sight over a recent outbreak of the Smith-Stallard feud.

Naval Appropriations.

The comparative statement of estimates for appropriations for the navy for the fiscal year 1901 and 1902 shows the total appropriation for the year 1901 were $65,180,916, and the total estimates for 1902 are $87,172,681.

ALABAMA NEWS SUMMARY.

Important Questions to Come Before the Daughters of the Confederacy.

At the annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which convenes in Montgomery this week, two questions of live importance will come up. First will be the question of purchasing the "White House of the Confederacy" as a museum of southern history, and the second will be the taking of some action looking to the introduction into public schools of histories treating of the civil war in a manner acceptable to the organization. The attendance at the convention is to be large. The opening exercises will be held in the capitol and in the hall in which the confederate convention held its historic sessions and declared the right of secession.

In that hall Jefferson Davis was elected president of the Confederate states. From it the order was issued for the bombardment of Fort Sumter. In the balcony Mr. Davis was was inaugurated.

It is expected that all the old officers, with the possible exception of the first vice-president, will be re-elected. They are: General president, Mrs. Edwin G. Weed, Jacksonville, Fla.; first vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Read, New York city; second vice-president, Mrs. S. T. McCullough, Staunton, Va.; recording secretary, Mrs. John J. Hickman, Nashville, Tenn.; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary F. Meares, Wilmington, N. C.; treasurer, Mrs. J. Jefferson Thomas, Atlanta.

Mistrial in Jacobi Case.

The Jacobi case, which has been on trial in Montgomery for several days, and which was given to the jury Saturday afternoon, has resulted in a mistrial, the jury failing to agree. The judge ordered an investigation into the conduct of the jurymen during the trial, it being charged that some of them were heard to remark that the defendant could not be convicted. The jury stood three for assault and nine for assault to rape as charged.

Dr. Ayres Receives Appointment.

Dr. T. W. Ayres, of Anniston, has been appointed to the hospital service at Hwang Hieng, China, by the missionary board of the Baptist church, and will start for that place as soon as the present trouble between China and the United States and the powers of Europe are settled. Dr. Ayres is a practicing physician at Anniston, but was for a number of years editor of the Jacksonville Republican, and later of the Anniston Hot Blast.

May Become an Alabamian.

"Private" John Allen, the well known Mississippi Congressman who retires from office with his present term, may become an Alabama citizen. He owns a little place at Coden, in Mobile county, given him by his good friend, Hon. E. L. Russell, president of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, and he likes the country. To a reporter of the Mobile Herald Mr. Allen said that he would probably build a home at Coden and spend much of his time at that place.

Jefferson County Vote.

The average number of votes received by the democratic electors in Jefferson county was 4,575, while the average received by the republican electors was 2,886. The majority of the democrats in the county was 1,739.

A firm of marble workers at Mobile is constructing a monument which will be erected to the memory of Cubans who died fighting for liberty in Cuba. The monument is twenty-six feet high.

Macon county negroes will hold a fair at Notasulga on November 28 and 29. Prof. R. Potts is at the head of the movement.

John Gafford, who killed Bartow Lloyd at Greenville, will be tried in Montgomery on December 4, his case having been moved to that city on the allegation by his attorney that he could not get a fair trial at Greenville.

Attractive Bed Coverings.

The new showings in bed coverings never were more attractive or varied. The Anatolians are specially pleasing this season, and from the great ease with which they may be laundered recommended themselves to many. Pique or dimity trimmed with white ball fringe is a new idea in bedspreads that is very pretty and quite la mode. Then the old reliable Marseilles, with its weight and laundering difficulties, but lasting qualities, is to be had in very new and novel designs, many different in effect from those ever offered before.

Water For Washing Woolens.

Many people sincerely believe that it is impossible to wash all-wool undergarments without their shrinking. This is a popular error. With an abundance of soft water, keeping every water through which the flannels pass at the same temperature, with pure white soap and careful drying, there need be no shrinkage. To soften the hard water obtained from the rivers and springs from which most cities get their water supply use a tablespoonful of household ammonia to a gallon of water. If the water is exceptionally hard more ammonia will be required. Having ready the softened water, heat as hot as the hand can bear comfortably and pour into two tubs. Make one with a strong soapsuds, using a borax soap—never a resinous brown soap.

Washing Colored Calicoes.

Colored calicoes should be washed in warm, not hot, water. Blues and greens are strengthened by the use of vinegar in the rinsing or bluing water, allowing one tablespoon of vinegar to a quart of water. With other calicoes or cambrics salt may be used to set the color. Miss Parlos declares that the ideal way to treat delicate colors, dark sateens or mourning goods is not to use soap at all, but the following starch mixture, which cleanses and stiffens at the same time: For two dresses make one gallon of starch by mixing one cupful of flour with one pint of cold water. Stir until all the lumps are dissolved and pour over it three and one-half quarts of boiling water. Cook until clear and smooth, then strain through cheesecloth. Pour half the mixture in a tub containing four gallons of warm water. Wash one of the dresses in this, rubbing the fabric the same as if soap were used. Rinse in two clear waters and hang out to dry, when they will be found to be about as stiff as when new. Sprinkle only an hour or so before ironing. Calicoes should all be ironed on the wrong side.—Washington Star.

Sponge Sandwiches—Make cottage cheese in the usual way, but after it has drained mince thoroughly in clear, cold water to remove the acid; put in a cheesecloth and squeeze dry. To a cup of the dry, sweet curd add one fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of paprika, if liked and half a cup of sweet cream. Spread thickly between thin slices of sponge cake.

Cabbage Salad—Boil one-half cupful of vinegar, the yoke of four eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of mustard and a level tablespoonful of butter until the mixture is limpid. Season with celery salt, and when it is cold add one cupful of cream that has been whipped. Pour over the shredded or chopped cabbage and garnish with stoned olives and hard boiled eggs.

Cheese Souffle—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter; when bubbling blend in three tablespoonfuls of flour; stir in gradually one-half pint of scalding milk and cook slowly for five minutes, stirring constantly; add one cupful of grated cheese, pepper and salt to taste, and the beaten yolks of three eggs, then fold in lightly the beaten whites, turn into a buttered dish and bake in a hot oven for about twenty minutes. Serve immediately.

Ravioli of Spinach—Use ten tablespoonfuls of seasoned, mashed and whipped potatoes; add six tablespoonfuls of flour and half as much butter; mix well, then lay the mass upon a floured board and roll out an inch thick; cut in circles the size of a saucer and moisten the edges with the yolk of an egg; place a tablespoonful of cooked spinach on and fold turnover style; brush the top with the white of an egg and bake till a nice brown, then arrange around the fish platter with a heaping teaspoonful of whipped cream on each. Spinach acquires a mellowness of flavor by repeatedly warming over.

Confection Cake—Cream two cups of sugar with two-thirds of butter, add a cup of sweet milk, two and a half cups of flour, two rounding spoonfuls of baking powder, the whites of six eggs beaten very stiff and half a teaspoonful of flavoring extract. Bake in four layers. Boil two cups of sugar with half a cup of water till like thick honey, pour gradually on the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beat till cold. To half of it put candied cherries, figs and raisins chopped fine, with a few hickorynut and almond meats, also chopped, and flavor. Spread between the layers. Use the other half of the icing to cover the top of the cake. This is a delicious cake.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

The velocity of sound depends to some extent upon the temperature of the atmosphere. When the temperature is thirty-two degrees, sound travels 1090 feet a second, and one additional foot a second for each additional degree of temperature. Electricity in theory travels 288,000 miles a second; over a wire where there is no resistance it travels at the rate of 192,924 miles a second.

There is a popular impression that microbes and germs of all kinds are killed by intense cold. Recent experiments in the laboratory of Professor Dewar, the man who solidified hydrogen, show that this impression is erroneous. Many forms of bacteria were subjected to the tremendous cold of liquid air for an entire week without interruption, yet afterward they developed as vigorously as they would have done if they had not undergone so frosty an experience.

In France, Dufour has succeeded in making thermometer tubes of pure quartz. Not only are these tubes exceedingly transparent, but their resistance to heat and other advantages make them superior to glass for thermometers intended to measure high temperatures. In such thermometers melted tin takes the place of mercury, and the scale reads from about 185 degrees Fahrenheit up over 1000 degrees. It could be run up to 1800 degrees, for quartz does not soften below that temperature.

Mr. Claude Fuller, the English Government entomologist in Natal, South Africa, says that the Basutos eat locusts, even making cakes of them, as he is informed. In Pietermaritzburg the natives, and some of the whites, gather the flying termites that are attracted by the electric lamps, and use them both for fish bait and for food. They are sometimes toasted and sometimes fried in a pan with butter. He quotes from a friend the statement that bugong moths are cooked by the natives on hot ashes and eaten with great gusto.

The mistral is a famous wind which blows cold and strong in Southeastern France. In the districts where it prevails the trees all lean toward the southeast, and the gardens have to be protected on the northwest side from which the wind comes, by lofty walls. Last winter in Marseilles a carriage in which a lady was driving was blown bodily into a canal by the mistral, and both the lady and the horse were drowned. In consequence of this accident, and of other manifestations of the power of this destructive wind the Mayor of Marseilles issued an order that no carriages should be allowed to drive alongside the canals or the water front of the harbor while a mistral is blowing.

An interesting experiment in acclimatization is now being made by Herr Wendt, chief forester at Todtnau, Germany. At the zoological garden at Basel he procured a male reindeer and completed the family by buying at the Copenhagen market two females. The three animals were let loose in the Fahlberg region of the Schwarzwald, which reaches an altitude of 4500 feet. As there is a large supply of reindeer moss in the higher regions of the Black Forest, above the altitude of 2400 feet, the chief forester believes that reindeer will thrive on the Fahlberg as well as on the Kjolen of Norway. Zoologists are watching this experiment with much interest, and Herr Wendt has agreed to give out reports from time to time.

His Banjo a Barometer.

There is a young man about town who is always prepared for all kinds of weather. No matter if he attends a function when the night is cloudless and rain falls before he goes home, he is always on hand with an umbrella, much to the delight of the girl with him.

For a long time his secret remained undisclosed, and he was looked upon by some people as a fool for luck, and by others as a weather prophet who could give points to the local bureau. However, it is no longer a secret, for the young man confessed not long ago the reason for his invariably correct prognostication of nasty weather. He is a very fair banjoist, and it was noticed that he always played on his instrument before going out at night. When the plaintive sounds were muffled he never neglected to take his umbrella, but if, on the contrary, the sound was sharp and clear, he went out with the firm conviction that he would have no need for his "brelly" before his return.

The head or sounding board of a banjo is made of sheepskin, and in damp weather it expands and the head becomes loose. In dry weather it becomes tight as a drum. This is the reason of his invariable good luck in "picking" the weather, for he owns a natural barometer.—Louisville Evening Post.

How He Knew.

Sir Robert Finlay, the new Attorney-General of England, was once engaged on a case of warranty of a horse, the animal being the chief matter in dispute. Sir Robert was examining a hostler, who had every appearance of rustic simplicity.

"Upon what authority do you swear to the age of the mare?" Sir Richard asked.

"I am sure of it," was the reply.

Half a dozen more questions failed to elicit from the witness any more specific answer.

"But how do you know it?" thundered Sir Robert, at last.

"I had it from the mare's own mouth," replied the hostler.

The General Assembly convened last Tuesday.

FALL term of Circuit Court convenes at Clanton on Monday, November 26.

WHAT has become of the Cotton Growers' Protective Association of Chilton county? If the organization is not to be perfected it would be only fair to those members who have already paid their initiation fee to call one meeting and refund them their money.

THE official count last Saturday shows that Sydney S. Bowie received 560 votes for congress in this county, and that the Republican ticket carried the county by a majority of 287. The Republican electors received an average of 781 votes, the Democrats 451, and the Populists and Prohibitionist 21 votes each. About 1300 votes in all were cast, or one-half of the number of voters turned out.

GOVERNOR-ELECT Samford, we are glad to say, is improving and yesterday was able to sit up. There is reason to hope he will be well enough to be inaugurated on December 1. The General Assembly yesterday passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, the illustrious patriot and statesman, Hon. William J. Samford, Governor-elect of Alabama, and beloved by all her people, lies critically ill at his home in Opelika.

"Therefore, Be it resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, that our heartfelt sympathy is extended to him in his sickness, with earnest prayer and hope that God will spare him to the State and grant his speedy recovery.

"Resolved further, that the president of the Senate and the Speaker of the House transmit forthwith a copy of this resolution to the family of Col. Samford."

THE Populist-Republican members of the General Assembly of Alabama met in caucus last night and determined not to present a candidate for United States Senator to the joint session, which will elect Senator Morgan to succeed himself. There are ten non-Democratic members of the General Assembly. On motion of Hon. N. B. Spears of St. Clair, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That, notwithstanding we are unalterably opposed to the views of Hon. John T. Morgan in regard to a Constitutional Convention and the disfranchisement of the people of Alabama, we will vote for his re-election to the United States Senate on the grounds of the patriotic stand that he has taken in defense of the President and his Philippine policy and his defense of the President against the charges of imperialism and militarism made by the Democratic party and its late candidate for President."

This is all very well, and we are glad our Populist friends have so acted. But as every recent meeting of Populists has endorsed Democratic nominees, what is the use of pretending to keep up a separate Populist organization?

DEATH OF MR. JOHN GRANT.

Mr. John Grant, the half-brother of Mr. Alex G. Dake, died at his home, one and a-half miles north-east of Clanton, on Friday morning, November 9, at the age of 74 years. Mr. Grant was born at New Harmony, Ind., and came to Montgomery (about fifty years ago, where for twenty years he was engaged in the business of a contractor. For Thirty years he has been a highly respected citizen of Chilton county, but almost total deafness precluded his going into society, attending church, etc.

He leaves a widow and one son and daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral took place at the cemetery, Clanton, on Saturday morning, a large number of friends paying their last tribute of respect to the departed. To the bereaved family we offer our sincere sympathy, trusting that all will be united in the glad beyond.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Clanton drug co., and D. I. IN THE HOLY LAND.

Jerusalem, Aug. 31, 1900

We are again in the holy city, and you can see by that that I lived through the dreadful night at Jericho. As I write that letter just before finishing it, the jackals and hyenas commenced a most fearful serenade, then all of the forty dogs in Jericho joined in, then a Bedouin caravan came by singing in Arabic a weird, wild, unearthly song that added to the already gloomy surroundings of my temporary abode, and made me think of the prodigal son who got into so much trouble over in this country one time. No bad boys burlesque of a serenade on tin pans could equal the awful din for a short time. I slept no more, I did not try, and happy was I when the dragoman called me at 4 a.m. to resume journey. Mt. Pisgah can be seen from here over in the Nebo range in Moab. Also Mt. Hermon. We also saw the spring that Elisha changed from bitter to sweet water. It is strong enough to run a small water mill, and one is situated here in the spot that was once occupied by the house of Rahab the Harlet. I am told the negroes in this country were also the slaves of the Arab nobility. I could see no use in these people of the East wearing slippers as they wore no hose, and it seemed to me nicer taste to leave off the slippers too, but our guide said they worn to protect the feet from the heat of the ground. There has been three cities of Jericho, the one Joshua destroyed; the next one on a different site that Herod the great built and the Romans destroyed, and the modern one that is insignificant for any one to destroy. On our return by same road practically the same road our Saviour traveled, only now made into a good carriage road the entire distance through the mountains from Jerusalem to Jericho. We stop and look at the Inn on the site of the Inn of the Good Samaritan. Our next stop was at the Apostles well to rest horse and man. I called the attention of our Arab driver to the fact that two of our three horses hitched to the carriage were bleeding at the mouth. Our guide explained to me that it was the presence of leeches in their mouths; I had never heard of such before. After much trying the driver succeeded in getting them out of one of the horse's mouth. At this well many flocks with several shepherds had stopped to water their flocks, as they were en route to Jerusalem to sell them. They sell only the males and there was much striving among them for first show at the weak stream, and here too, came some of the native women with their water jugs, pushing their way through the flocks to get their goat skin jugs filled, and such was their miserable dress and appearance,

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

All persons due the Town of Clanton for Taxes for 1900 will please come forward and settle the same. A C. SMITH, Clerk.

The General Assembly convened last Tuesday.

FALL term of Circuit Court convenes at Clanton on Monday, November 26.

WHAT has become of the Cotton Growers' Protective Association of Chilton county? If the organization is not to be perfected it would be only fair to those members who have already paid their initiation fee to call one meeting and refund them their money.

THE official count last Saturday shows that Sydney S. Bowie received 560 votes for congress in this county, and that the Republican ticket carried the county by a majority of 287. The Republican electors received an average of 781 votes, the Democrats 451, and the Populists and Prohibitionist 21 votes each. About 1300 votes in all were cast, or one-half of the number of voters turned out.

GOVERNOR-ELECT Samford, we are glad to say, is improving and yesterday was able to sit up. There is reason to hope he will be well enough to be inaugurated on December 1. The General Assembly yesterday passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, the illustrious patriot and statesman, Hon. William J. Samford, Governor-elect of Alabama, and beloved by all her people, lies critically ill at his home in Opelika.

"Therefore, Be it resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, that our heartfelt sympathy is extended to him in his sickness, with earnest prayer and hope that God will spare him to the State and grant his speedy recovery.

"Resolved further, that the president of the Senate and the Speaker of the House transmit forthwith a copy of this resolution to the family of Col. Samford."

THE Populist-Republican members of the General Assembly of Alabama met in caucus last night and determined not to present a candidate for United States Senator to the joint session, which will elect Senator Morgan to succeed himself. There are ten non-Democratic members of the General Assembly. On motion of Hon. N. B. Spears of St. Clair, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That, notwithstanding we are unalterably opposed to the views of Hon. John T. Morgan in regard to a Constitutional Convention and the disfranchisement of the people of Alabama, we will vote for his re-election to the United States Senate on the grounds of the patriotic stand that he has taken in defense of the President and his Philippine policy and his defense of the President against the charges of imperialism and militarism made by the Democratic party and its late candidate for President."

This is all very well, and we are glad our Populist friends have so acted. But as every recent meeting of Populists has endorsed Democratic nominees, what is the use of pretending to keep up a separate Populist organization?

DEATH OF MR. JOHN GRANT.

Mr. John Grant, the half-brother of Mr. Alex G. Dake, died at his home, one and a-half miles north-east of Clanton, on Friday morning, November 9, at the age of 74 years. Mr. Grant was born at New Harmony, Ind., and came to Montgomery (about fifty years ago, where for twenty years he was engaged in the business of a contractor. For Thirty years he has been a highly respected citizen of Chilton county, but almost total deafness precluded his going into society, attending church, etc.

He leaves a widow and one son and daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral took place at the cemetery, Clanton, on Saturday morning, a large number of friends paying their last tribute of respect to the departed. To the bereaved family we offer our sincere sympathy, trusting that all will be united in the glad beyond.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been a subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dessolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Clanton drug co., and D. I. IN THE HOLY LAND.

We are again in the holy city, and you can see by that that I lived through the dreadful night at Jericho. As I write that letter just before finishing it, the jackals and hyenas commenced a most fearful serenade, then all of the forty dogs in Jericho joined in, then a Bedouin caravan came by singing in Arabic a weird, wild, unearthly song that added to the already gloomy surroundings of my temporary abode, and made me think of the prodigal son who got into so much trouble over in this country one time. No bad boys burlesque of a serenade on tin pans could equal the awful din for a short time. I slept no more, I did not try, and happy was I when the dragoman called me at 4 a.m. to resume journey. Mt. Pisgah can be seen from here over in the Nebo range in Moab. Also Mt. Hermon. We also saw the spring that Elisha changed from bitter to sweet water. It is strong enough to run a small water mill, and one is situated here in the spot that was once occupied by the house of Rahab the Harlot. I am told the negroes in this country were also the slaves of the Arab nobility. I could see no use in these people of the East wearing slippers as they wore no hose, and it seemed to me nicer taste to leave off the slipper too, but our guide said they worn to protect the feet from the heat of the ground. There has been three cities of Jericho, the one Joshua destroyed; the next one on a different site that Herod the great built and the Romans destroyed, and the modern one that is insignificant for any one to destroy. On our return by same road practically the same road our Saviour traveled, only now made into a good carriage road the entire distance through the mountains from Jerusalem to Jericho. We stop and look at the Inn on the site of the Inn of the Good Samaritan. Our next stop was at the Apostles well to rest horse and man. I called the attention of our Arab driver to the fact that two of our three horses hitched to the carriage were bleeding at the mouth. Our guide explained to me that it was the presence of leeches in their mouths; I had never heard of such before. After much trying the driver succeeded in getting them out of one of the horse's mouth. At this well many flocks with several shepherds had stopped to water their flocks, as they were en route to Jerusalem to sell them. They sell only the males and there was much striving among them for first show at the weak stream, and here too, came some of the native women with their water jugs, pushing their way through the flocks to get their goat skin jugs filled, and such was their miserable dress and appearance,

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR NOVEMBER 18.

Subject: The Ten Lepers Cleansed, Luke xvii., 11-19 — Golden Text: Col. iii., 15 — Memory Verses, 17-19 — Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

11. "As He went to Jerusalem." From Ephraim, where Jesus and His disciples had been in seclusion. "Through the midst." This mention of Samaria before Galilee is confusing, being the opposite direction to a journey to Jerusalem. Probably "through the midst" is to be understood as meaning "along the frontiers of."

12. "Ten men were lepers." The leprosy was a disease which the Jews supposed to be inflicted for the punishment of some particular sin, and to be, more than other diseases, a mark of God's displeasure; therefore Christ took particular pains to cleanse the lepers. There were ten in this company, for though they were shut out from the society of others, they were at liberty to mingle together. The law pronounced the leper unclean, and he was obliged to warn passers-by with the cry of "unclean, unclean." Leprosy is a type of sin. The leper was (1) defiled, and he defiled everything he touched, (2) extremely loathsome, and (3) shut out of society. This all applies with equal force to the sinner. The surroundings of the leper were also unclean. Lev. 13: 47-59; 14: 33-47. We must see to it that our surroundings are not infected. The clothes we wear, the books we read, the company we keep, the places we frequent, the scenes we visit, if leprous, will cause our death. "Which stood afar off." They were not permitted to come near to persons in health, Lev. 13: 46; Num. 5: 2.

13. "Lifted up their voices." Their request was unanimous. The ten cried as with one voice. They had evidently heard of the fame of Jesus and how He cured the leprosy. "Jesus, Master." Their faith in Him is sincere. Although they do not yet know the Saviour's dignity as the Messiah, yet they account Him a prophet, mighty in deed and word. "Have mercy on us." They knew they were lepers, and that no human power could save them; they accordingly, very properly, plead for mercy. Jesus always helps those who thus call upon Him. It is mercy that the sinner must have. Justice would destroy him in a moment. These lepers, 1. See their helplessness. 2. Have faith in Jesus. 3. Appeal to His compassion.

14. "When He saw them." It was a sight that might have touched any heart, for they were smitten with a living death. The pity of Jesus was excited, and He called to them immediately. "Show yourselves unto the priests." To obtain the testimony of the priests that they were really cured and might be released from their enforced seclusion, and be again admitted into society. According to the law (Lev. 14: 2-32) the priest alone had authority to declare a person clean or unclean, and whenever Jesus healed a leper He sent him immediately to the priest. See Matt. 8: 4. "As they went, they were cleansed." Jesus did not touch them as in Matt. 8: 3, but caused their faith in Him to be tested. They were commanded to go to the priest, and they actually started on the journey before they were healed. It was a strong test, but their perfect confidence in Christ was equal to it. They had heard no words of cleansing, they felt no change in their diseased bodies; but they went. They acted their faith. Every step they took away from the presence of Christ proved that they trusted Him. They took Jesus at His word. This is faith. Many will not believe until they see what they call a reason for it, but such are never likely to be saved. The best reason for believing and obeying is that we are in harmony with God's express command. The person who acts on God's word is safe.

15. "One of them." The Samaritan. The other nine who were Jews would naturally separate from him as they started to their priests at Jerusalem. The Samaritan no doubt started to his own priests. "When he saw—turned back." They had not gone far until they saw they were healed, and they should have returned, if but for a moment, to thank their benefactor for deliverance from a disease that was worse than death. But the nine Jews were too much taken up with themselves in their desire to obtain official certificates from the priests to think of this. "With a loud voice glorified God." Because of the wonderful cure that had been wrought in him. He had been loud in prayer and now he is loud in praise. Saved souls have a special license granted them to praise the Lord. See Luke 19: 37-40. David said, "Seven times a day do I praise Thee." Psa. 119: 164. The wonder is that we do not praise Him more.

16. "On his face at His feet." Before he was healed he remained at a distance, but now he draws near, and in a humble posture he shows all who are present what the Lord has done for him. "Giving Him thanks." The least any one should do is to express thankfulness for God's rich blessings. Ingratitude is a great sin. It is said of the heathen that "when they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful." Rom. 1: 21. "A Samaritan." One who professed a very corrupt religion, and from whom much less was expected than from the other nine.

17. "Were there not ten cleansed?" He knew that He had cleansed the other nine. How rich Christ is in doing good. Here was a cure by wholesale. There is an abundance of healing, cleansing virtue in the blood of Christ, sufficient for all His patients. "Where are the nine?" A sadness of tone is perceptible in this question. The nine received the healing, but forgot the Healer. However great or numerous the temporal favors God bestows upon men, few comparatively give Him the glory due to His name. Jesus noticed the slight offered Him, and called attention to it. We should be careful and not be one of the nine.

18. "To give glory to God." They had shown their ingratitude to God. When we fail to honor Christ we dishonor God. It is the duty of all people to give glory to God. Jer. 13: 16. "Save this stranger"—Or "alien." The Samaritans were Gentiles. Their religion was a mixture of Judaism and idolatry; they worshiped they knew not what. In this transaction the Lord saw foreshadowed the bringing in of the Gentiles to His church.

19. "Thy faith." His confidence in Christ was the means, and the power of Christ the cause, of his cure. The true nature of faith is here very clearly displayed as consisting principally in moral qualities of obedience and love. "Hath made thee whole." "Hath saved thee." (R. V. margin) is much better. There was more done for him that the mere healing of his body. His faith had led him as a humble penitent to the Christ, and his soul is saved. He is now no longer "a stranger," but a disciple.

Nebraska Goes Republican.

Almost complete returns give McKinley a plurality in Nebraska of over 6,000. The republican state ticket is apparently elected by from 1,500 to 2,000. The legislature, the returns on which are not yet completed, will probably stand: Senate—Republicans, 16; fusionists 16; vacant, 1. House—Republicans, 51; fusionists, 49.

VALUE OF DOGS.

Wolf Species Contribute to the Country's Development.

Wolf dogs are not the handsomest of their species, yet they are now, and have been in the past, contributing not a little aid to the development of the far northwest. Much has been said of the Klondike, but the wolf dogs, which in the beginning made that frigid El Dorado possible, have received little more than passing comment. Nor has this neglect been due to their being but the humble servants of the master—man. They are far from humble, as their wild ancestry attests. They may be beaten into submission, but that will not prevent them still snarling their hatred. They may be starved into apparent docility and then die suddenly, with teeth fast locked in a brother's throat, torn to pieces by their comrades. Rather has little attention been accorded them because the interest of man has gravitated inexorably toward the natural, mineral and social features of that far-northerly land. But the husky is far from uninteresting. As a type of endurance no better evolved product of natural selection need be sought. If ever a species has been born and bred of hard times it has. Only the fittest in a struggle for existence extending through a thousand generations have survived. And they are well fit. Domesticated by the savage autochthons of that forbidding region, they may not only account their remote ancestors as wild wolves, but often their immediate forbears.

Switzerland's Army Is Large.

There is no country in Europe, with the exception of the little governments of Monaco and San Marino, which spends less for military purposes than Switzerland. The annual cost of its army is only about $500,000, and yet, in case of necessity, it can put into the field within two days 100,000 trained soldiers and retain at the same time another 100,000 as reserves, in addition to its militia, numbering 270,000 men, says the New York Herald. In Switzerland young men are trained to become good rifle shots, and there is not a hamlet in the country, without a volunteer association formed for this purpose. Military service is also compulsory from the twenty-second to the thirty-second year, forty-five days' service being required during the first year and sixteen during every subsequent year. The soldiers keep their weapons and uniforms at their own homes, and are held responsible for them by the government, which inspects them carefully once a year.

American Actresses in England.

Several of our American actresses have gone to England and almost without exception own charming houses. We perhaps hear the most about Mrs. James Brown Potter's cottage on the Thames, though her house in London also is famous. The Thames cottage has rare blue china and quaint old furniture.

Cafes of Sidewalks.

The cafe chairs and tables of the sidewalks are a Paris feature that the tourist immediately agrees ought to be adopted at home. They form the most distinctive feature of the Paris promenade. They give its Parisian brightness to the boulevard.

Expensive Toy Road.

Some children of Macon, Ga., are to have an expensive but highly instructive toy in the shape of a complete miniature trolley line about a mile long. Each car will accommodate eight passengers, and is complete in all details, including electric lights. The railway is to be located in a private park.

Illiteracy in Roumania.

Roumania would appear to be the most illiterate country in Europe. The last census shows that, in a population of nearly 6,000,000, nearly 4,000,000 can neither read nor write, and that only a little over 1,000,000 have any education at all.

New South Wales' Population.

The estimated population of New South Wales on June 30 was as follows: Males, 720,420; females, 631,700—total, 1,361,120. The increase for the half year amounted to 4,470, the smallest price 1860.

Saw Romans Mob an Anarchist.

Rev. A. B. White, pastor of the Austin, Ill., Methodist Episcopal church, who recently returned from a European trip, was in Rome at the time King Humbert was assassinated. He says the people were infuriated by the murder of the king, and he saw a mob dragging the editor of an anarchist paper through the streets.

Might Have Patronized "Uncle."

The bishop of London told a quaint story the other day at a meeting at the speaker's house, Westminster. A little east end girl was being examined upon the question of the prodigal and his eating of the husks, when she inquired: "What else could he have done?" The child replied: "He could have pawned his little girl's boots."

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Three great and complete cures effected by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Ferre, who resides near 905 Main Street, Hartford, Conn., says:

"My daughter Lulu became very ill with St. Vitus dance over a year ago. She became so bad that she lost the use of her right arm and side, and we thought at one time she would lose her speech. Her tongue was almost paralyzed. She was so bad she could not feed herself, and at night she would get so nervous I had to sit and hold her. I tried several doctors, but they did not do her any good. I did not find anything that would help her until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She is now, by the use of this medicine, entirely cured."

C. H. Bailey, Esq., of Waterbury, Vt., writes:

"I am more than glad to write about my little daughter. Until a short time ago she had always been a very delicate child and subject to sick spells lasting weeks at a time. She was very nervous, and our family doctor said we would never raise her, she was so delicate and feeble. We tried many remedies without the least good. We felt much anxiety about her, especially as no doctors could benefit her, and had great fear for her future. Learning of the wonders being done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to give it to her. She soon commenced to improve under its use, and rapidly gained in every respect. She eats and sleeps well, and her nerves are strong. The medicine has done wonders for her and it is the best we ever knew. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura, blood and nerve remedy, to everybody."

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., says:

"At ten years of age my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack. The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk. She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old, and has been well ever since, and to-day is a picture of health."

Where Breakfast Is Not Eaten.

For the last fifteen years Dr. E. H. Dewey of Meadville, Pa., has never eaten breakfast. As a result he declares he is always in good health and has never known the pangs of dyspepsia. Dr. Dewey believes that to eat immediately after getting up in the morning is irrational and harmful. At that time the body is recuperated by sleep and is in no need of food. If a heavy breakfast is eaten the vital forces are employed with digestion and consequently a smaller amount of work can be done. So long has Dr. Dewey preached and practiced his peculiar theory that a large percentage of the inhabitants of Meadville have become his disciples, and the breakfast bell is fast becoming unknown in the Pennsylvania town. Dr. Dewey is a practicing physician, and in many cases of severe illness he prescribes not only abstinence from breakfast but from food at any time until the patient is well on the way to recovery. It is his opinion that many diseases are caused by overeating, and that they can be cured quicker by fasting than in any other way.—Chicago Tribune.

DEVELOPING A FAIR.

THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION TO EXCEL IN MANY PARTICULARS.

The Most Delicate and Intricate Plastic Work Ever Attempted For Exposition Purposes — Color and Horticultural Embellishment.

The development of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo is observed with profound interest throughout the western world. Almost every day shows some new feature of the magnificent enterprise completed. Some new tower rears aloft its ornamental pinnacle, some new dome presents its rounded top to the sky, or some new decoration of form or color is added to the wonderful bouquet of architectural loveliness.

Never was there an Exposition so novel, so unlike what the world has learned to expect, as this. With the glorious examples of the Exposition builder's art and genius to look back upon with fond remembrance and admiration, the world has wondered if all that has been promised for the Pan-American would be realized. If one may judge by the present stage of the vast work, the millions of visitors to Buffalo during the exposition season, which begins on the 1st of May next, will suffer no disappointment.

The Pan-American Exposition will outshine its distinguished predecessors in many particulars. Of these the court settings are of first importance. In order that there may be abundant room for the elaborate decorative effects, 33 acres are alone devoted to courts. This area is two and a half times the area of the courts at the Chicago's Columbian Exposition. About these broad courts are grouped a score of great buildings, in which the multitude of exhibits from all parts of the western world are to be displayed.

As a second important feature may be mentioned the ornate architecture, the use of plastic ornamentation of very intricate and beautiful design and the employment of original sculptured groups in the exterior decorations of buildings, entrances and architectural features. No less than 125 original sculptured groups, modeled by some 30 or more distinguished American sculptors, will be used in this feature of the decorative work.

The use of an elaborate color scheme has never before been attempted at an exposition. The appropriate title of the "Rainbow City" has already been applied to this great group of brilliantly colored buildings, and lovers of color will find the exquisite harmony of tints that has been produced a most delightful subject for contemplation and study.

As a fourth point of superiority may be named the hydraulic and fountain features. In all the courts are broad pools containing numberless cascades and fountains. These will add to the beauty of the great work in no small degree. Many of the fine sculptures will form a part of these charming fountains. A broad and stately canal, a mile and a half in length, banked with grass and lined with a double row of young trees, completely encircles the main group of buildings.

The horticultural embellishment of the grounds constitutes a fifth point of excellence. Ornamental trees, shrubs, lawns and flowers of brilliant hue will delight the eye everywhere. Sunken gardens and formal beds of flowers will surround fountains with pools and border upon the walks throughout the courts.

Crowning the great work of producing unparalleled vistas and an exposition picture of unrivaled beauty will be the electrical illumination. Only when a great volume of power is available, such as Buffalo possesses in the newly harnessed Niagara, could electric illumination be undertaken on so grand a scale. With unlimited power to draw upon, the electrician has had no restraining conditions in his work. The electric tower, 375 feet high, of rich and elaborate design, will form the centerpiece of the electrical brilliancy, while every building, fountain and architectural feature and even the broad surfaces of the artificial lakes and pools, with floating lights, will glow with electrical radiance and luster. The scene will be one of unsurpassed loveliness, hitherto impossible and unlikely soon to be repeated again on account of the vast expenditure of electrical energy necessary to produce it.

Will Cruise to Buffalo in 1901.

The Saginaw (Mich.) naval reserves have decided to make their next cruise in the summer of 1901 down Lake Erie to Buffalo. Commander F. L. Eaton says the trip has thus been planned with the view of giving the members of the organization a chance to see the Pan-American Exposition and obtain the benefit which a cruise on the lake would afford.

His Theory.

A novel explanation of the cause of thunder showers was once given by a journeyer in a little Nova Scotia town to one of the inhabitants.

"Do you know what makes the thunder?" the Nova Scotian inquired of his guest. "I've got a theory of my own, and I call it a pretty good one."

"I should like to hear it," was the diplomatic reply.

"Well," said the host slowly, "here's how I look at it. You know we have the air circulating and circulating all the time. My notion is that the hot air from above comes down here in summer and gets foul with all the smoke and dirt and grease, and the heat drives it up again into the clouds, and when it gets up there it's pressed on all round by the clouds, being together, and it explodes. That's my theory. Of course," he added, becoming modestly, "other folks may have others."—Youth's Companion.

Her Celestial Credentials.

"Put it down that she died the pride to the obituary writer, that she was 42 an likely for her age."

"That's down."

"That she was never known to speak a cross word, being one of an from childhood."

"All right."

"That she is now at rest on Abraham's bosom— But hold on! I guess that what Lazarus is in."

"I think so."

He paused a moment as if to think. Then he said:

"No matter. Put it down that she is there, too, for of course Lazarus would be comin he'll vacate an best mansion reserved place. Strike that out. It's been too long anyhow."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Soft Answer.

"There!" said the angry man, handing a photograph presumably of himself, under the photographer's nose. "Do you know what that makes me look like?"

"If you mean what it makes you look like at the present moment," answered the photographer, observing the face of the angry man carefully, "I should say it makes you look as if you were about to throw a fit."—Indianapolis Press.

Financial Report of the Town of Clanton,

Clanton, Ala., November 20, 1900

To the Council of the Town of Clanton,

Gentlemen:—

Herewith I hand you statements, prepared by the Finance Committee, showing the financial condition of the Town of Clanton covering the period from March, 1899 to November, 1900.

This statement shows that there has been issued warrants aggregating $920.27 of which $770.04 has been paid—leaving outstanding $150.13. It may be well to state that there is yet unpaid fines in the sum of $110.00 of which the amount of $100.00 is pending in the Circuit Court of Chilton county on appeal. And that the taxes due for the year 1900 are not included in the statements hereto attached.

I desire to call your attention to several amendments to the charter of Clanton that I am of the opinion should be had at the present session of the legislature, and would suggest that you take such action as will be in accord with the wishes of our citizens and the best interests of the town.

The boundary of the Town on the east side should be changed as to leave out the swamp and the public road east of the cemetery.

The charter should be so amended as to fix the status of cases appealed from the Mayor's Court to the Circuit Court, their prosecution there and the disposition of the fines and forfeitures.

Also to give the Marshal power to arrest anywhere in the county for offences committed in the Town limits.

Also to amend the manner in which judgments are rendered against defaulting tax payers.

I would also suggest the making of Clanton a special school district and the maintaining a school, free, in the town, the more advanced pupils attending such other schools as may exist in the town.

I desire to say that the most earnest attempts to suppress the sale of intoxicating liquors in the Town of Clanton have proven a failure, such failure being due almost entirely to the unwillingness of the citizens to become witnesses in prosecutions for this offense. Reports are frequently made to the Marshal and Mayor of the sale of liquor and though these parties claim to be in possession of the facts they refuse to allow their names used as witnesses. It is at least debateable question if it would not be best to attempt to regulate the sale of liquor by dispensary or bar. In such event the town would at least have the revenues from its sale, while at present we enjoy all of its curses and abuses, tax ourselves to protect the parties selling it, and derive no revenue whatever. While on the other hand the revenues, estimated at $2,000.00 per annum, with the present taxes would enable the Town to employ sufficient police force to enforce order and law, to grade and properly work the street and sidewalks, erect and maintain lights upon the streets, and to maintain absolutely a free school with first-class teachers for the full nine months in each year, at the same time permitting a possible reduction in the present rate of taxation.

I most earnestly suggest that you take such action during the present session of the legislature as will either suppress the sale of liquor in the Town of Clanton entirely, or secure such legislation as will give the town some revenue from its sale. Certainly one of these propositions should bring to your support a majority of our citizens.

Respectfully submitted.

J. P. VANDERVEER, Mayor.

His Theory.

A novel explanation of the cause of thunder showers was once given by a journer in a little Nova Scotia town to one of the inhabitants.

"Do you know what makes the thunder?" the Nova Scotian inquired of his guest. "I've got a theory of my own and I call it a pretty good one."

"I should like to hear it," was the diplomatic reply.

"Well," said the boat slowly, "the idea is this: You know we breathe the air circulating and circulate it all the time. My notion is that the air from above comes down here in summer and gets foul with all the smoke and dirt and grease, and then the boat drives it up again into the clouds, and when it gets up there it is pressed on all round by the cloud and, being together, and it explodes!"

"That is my theory. Of course," he added, becoming modesty, "other folks may have others."—Youth's Companion.

"All right."

"That she is now at rest on Abraham's bosom— But hold on! Put that whar Lazarus is?"

"I think so."

He paused a moment as if in deep thought. Then he said:

"No matter. Put it down there, that, too, fer of ever Lazarus was to come he'll vacate an hunt a new restin' place. 'Sides that, he's been too long anyhow."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Soft Answer.

"There!" said the angry man, handing a photograph, presumably of himself, under the photographer's nose, "Do you know what that man's face looks like?"

"If you mean what it makes you think of at the present moment," answered the photographer, surveying the picture of the angry man carefully, "I should say it makes you look as if you were about to throw a fit."—Indianapolis Press.

THE CANAL TREATY

To Be Passed in Its Original Form Is the Administration's Plan.

Plans are being made, by the administration, according to a Washington dispatch, to press with vigor the ratification by the senate of the Hay-Pauncefort treaty in its original form, as the first step toward constructing an isthmian canal.

This action is likely to precipitate one of the memorable contests of the coming session of congress. Opposition to the treaty is based on the fact that it provides that no fortification shall be erected an the canal. The Hepburn bill, which has passed the house, provides for the construction and protection by the secretary of war of a Nicaraguan canal. In addition Senator Davis has brought before the senate and commission on foreign relations that the treaty shall restrict measures which the United States may find necessary for the defense of the United States.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Bill Introduced in the House of Representatives Monday.

Representative Harwood, of Greene, introduced in the house Monday a bill providing for the holding of a constitutional convention in Alabama. With a few exceptions the bill is identical with that passed by the general assembly two years ago. The Harwood bill provides for 150 delegates to the convention, fifty of whom shall come from the state at large with at least one from each of the thirty senatorial districts. The bill further provides for the submission of the constitution as framed to a vote of the qualified electors of the state for the ratification or rejection. The date for holding the election and convention is not set out in the bill, but was left to the committee to which the bill was referred. It seems to be the opinion of the committee that the election to determine the holding of a convention sit for fifty working days during May and June. The ratification election will probably be ordered for August.

Mr. Dill, of Jefferson, introduced into the house a bill creating an associate judge for the Birmingham criminal court.

Mr. Leath, of Jefferson, presented two bills of especial importance, seeking to regulate the employment of children in mines and factories, and regulating the hours for labor.

UNDER ONE HEAD.

All Labor Organizations Will Probably be Amalgamated.

John Mulholland, president of the International Association of Allied Mechanics, has returned to Toledo, O., from extended conferences with the heads of various metal-working organizations of the country that were held in New York and Washington. He says that the convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held in Louisville in December will be the greatest of its kind ever held, and that a mammoth labor organization will be formed that will be able to cope with any legitimate situation, and will work through conservative lines. It will practically amalgamate all organizations in any way interested and which are morally affiliated at present.

Experiments made by German physicians have shown that about 25 per cent. of all school-children have some defect in their hearing.

KENTUCKY BANK IS BADLY LOOTED

Cashier Brown Is Found Short Something Over Two Hundred Tousand.

EXAMINER TAKES CHARGE

Lexington Citizens Indignant and Great Excitement Prevails.

A Cincinnati special says: United States Bank Examiner Tucker took possession of the German National bank, at Newport, Ky., Sunday and posted a notice that the bank would remain closed pending an examination.

Examiner Tucker also announced unofficially that Frank M. Brown, the individual bookkeeper and assistant cashier, was missing and that a partial investigation showed that Brown was short about $201,000. Brown had been with the bank eighteen years, was one of the most trusted men ever connected with the old bank, and it is stated by the experts that his operations extend back as far as ten years.

The capital stock of the bank is only $100,000. Brown's alleged shortage is double that amount, and more than the reserve and all the assets, including the real estate. While Alvord got away with $700,000 in New York, he did it in a large bank, but Brown did not have so much to go on, and seems to have gone the full limit for a small bank in a city of less than 30,000 inhabitants. The First National bank of Newport was wrecked two years ago by Cashier Youtsey, and now, with the German National closed, Newport has only one bank left. For two weeks there have been rumors that Brown was short and some depositors withdrew their accounts.

Three weeks ago the bank examiners made a good statement for the bank and the officers and directors allayed suspicion by referring to the report of this examination and to their last statement. Last Wednesday Brown left, and it was announced that he had gone hunting on a vacation. He did get a ticket for Odin, Ills., but it is learned that he did not go there, and it is generally believed that he is out of this country with plenty of money in his possession.

The alleged shortage caused a panic in Newport Sunday, so that the bank had to be taken in charge by the examiner.

Brown, it is alleged, was living a fast life with wine, women and gambling. His career was not cut short by any discovery at the bank till a jealous woman gave him away.

The only farewell letter that Brown is known to have left was to this woman, whose apartments are on Ninth street, in Cincinnati, and in this letter he admits that he had secured about all that he could get and that the time had come to say farewell.

Brown was a great poker player, with the limit, it is said, never too high and he had been a plunger on horse races for years. His bets on the horses, it is alleged, were frequently too high for the poolrooms in Covington, Ky., and he had brokers in both Chicago and New York.

The officess of the bank are all wealthy and responsible men, and they will be able to make the losses good.

There are about 1,500 depositiors in the institution, among them being nine building associations that have the savings of many people.

Brown wrote to the Cincinnati woman that he was bound for South America, but The Enquirer says that it has good authority that Brown sailed from New York Saturday and that his destination is China.

FOR GOVERNOR'S SIGNATURE.

Alabama General Assembly Passes Two "Succession" Bills.

The Alabama senate, Saturday, passed house bills Nos. 1 and 2, which provided respectively that the president of the senate should succeed in the event of the death of the governor-elect; and that the governor-elect might take the oath of office otherwise than in the presence of the general assembly. As soon as these bills passed the senate they were enrolled and signed by the presiding officers of the two houses, after which they were sent to the office of the governor to await his signature.

CONSOLIDATION SCHEME

Is Under Way at Baltimore By a Number of Lumber Companies.

A Baltimore dispatch says: A mammoth consolidation of lumber companies will probably be announced within a week or ten days. Fourteen companies at least are to be included in the combination if the plans do not miscarry and several others, making, perhaps, a total of twenty, are expected to be added.

It is understood that all the capital necessary to secure the consolidation will be forthcoming and that the Belmonts will finance the deal, the total value of the plants being about $25,000,000.

MORE FEVER CASES REPORTED

To Mississippi Health Board, But Jack Frost Allays Fears.

The Missippi state board of health has received official notice of two cases of yellow fever and one death at Brookhaven.

Owing to the fact that several heavy frosts have occurred throughout the state no apprehension is felt. The report that a case had appeared in Jackson is incorrect.

RESULTS DOUBTFUL.

Contrary Course of the Allies in China May Fail to Establish Peace.

The state department has not heard from Minister Conger for four days past. But his last report upon the progress of the negotiations now going on at Pekin between the ministers, taken in connection with the department's ample instructions relative to this subject, warrants the officials at Washington in confirming the Pekin view that the end of these consultations is in sight.

It cannot be concealed, however, that disapproval is entertained of the attitude of the German military commander in China, and though our government has not protested against the punitive expeditions, which it regards as ingeniously calculated to cause fresh outbreaks among the Chinese, it fears the results.

There is no hesitation in energetically denying the European implication that the United States government is moved in its Chinese course by sentimental and unbusiness-like considerations.

On the contrary, it is poiated out that while sentiment is on the side of our government on this matter, it is accompanied by the soundest business considerations, for the animating purpose of the state department now is to prevent the destruction of Chinese territorial integrity upon pretexts; to maintain the open door for which our government so long has contended; to secure indemnities for the past and guarantees for the future.

It is felt that these objects can be secured without breaking the implied truce entered into between the ministers and Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching.

Advices from the most influential Chinese sources agree in stating that American prestige has been greately advanced in China by the moderate and humane course adopted by the United States.

LORD HELP US!

"Fearful" Punishment Will Be Meted Out to Chinese Officials.

Minister Wu at Washington has received from Director General Sheng the following cablegram which he communicated to Secretary Hay Friday:

"An imperial decree of November 13th deprives Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang of their ranks and offices and orders them to be imprisoned for life; Prince Yih and Secondary Prince Ying to be imprisoned; Secondary Prince Lien to be deprived of his rank; Duke Ian and Ying Nien to be degraded in rank; Kang Pi being dead, no penalty can be imposed upon him; and Shao Shu Chian to be degraded, but retained in office, and Yu Hsien to be exiled to the farthest boundary."

MILES FOR BIG ARMY.

Commanding General Makes Recommendation In His Annual Report.

The feature of the annual report of Lieutenant General Miles, commanding the army, is a chapter dealing with the need for a general reorganization of the military service. In regard to this question he says:

"The need for an efficient and well organized land force for an indefinite period in the future is most obvious, and the organization of such a force cannot be wisely avoided. Such a service as is now demanded of the army cannot be performed by a temporary organization."

HIS LAST REUNION.

Major Van Holt Nash Dies Suddenly at Augusta, Georgia.

Major Joseph Van Holt Nash, one of Atlanta's most distinguished citizens, died suddenly at the home of his son-in-law, Cornelius Garrett, in Augusta, Ga., early Saturday morning.

Major Nash, who was one of the most prominent confederate veterans in the state, had gone to Augusta for the purpose of attending the Confederate reunion in that city. When he left Atlanta he was in the best of health and good spirits and was looking forward to meeting his old comrades with great pleasure.

Involuntary Bankruptcy.

Friday morning Shiff & Webster, a dry goods firm doing business at No. 11 North Pryor street, Atlanta, Ga., were placed in involuntary bankruptcy on motion of Dresser & Co., et al., of New York.

ELECTION IN HAWAII

Results In Victory of Royalists as Against Republicans.

Robert Wilcox, the independent Royalist candidate, has been elected Hawaiian delegate to congress by a small majority over Samuel Parker, Republican. Much depression has resulted among all whites, as Wilcox was strongly opposed by Republicans and Democrats alike. His campaign was an anti-white canvass, with promises on the part of some of his campaign workers that if he were elected Queen Lillioukalani should be restored to the throne. The result of the vote shows the native bitterness over annexation to be still alive.

CHINESE TROOPS MASSED.

Rumor Is Current That One Hundred Thousand Will Oppose Allies.

It is rumored that a rebellion has broken out in the province of Kan Su. Chang Chi Tung, the Wu Chang viceroy, is said to be raising 100,000 troops and to have proposed to the Nankin viceroy that they should combine forces to oppose the allies, making the Yang Tse their base for operations against Shen Si.

CHINA TROUBLE STILL UNSOLVED

Situation Is Dubious According to Mr. Conger.

FOREIGNERS ARE ALARMED

They Predict That Seas of Blood Will Flow Before Matters Are Placed On a Basis of Peace.

Advices from Pekin under date of November 17 stated that the preliminary note had not yet been presented. Its terms are not completed and there will probably be a further delay. The foreign envoys have reopened the discussion of the death penalty for the princes and other high officials. It is evident that the ministers are weakening as they have reduced their proposal from execution to the severest punishment provided by Chinese law, forgetting that princes lie beyond the reach of Chinese law.

Mr. Conger, the United States minister, had the following to say:

"What the result will be it is impossible to foretell. Events have have placed China in a very critical position. Whether she will be able to preserve her integrity and save her trade relations with the rest of the world will depend upon what the powers demand in the final settlement and upon her willingness to accept promptly the conditions proposed.

Sanitary conditions in Pekin are becoming serious. Since the foreign occupation many Chinese have died of smallpox and other infectious diseases. Fearing that their funerals would be interfered with, they have kept most of their coffins containing their dead in their houses and courtyards.

As the natives are forbidden to deposit refuse in the streets, there is now an enormous accumulation in their dwellings and yards, which threatens a serious epidemic. In view of the large number of troops in and near the capital, the consequences of such an outbreak would be frightful.

MORE TROUBLE IS PREDICTED.

An Associated Press correspondent at Shanghai says: From Pekin to Shanghai it is next to impossible to meet a European or American who has resided any length of time in China but who believes the real trouble has not really commenced. They bitterly reproach the powers for not being more severe in their measures, particularly for not absolutely destroying the Forbidden City at Pekin. Old residents at Tieu Tsin, Che Foo and Shanghai say it was a grave blunder that will in the near future cause the loss of thousands of lives and the destruction of much property.

It is a well authenticated fact that hardly a Chinaman outside the province of Chi Li believes that the allies have had any success at all. Papers are sold in Shanghai, giving graphic details of the alleged capture of Admiral Seymour, General Chaffee and others, as did many of the wonderful stories that emanated from Shanghai a few months ago describing the butchery of the ministers and their families, which were so freely published in all the European and American papers.

Not only are the details given at full length, but pictures are published showing the admiral and several generals with carques around their necks being tried before the native judges. Two Chinamen were beheaded recently in Shanghai for publishing "willful slanders and malicious falsehoods" in stating that Pekin had fallen into the hands of the allies and that the empress dowager and the emperor had fled. The most serious part of the whole affair is considered to be the fact that the Chinese judges themselves believed the men were really lying.

The white people in that part of China say that Chi Li is but a very small part of the country, only one province of eighteen, and but of medium size in population, and that if it took as many men as it did to subdue Chi Li, what will it take when the whole country rises as it is ripe to do.

LIABILITIES SIX FIGURES.

New York Broker Owes More Than a Million Dollars; Assets None.

A New York dispatch says: Francis D. Carley, a well known Wall street broker, filed late on Saturday, at Trenton, a petition in bankruptcy. The petition declares the liabilities to be more than a million and the assets nothing. He furnishes a long list of the principal creditors.

These claims against Mr. Carley, he says, are the result of a venture in the south several years ago in which he lost $1,500,000.

BRATTON BROTHERS FREE.

Slayers of Brown Awarded Verdict of "Not Guilty" By Jury.

The trial of Paul R. and John S. Bratton for the murder of Harry A. Brown was concluded in Yorkville Saturday and resulted in acquittal. One of the features was the absence of Mrs. Fannie A. Bratton, who was wanted as a material witness for the defense. She is John Brattou's young wife, on whose account Brown was killed. A warrant was issued for her arrest, but she was not found.

BURNING APPROVED.

Mother and Father of Little Louise Frost Talk of the Porter Lynching.

A special from Denver, Col., says: It is unlikely that an inquest will be held over the remains of Preston Porter, Jr., the self-confessed murderer of Louise Frost, who was burned at the stake by a mob at Lake station. In fact, the coroner can find no remains upon which to hold an inquest.

A few men remained late in the night at the spot out on the prairie, where the murder was committed and avenged, and renewed the fire again and again, until every vestige of the negro was consumed. The iron rail to which Porter was bound will be left standing.

About seven hundred people witnessed the lynching. No women were there, but many of them went to the scene before the fire was lighted and remained while the negro was led from carriage to carriage for inspection. Their vote was a unit for burning.

No measures have been considered with a view of prosecuting any members of the mob that burned Porter, and it is unlikely that any will be taken. Governor Thomas refuses to express an opinion in regard to the affair. District Attorney McAllister, of the judicial district in which Lincoln county is a part, said that prosecution of the leaders would be utterly futile, owing to public sentiment.

"Well, no other parents will suffer from that brute's crimes."

These were the words of Mrs. Frost when asked for an expression on the punishment of the negro who confessed that he was the murderer of her child. "Of course, I was not consulted as to the punishment to be meted out, and I did not know what fate awaited him."

The murdered child's father, Robert W. Frost, returned to Denver Saturday from the scence of the lynching.

"A great load has been lifted off of us," said he, "and as for me, I don't care who condems me for starting the blaze. No other father will have to do what I did on account of that nigger, and, as I said before, if the brute had been lynched for his first offense in Kansas my baby would be alive today and our hearts would not be broken."

KILLED BY A SON-IN-LAW.

Deplorable Tragedy In Which Colonel W. H. Mattox Loses His Life.

Elbert county Ga., was shocked Saturday afternoon by the news of the killing of Colonel W. H. Mattax, which occurred at Heardmont, twelve miles below Elberton, late in the day. He was killed by his son-in-law, J. B. Jones, Jr., who holds the position of justice of the peace at Heardmont.

It is generally understood there had been some previous trouble between them. Colonel Mattox had just come in on the Seaboard and met Jones near the depot. Jones had been to Elberton to get out a writ of trover for some cattle he claimed Colonel Mattox had driven home from his premises.

They met near the depot and soon afterwards several pistol shots were heard and a duel to the death was fought out by the two men, both being armed. After the first shots, Colonel Mattox was seen to fall, and he died in a few minutes, shot twice in the breast.

Mr. Jones received a wound in the forehead and was hit in two places, but he is not badly hurt.

The families of both parties are very prominent. Colonel Mattox represented the thirteenth senatorial district in the state senate several years ago and was a member of the constitutional convention in 1877. He was a brave officer in the confederate army, wherein he attained the rank of colonel. He was universally loved and respected. J. B. Jones, the other party to the tragedy, is a son-in-law of Colonel Mattox's and is a son of Hon. J. B. Jones, Jr. who was a former representative of Elbert county.

Boers Are Still Active.

Advices from Pretoria state that the Boers are active. It is alleged that Commandant Louis Botha has established a government at Reseadal, north Middleburz, and that with the £150,000 which he has available he is paying the fighting burghers a crown per dap.

UNCENSORED NEWS.

Increased Activity Keeps Americans and Filipinos On the Go.

The first uncensored news from the Philippines shows that last week witnessed considerable increase in rebel and American activity in the field. Many skirmishes occurred and several small engagements in north and southern Luzon. The termination of the rains permits a resumption of the operation on both sides.

Schreiber Eludes Detectives.

The authories of the Elizabethport, N. J., Banking Company have about given up hope of capturing William Schreiber, the young clerk who is alleged to have stolen $100,000 from the institution. They now admit that despite the fact that several detectives have been working on the case, absolutely no trace has been found of Schreiber since he decamped.

Four Die In Hotel Fire.

At Oswayo, Pa., Sunday four men were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the McGonigal house, a three-story framed building, the hotel barn and the opera house.

A BLACK BRUTE DIES AT STAKE

For Outrage and Murder Of a Little Girl.

FATHER APPLIED TORCH

Enraged Citizens of a Colorado Town Wreak Terrible Vengeance On Confessed Heinous Crime.

A special from [illegible] Chained to a railroad tie in the ground, on the [illegible] his fiendish crime was [illegible] Preston Porter, Jr. [illegible] he was familiarly [illegible] Friday evening paid a terrible [illegible] for his deed.

It was 6:25 o'clock when the [illegible] of the murdered girl [illegible] match to the fuel which had been [illegible] around the negro, and two minutes later a last convulsive shudder told that life was extinct. What a sight the doomed boy suffered while the flames shriveled up his flesh would only be guessed from the terrible contortions of his face and the cries that gave from time to time.

The executors, who numbered [illegible] 300 citizens of Lincoln county, [illegible] not the least semblance of the ordinary mob. Their every act was deliberate, and during all the preparations as well as throughout the suffering of the negro, hardly an unnecessary word was spoken. Grimly they stood in a circle about the fire until the body was entirely consumed, and then quietly they took their way back to the town, whence they departed for their homes shortly afterwards.

Preston Porter did not seem to realize the awful punishment that was destined to undergo. As he had exhibited indifference to the enormity of his crime, so he seemed to lack the understanding of its terrible consequences. For more than an hour while preparations for his execution were in progress, he stood mutely and sullen among the avengers.

When everything was ready he walked to the stake with a firm step, and, as he reached the circle of blazing boards, to kneel in prayer. He was allowed to take his time. He knelt and placed his back to the iron stake and half a dozen men wound the rope about his body and limbs.

VICTIM'S FATHER APPLIES MATCH.

Kerosene oil was applied to the wood, and, after a brief pause, Edward W. Frost, the father of the murdered Louise Frost, whose cruelly mutilated body was found one week ago on the very spot, applied a match. There was a moment a little flickering flame [illegible] Then the oil blazed up, sparks flew into the air and the wood began to crackle. Almost instantly the negro's trousers caught fire.

At first he did not utter a sound. The flames crept slowly upward [illegible] clothing, the sparks flew up in a cloud of pale smoke. Porter turned his head, and a frightful expression came over his face. With a sudden convulsive tugging he stretched his head [illegible] from the rapidly increasing flames and uttered a cry of agony. "Oh, my God, let me go, men, let me go!"

The cries of the wretch were doubled, and he begged repeatedly to be shot. Some wanted to throw him over into the fire; others tried to pour oil on him. Boards were carried to [illegible] a large pile made of the prostrate [illegible] They soon were ignited, and the terrible heat and lack of air quickly overcame the victim unconscious, [illegible] death a few moments later.

Throughout the entire affair little was said. As they had calmly prepared for the avenging, so the people of the eastern part of the state carried out their plan coolly and deliberately. Not a weapon was drawn, there was no angry discussion. After the fire had burned low they told each other good night and then went home. They did not stop to discuss the affair.

PORTER CONFESSED CRIME.

While in jail at Denver the negro confessed every detail of the horrible crime. The little girl was the daughter of a ranchman living four miles from Limon and attended school in town, driving back and forth daily. Wednesday last, while on her way home, she was waylaid, assaulted, murdered, her body showing more than fourteen knife wounds.

Notices have been posted by the Negroes of bad character to leave Lincoln and Elbert counties, the [illegible] claring that if they do not go they will be escorted across the border. [illegible] of the Union Pacific and the Island railroads have also been petitioned to remove from these counties all the imported colored section men. This action was taken in pursuance of resolutions adopted at a mass meeting of citizens.

SAMFORD'S SON ISSUES STATEMENT

Death of Dr. R. A. Moseley Announced. Young Man Kills His Father. Investigating Clay Deposits. Improving Raccoon Dam.

In response to the numerous telegrams and letters that have been received Captain T. D. Samford, law partner and son of Governor-elect William J. Samford, Friday night sent out the following statement to the press:

"We are aware of and deeply grateful for the tender solicitude of the people of Alabama and elsewhere at the illness of my father. He is quite sick and is receiving the closest care and attention possible. His symptoms are somewhat better than they were ten days ago, and the physicians think unless some additional complications arise he will be restored to his normal health, though his attack is very serious and any improvement must necessarily be gradual. In view of the numerous enquiries and of the conflicting reports I feel constrained to make this statement."

(Signed) T. D. SAMFORD.

Dr. R. A. Moseley Dead.

The state department at Washington has been informed that Dr. R. A. Moseley, consul general of the United States at Singapore, died a few days ago at Yokohama, Japan. He was granted leave of absence by the department some weeks ago upon representation that his health demanded a change of climate. Dr. Moseley was appointed to his post on January 27, 1899, from Alabama.

Dr. Moseley was about 50 years old and was born near Montgomery; much of his life was spent in Talladega county. For thirty years he had been conspicuous as a republican leader, and at various times conducted newspapers, having sold his Birmingham newspaper, the Times, to go to Singapore. From 1889 to 1893 he was collector of internal revenue in Alabama under President Harrison, and discharged his duties faithfully. He was for a long time chairman of the state republican executive committee.

[illegible] bar has for many years been a menace to navigation, and a number of steamers, and barges have come up at this place. The river and harbors committee on their visit last year recommended that a lock and canal be put in at this point, and it is only a question of time till the canal and locks will be extended to this place.

Investigating Valuable Clay Banks.

The clays along the line of the Mobile and Ohio railroad are beginning to attract the attention of parties in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. There is already a party of prospectors representing potteries in the latter state who are examining the clay banks of Mile Hill. They are prospecting for fine clays. Two gentlemen from Trenton, N. J., arrived Friday and are now examining the clay resources near Ethelville. These parties are interested in the manufacture of all kinds of art pottery.

Killed His Father.

Miles from Coker's beat, in Tuscaloosa county, bring information of the killing of Tom Booth, a respected young farmer, by his 16-year-old son, with a gun a few days ago. The son had an interest in a beef, which his father had sold, and words arose between them. Death was instantaneous. The boy was sent off by the coroner to notify some neighbors and has not returned when the parties were there.

Anniston Yarn Mills.

WRECK ON THE SOUTHERN.

Three Men Killed and Six Others Seriously Injured.

A disastrous wreck occurred on the Selma division of the Southern railway Saturday night at 10 o'clock, in which three men were killed and several others seriously wounded.

Two freight trains, No. 639 eastbound and No. 80 westbound collided at full speed. The accident occurred between Blocton and Hargrove.

Engineer Ped Oldham on the westbound train and a negro brakeman were instantly killed. Engineer Bullock on the eastbound train was seriously injured, his skull being fractured. He will probably die. Ed McKey, fireman, had one leg mashed off, and was injured internally, and died shortly afterward.

Robert Gunlock, fireman on No. 80, saw the headlight from engine No. 639 and remarked to Mr. Oldham, his engineer, "Ped, I see a headlight." He then jumped off the engine, and in the fall which followed had his left arm broken.

Charlie Tillery, had a leg broken; a negro brakeman had his skull fractured. The following is a list of passengers on No. 80 who were injured: Mr. Bearclen, of Campbelltown, Blocton, bruised and gashed in head; Mrs. Bob Lawley and little daughter, bruised and several ribs broken; Bob Gardner, head bruised; two negro men bruised.

Governor Johnston Ready to Vacate.

Governor Johnston, in an interview relative to the illness of Governor-elect Samford and the complications that might arise should the latter die before December 1, said:

"I have neither consulted authority nor asked for an opinion from legal counsel on the subject. The constitution, as has been stated, says that the governor shall serve for two years, and until his successor is elected and qualifies. I am ready to go out at the prescribed time. I am not only ready, but willing to leave the office at the legally stated time. As I have stated, I have sought advice from no legal authority on the subject, nor have I considered what I will do next month when the time comes for me to withdraw from the office. I dislike all this discussion of the matter. I am not able to say what will be done in the dilemma."

Sheriffs' Association Formed.

The Sheriffs' Association of Alabama was formed in Montgomery Saturday at a meeting of about twenty sheriffs of the state.

The following officers were elected: President, W. R. Waller, Montgomery; vice-president, John F. Powers, Mobile; treasurer, Hugh M. Wilson, Lee; secretary, T. J. Williams, Elmore; assistant secretary, A. J. Taylor.

The meeting was held behind closed doors, but it is understood that legislation regarding the sheriffs of the various counties was under discussion.

Shot at Car and Hit Man.

At Adger Tom McKnight, a well-known citizen, was shot and it is feared was fatally hurt. The shooting was accidental and was done by a negro named Jack Phillips. A cow got into Phillips' garden and in chasing the animal out he fired at it with a shotgun. The charge missed the cow and struck Mr. McKnight, who was some distance away, in the abdomen, inflicting a very dangerous wound.

Caddell Gets the Death Penalty.

The trial of Festus Caddell, at Centerville, charged with the murder of his wife, Mamie Caddell, at Blocton, May 29, ended Saturday with a verdict of murder in the first degree and a sentence to hang December 28. The trial was had before Hon. John Moore, judge of the fourth judicial circuit.

Coosa River Improvements.

Congressman Theodore E. Burton, of Ohio, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee of the house, is at Gadsden this week, where he will go over the Coosa river with a party of local business men. This river is the one which it is desired to open in Alabama, in order to give a deep water outlet to the sea from the Alabama coal fields.

Governor Johnston has commuted the death sentence of Nathan Ragland, convicted, of Talladega, to imprisonment for twenty years, with allowance for good conduct.

CYCLONES IN TENNESSEE

LaGrange and Columbia Report Great Loss of Life and Property.

NINETEEN LIVES LOST IN WEST TENNESSEE

Northern Portions of Mississippi Suffered Great Damage—Thirteen Persons Reported Killed in That State.

A terrific cyclone, moving in a westerly and northwesterly direction, struck Columbia, Tenn., at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night, and left havoc in its path. The northern and western sections of the city, which are populated principally by negroes, were almost entirely swept away. Fifteen persons are known to have been killed, and it is feared that this number will be largely increased by later reports.

The dead are: Misses Evelyn Farrell, Captain A. F. Aydelotte, wife and one daughter, and another son and daughter missing; Miss Kate Forsythe, James Cherry, and six negroes, names unknown.

The cyclone lasted for about five minutes and its path extended about 1,000 feet wide, which is clearly marked by the devastation. Many houses, including a large number of negro cabins, were blown down and many others unroofed and otherwise damaged.

West Tennessee.

A Memphis special says: A tornado, bounding through a narrow stretch of territory extending from a point three miles north of Lula, Miss., to La Grange, Tenn., caused a heavy loss of life and property Tuesday afternoon. From the meagre details obtainable, covering only three points, it appears that nineteen lives were lost, and the destruction of property was also heavy. It is believed in the cyclone's sweep between the towns heard from, numerous farm houses and interior communities of more or less considerable population were struck.

The tornado struck the town of LaGrange, Fayette county, Tenn., and as a result not a church in the town is left standing except the Episcopal. The streets are littered with the debris of destroyed buildings, merchandise, telegraph and telephone wires and poles. Several persons are dead and wounded.

The dead so far reported are: Walter L. Moody; wife of Brown May, colored; negro woman, unknown.

The injured—Robert G. Tucker, Edward Smith, Samuel Wadley, Wm. McName, Jessie Stafford.

The business houses totally destroyed are: W. P. Lipscomb & Co., general merchandise; J. C. McNeil & Co., general merchandise; McName & Co., general merchandise; F. M. McName, general merchandise; C. I. Panky's livery stable; J. W. Gibbins, sale stable; Pankey & Gaither, Plow Manufacturing Company; Samuel Wadley's wagon shop, the Southern Railway Company's large brick depot, the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches. The residence portion of the town also suffered heavy loss.

At Lavergne.

The Nashville and Chattanooga depot and eighteen other houses were demolished by a tornado Tuesday night at Lavergne, Tenn. More than a mile of telephone and telegraph wires were destroyed and details are meager, but it is known that a man named Robertson and his child were instantly killed and a section boss injured.

In Mississippi.

A tornado visited north Mississippi Tuesday afternoon, causing loss of life and much property damage. Reports from Lula, Tunica county, state that three negroes were killed, their bodies having been carried a distance of three miles by the wind.

Many houses were razed to the ground and the damage to the crops cannot now be estimated.

Meagre reports from towns along the line of the Illinois Central railroad in north Mississippi state that the tornado wrought much havoc. Thirteen persons are reported killed between Love Station and Coldwater.

After Aguinaldo.

General MacAbolos, the former Filipino chief, is prepared to start in pursuit of Aguinaldo with 100 picked natives, supported by American troops. Other ex-rebel Filipinos will be used in campaigning the country. Their officers have not been formally made yet, but they are ready if the authorities will accept their services. Aguinaldo, it is said, is in northern Luzon.

SUCCESSION BILLS PASSED.

Bearing Upon the Illness of Governor-Elect Samford.

The fifth day's session of the general assembly of Alabama was marked by the passage of two bills bearing upon the illness of Governor-elect Samford and their transmission to Governor Johnston for his approval.

The bills originated in the house of representatives and were introduced by Messrs. Bulger, of Tallapoosa, and Tunstall, of Hale. One provides that any sworn officer of the state shall be capable of administering the oath of office to a governor-elect. The other bill fixes the successor to a governor-elect in the event of his death.

These bills were rushed through the house. They were passed by the senate Saturday after a lively debate, precipitated by Senator Harrison raising a question as to their constitutionality.

The session of the house of representatives was devoted largely to routine business and the introduction of bills, a majority of which were of a local nature.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS.

Several Measures of Importance Introduced in the House.

Tuesday's session of the general assembly of Alabama was without special interest. There were several general bills of importance introduced into the lower house. Mr. O'Brien, of Jefferson, presented a bill to have the state treasurer refund all license money collected illegally under the act of the last legislature, subsequently declared unconstitutional. Mr. Doster, of Autauga, introduced a bill to abolish the district agricultural schools of the state, and Mr. Knight, of Hale, came to the front with a bill to prohibit the moving of freight and excursion trains on Sunday.

Among the bills passed was the O'Brien bill, authorizing the mayor and board of aldermen of Birmingham to issue bonds to the amount of $250,000 to build a new city hall for Birmingham, to improve the city jail and construct school buildings. The only bill of state importance passed was the Pettus bill, making the 3d day of June of each year a legal holiday.

Ex-Justice Brickell Dead.

Judge Robert Coman Brickell, ex-chief justice of the Alabama supreme court, author of Brickell's Digest, and one of the foremost lawyers of his day, died Tuesday at Huntsville. His death was the result of a long illness.

Judge Brickell was born in Huntsville in 1824 and was 76 years of age. He was reared in Limestone county. In 1874 he was nominated by the democrats and elected chief justice of the supreme court. After serving ten years he resigned and resumed his practice in Huntsville. On the death of Judge George W. Stone, in 1894, Gov. Thomas G. Jones appointed Judge Brickell chief justice, which office he held until 1898.

American Girl Becomes a Duchess.

It is announced in a cablegram from London that the young Duke of Manchester and Miss Helene Zimmerman, daughter of Eugene Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, were married last Wednesday afternoon by the Rev. Canon Baker, in the parish church of Marleybone, London, in which parish the duke lives. Owing to the opposition to the marriage by the relatives of both bride and groom, the wedding was extremely quiet.

Walker Withdraws.

B. W. Walker, who has been a candidate for the vacant collectorship of the port of Mobile, has withdrawn in favor of R. L. Houston, who is the chief clerk in the office and was the late postmaster at Birmingham.

At Guin, Ala., Tuesday, S. E. Alexander shot and killed John Otts, a blacksmith.

It is said that the Japanese newspaper reporter has reduced the interviewing branch of his profession to a science. He wastes no time over pleasant introductory remarks when assigned to interview a foreigner arriving in Japan, but proceeds at once to catechise the victim, beginning with questions as to the latter's age, place of birth, etc., and gradually wringing from him the whole story of his life. The final question, according to a recently returned traveler, is generally something like this: "If anything of interest has ever befallen you upon your travels at home or abroad, please give me full information now."

POPULAR SCIENCE.

There are mountains all over Porto Rico ranging in height from 1000 to upward of 2000 feet. They rise in points for the most part, having no flat surface at their tops. They are not covered with forests, and are often cultivated to their very tops.

A German physicist, G. Tammann, has recently discovered some hitherto unnoted facts concerning ice and the freezing point of water. He finds that not only does the freezing point vary with the pressure, but that three different kinds of ice can be produced, each possessing its own crystalline structure. Thus water may now be said to have five known forms, namely, water vapor, water as a liquid, ordinary ice, called by Tammann ice I., ice in its second form, or ice II., and ice in its third form, denominated as ice III.

Dr. Thorvald Thoroddsen in recent papers gives a curious picture of life and scenes in Iceland. Settlements are limited to the lowlands, yet even these are not safe places of abode, for they are exposed to lava floods, river floods and showers of volcanic ashes. When the glaciers of the dome-shaped mountains are suddenly melted by volcanic heat, overwhelming torrents, bearing immense masses of ice and fragments of rock, sweep down the river-beds. Yet with all their disadvantages, the inhabitants of the narrow lowlands of Iceland enjoy universal education, and among them more books and newspapers are published per head of the population than in any other country.

Lord Rayleigh, in discussing our ability to tell the direction from which sound proceeds, calls attention to an interesting difference between the eyes and the ears with regard to the size of the waves that strike them. The average wave-length of light is about one ten-thousandth of the diameter of the pupil of the eye. On the other hand, "the waves of sound issuing from a man's mouth," says Lord Rayleigh, "are about eight feet long, whereas the diameter of the passage of the ear is quite small, and could not well have been made a large multiple of eight feet." One consequence of the minuteness of light-waves in comparison with the size of the eyes is that the lenses of the eyes are able to concentrate rays of light upon the retina with great efficiency.

Some curious submarine features of the coast of Western Europe formed the subject of a late paper to the Royal Geographical Society by Professor Edward Hull. The land along much of this coast was at one time several thousand feet higher than today, joining France and England together, and extending far out into what is now the sea. On the subsidence of the land great rivers sunk into the ocean. In the centre of the English Channel is one of these old river gorges, which can still be traced from the Straits of Dover westward for seventy miles, and which reaches a depth of 200 to 250 feet below the bed of the Channel. It is known from its discoverer, as "Hurd's Deep." The Adour, in France, once flowed through a ravine that can now be followed for sixty or seventy miles on the sea's bed, and an ancient island in this river is now fifty miles from land and 9000 feet beneath the water's surface. In these river courses must have been magnificent cataracts, the descent being in some cases as much as 10,000 feet in a mile.

Charm of Exploration.

The Duke of the Abruzzi has got nearer the north pole than any previous explorer, and had he been an ordinary man, and not a scion of royalty, he would now be able, if he chose, to make a comfortable little fortune by writing a book and lecturing in England and America. The north pole presents to explorers the same attraction that the summit of Everest presents to mountaineers. No one has reached either, and, until the difficulties are conquered, men will spend large sums of money in making the attempts. The astonishment of the Thibetans, through whose country the easiest side of Everest is reached, that any man should be anxious to try to get to a place where he would be very uncomfortable has always been great. The only solution of the problem was that British mountaineers are mad, and, as all madmen are considered holy men in the East, the Alpine climbers who have at one time or another found their way over the Sikkim passes have been protected by a halo of sanctity in no way claimed by them. The class of explorers whom the ungentile Thibetan turns out of his country with more asperity than any other is the naturalist. Before Sikkim was annexed a man of science had been through the country collecting specimens of the animal and vegetable life of the little kingdom, and the Thibetans are now firmly convinced that any man who collects moths is really trying to grab territory. It is safer to cross into Thibet with a drawn sword in one's hand than with a butterfly net.—London Sketch.

A Small Boy's Pluck.

In a Kew Bridge tram, the other day, says the London Mail, a small boy was observed to be suddenly agitated, but regained his self-control after a few moments. Soon after the conductor appeared and asked for fares. When he stood before the small boy there was a slight pause, and, says the West London Observer, the passengers were surprised to hear the following:

"Pleathe charge it to my papa; I've thwallowed the money."

"Oh, yes, Louise; he yawns."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Generous Offer.

Second Artist—"Yes; he said he'd give me a new canvas for the one I had spoiled."—Chicago Record.

Usually the Case.

Highly Imprudent on His Salary.

Young Lady (in music shop)—"Have you 'A Heart That Beats With Love?'"

Assistant (blushingly)—"No, miss; I should consider it highly imprudent on a salary of ten dollars a week."—Tit-Bits.

Ungrateful.

Mistress—"So your sweetheart has deserted you? I am very sorry to hear it."

Brutal Bard.

"Ah! Mr. Frankley, your sonnets are so beautiful!" sighed Miss Gushley. "You are surely 'the' great poet."

"I see yer movin out, boss," remarked a very disreputable looking Weary Willie, who had stopped to watch the operation. "Is dey anything you don't need 'at I might take?"

In These Days of War.

"A sail!" shouted the lookout.

The admiral knit his brows.

"I hope it's the enemy!" he muttered. "I have enough powder to fight a battle, but not enough to fire a salute!"

With this he folded his arms and gloomily contemplated the horizon.—Detroit Journal.

Pity the Little Lion.

A mother was showing her dear little Joe a picture of the martyrs thrown to the lions, and was talking very solemnly to him, trying to make him feel what a terrible thing it was.

"Ma," he said, suddenly, "oh, ma, just look at that little lion right behind there. He wont get any."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Strange Hybrid.

"That girl is an enigma!"

"No wonder! Her mother was such a mere butterfly!"

"Indeed!"

"And her father was a regular lobster!"

Even the smart set, pray observe, are not altogether exempt from the subtle laws of heredity.—Detroit Journal.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

All persons due the Town of Clanton for Taxes for 1900 will please come forward and settle the same. A C. SMITH, Clerk.

CIRCUIT court next Monday.

SOME correspondence is unavoidably held over until next week.

THE report on Governor Samford's condition this morning is not quite so satisfactory, but on the whole he has improved during the last week.

A BILL has been introduced in legislature providing for a constitutional convention. It is about the same measure as that of two years ago, and in all probability it will pass.

THE result of the official count of the recent election shows that the highest Democratic elector in this state received 40,699 more votes than the highest Republican elector.

A CYCLONE swept over Northern Mississippi and central Tennessee Tuesday night with great severeity. The loss of life, so far as known, is sixty-four persons, while at least sixty have received injuries Telegraphic communication is interrupted and it is feared that when full details are known the list of the dead will be lengthened.

IN a column and a half editorial the Huntsville Tribune, Republican, places its self fairly and squarely in favor of the constitutional disfranchisement of colored voters. It argues that negro suffrage is the only bar to honest elections, and that with that bar removed unfair election methods would end; the Tribune looks at the matter in the right way, wherein it differs from most Republicans.

Runaway at Clanton.

While out riding last Sunday afternoon, the horse driven by Mr. John C. Dennis ran away. Mr. Dennis was thrown out of the buggy and had a rib broken, besides being severely bruised and shaken. He is Progressing favorably. Mr. Will Johnson, who tried to stop the runaway was also badly bruised.

Thorsby.

Several families have lately arrived from the North. Some have come to make the "Sunny South" their future home; others will spend winter here.

Miss Ida Horn, of Montevallo, is staying at Mr. Foss'. Miss Horn is teaching in the Cross Road School south of Thorsby.

The Thorsby school will give an entertainment next Friday evening—Thanksgiving Day. Prof. Rasco and others will speak. The band will play and there will also be piano and cornet solos. After the program the ladies will serve refreshments: admission fee will be ten or fifteen cents.

Mr. Nels Thorson, of Boone, Ia. arrived here last Wednesday and will spend the winter with his children and other relatives here. x.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dessolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled.' There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Clanton drug co., and p. l. paramus, Verbena.

IN THE HOLY LAND.

We next went to the wailing place of the Jews, just outside of the old temple wall, now the wall of the arena occupied by mosque of Omar as previously mentioned, Jews are not allowed in the old temple areas at all. In truth they would not go in if allowed for fear they might unwittingly go into the place of the Holy of Holies. In this part of the old temple wall are some of the original stone used by Solomon, and here they sit and rock to and fro, and bewail their wretched fate, writing on dirty pieces of paper, their wants and sticking them in the crevaces of the wall.

Some of them will beg you for money and some will not look up at all. They all wear a curl of hair down in front of each ear. Dr. King gave one of them unwittingly a bad coin, which was soon returned to him. This raised the Doctor's ire and he gave no substitute. This is indeed the irony of fate God gave to Isaac and Jacob, the sons of promise this land in its pristine glory, sent Ishmael and Esau into the desert country. The stiff necked and perverse Jew sinned time and time again against his Lord, and to-day the decendents of the unblest Ishmael and Esau occupy this land in utter desolation speaking his own tongue as old as the Bible while the sons of the more favored Isaac and Jacob are scattered over the earth, and their tongues dead to the world and themselves long ago, and they speak even one to the other, in the tongue of their despised brother; while they beg bread on the streets of their once proud capital.

We next see the pool of Hezekiah, still used as a water reservoir by the city.

Next day we take carriage; we see Bethlehem and the birthplace there of the Saviour in the stable, now a church. See tomb of Rachel on the way. Also the famous pools of Solomon, and the stone acquaducts that carry the water miles away to Jerusalem. They are still used. See the spot that Gen. Gordon locates as calvary as against the place that the Catholics say is it in the church of the Holy Sepulchre. We take a donkey ride through the city in the evening and out to the quarries of Solomon that extend a long way from outside of the city walls clear under the city, penetrating as far as the old temple site. See the other place where St. Stephen was stoned. Great excavations were made here, and a lot of ancient tombs were found full of bones. You can find most "any old thing" here if you will dig for it except water. Our Syrian guide aptly remarked on the spot "the east gave you first your literature and science and faith, and it has to borrow and beg is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: over-work and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Her Knowledge of Chinese.

A young woman at a watering place one summer made a reputation as a profound linguist in a rather odd manner. She called one day at a Chinese laundry where she had left a shirt waist, but it could not be found, as there was no entry in the book of hieroglyphs corresponding to her pink slip. After a half hour's search the Chinaman found the entry. A mistake had been made, so the entry was crossed out and a new set of hieroglyphs in tiny characters placed below. She was told that the waist would be laundered immediately, and she could get it the next day.

The next day the young woman called for it, accompanied by three other young women. At the seashore the excitement of a visit to the Chinese laundry is not to be despised. The Chinaman to whom the pink slip was presented was not the laundryman of the day before, and he experienced the same difficulty in finding the identifying character, finally saying, "Not in book."

The girl answered calmly, "I can find it," and the Chinaman allowed her to take the book. Turning the leaves until she came to one that had an entry crossed out with another in tiny characters under it, she handed it to the Chinaman. "There it is," and, to his surprise, he found it.

"You only lady I know spik Chinese," he said. And the other girls looked upon her with admiration.—

Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are filling graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Della M. Strayer, Tuffy, Kans. "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything. In fact was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

Growth of Golf.

Six years ago there were only five clubs in the United States Golf Association. Now there are twenty-five associate and 225 allied clubs on the roll. There are now in existence about twenty state or other branch leagues subordinate to the United States Golf Association, and that in many instances a golf club is content to remain only a member of its local organization is shown by the record in Newman's Official Golf Guide for 1900, which gives a list of nearly 900 regularly organized clubs. New York heads the list, with 153. The same authority estimates that there are at least 200,000 golfers in the United States.

Judges Need Not Be Lawyers.

In Colorado it is not necessary that judges of county courts shall be lawyers. The result has been that decisions of such tribunals, when appealed, are reversed in almost half the cases. It is found that in nearly all cases county courts get at the equity all right, but err as to technicalities, and it is suspected that more or less unscrupulous lawyers lay traps to bring about just such results.

JACKSON'S PERIL.

Almost Forgotten Attempt on the President's Life.

On March 30, 1865, Gen. Jackson was attending the funeral of Warren R. Davis, a member of congress from South Carolina, at the capitol, and while walking in procession to take a carriage on the east front of the capitol he was approached by a man named Richard Lawrence, who presented a pistol within a few feet of him. The cap exploded, but did not ignite the charge. Lawrence threw the pistol away and drew another, which also missed fire. Gen. Jackson was on the arm of Mr. Woodbury, secretary of the treasury, but pursued the assassin with raised cane. Lieut. Gedney of the navy knocked Lawrence down, and the friends of the president tried to restrain him, but he said: "Let me go, gentlemen; I am not afraid. They can't kill me. I can protect myself." Lawrence was arrested and arraigned before Judge Cranch and committed. At the trial he behaved much as Guiteau did, interrupting the proceedings and talking all the time, until the judge ordered him to be removed from the court room. A commission appointed to examine into his condition reported him of unsound mind. He was committed to an insane asylum, where he lived for many years. There was an attempt made to involve some political adversaries of Gen. Jackson in this attempt on his life, but the examination and trial revealed nothing but that it was the act of a madman. Gen. Jackson's escape from death was providential. The pistols were loaded very heavily, and after the arrest of Lawrence were fired, the caps exploding and igniting the powder readily in the pistol and sending the balls through several inches of plank. It was stated that Gen. Jackson said at the time that he knew where the attempt originated.

Chinese Learning.

There is much to be learned after the world captures China. Many scientists believe that the nucleus of great events is imbedded amid the mysteries of that great region of country, which may not be so benighted as is generally supposed. The preservation of grapes, to make use of one illustration of Chinese industry, is one of the many things that is only known in that country. Millions have been spent in civilized countries in futile attempts to preserve this fruit. The Chinese have known the secret for many centuries and millions more have been vainly used in the effort to drag from them the recipe.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the functions of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

MRS. MARY FRANCES LYTLE, of 2 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura, blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

MRS. WILLIAM BAETELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

GET FREE ADVICE FROM DR. GREENE

Real beauty is rare. It belongs to perfect health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently. Get advice from Dr. Greene, the great specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Summary of the Doings of Alabama's Law Makers at Montgomery.

There was a flood of bills introduced into the lower house of the general assembly Wednesday. Fifty-seven bills was the day's record. Outside of the introduction of bills there was nothing of special importance brought up before the sessions.

A number of very important bills were presented in the house. The first in importance was presented by Mr. Oliver, of Chambers, providing for the calling of a constitutional convention in Alabama. This bill provides for the submission of the question to a vote of the electors of the state as to whether a convention shall be held.

Another bill of importance was by Mr. Gunnels, of Calhoun, seeking to grade the public schools of the state. Mr. Bulger, of Tallapoosa, also presented a bill to provide for a uniform system of text hooks for the free schools.

A bill was introduced seeking to prohibit the sale of cigarettes, cigarette paper or cigarettes in the state.

An important bill was presented by Mr. O'Brien of Jefferson, providing for a survey of the several counties in the state to ascertain more perfect county boundaries.

Mr. Pettus, of Limestone, presented a bill seeking to make June 3 of each year, Jefferson Davis' birthday, a legal holiday.

In the senate a bill was introduced to regulate primary elections in the state and another to appropriate $25,000 to aid the Alabama Insane hospital.

Thursday's session of the legislature was without special interest except the passage by the house of bills Nos. 1 and 2, relating to the governorship and the administration of the oath of office to the chief executive, which were introduced the first day of the session.

The house was in session but an hour. The passage of two and the introduction of sixty-seven bills marked the day's work.

On motion of Mr. Tunstall, of Hale, the regular order was suspended and the passage of bills taken up. Mr. Tunstall said that he made the motion because of the very urgent demand for the passage of house bills 1 and 2. The Bulger bill, amending section 1953 of the code, so that any officer eligible to administer an oath of office shall be eligible to administer an oath to the governor, was called up, read a third time and passed without debate. The vote was 88 ayes and 1 nay.

The Tunstall bill, prescribing who shall assume the duties of the office of governor in case of the death of the governor-elect, or of his failure to qualify, was read a third time and passed without debate by a vote of 83 to 0.

At night Hon. John T. Morgan was nominated by the democratic caucus for his fifth term in the senate of the United States. He received all of the votes cast in the caucus, 115.

The feature of the proceedings in the house Friday was a bill which was introduced by Mr. Lacy, of Jefferson county, who resides at Bessemer, a town of some 6,000 inhabitants, which is situated twelve miles from Birmingham, providing for the creation of a new county to be known as Bessemer county and to be created by carving slices out of the counties of Bibb, Shelby, Walker, Tuskaloosa and Jefferson. This bill produced the first lively discussion of the session. It was referred for consideration to a special committee to be composed of the representatives from the counties interested.

Mr. Graves, of Montgomery, introduced a bill for the election of the members of the board of revenue of Montgomery county by the people. At present they are appointed by the governor.

Mr. Whitson, of Talladega, offered a joint resolution petitioning the secretary of state to consent to no arrangement that would cause the Chinese ports to close their markets to cotton goods.

Speaker Pettus announced the standing committees for the session.

In the senate, Mr. Blackman introduced a bill to exempt from state, county and municipal taxation the sale and manufacture of wines and rums made in Alabama from grapes grown in this state. This bill is of special interest in the counties in the state having German settlements.

Senator Thompson introduced a bill providing that the state loan the Montevallo school $100,000, $50,000 of the amount to be repaid when the school sold the lands which was recently donated to it by the general government.

Mr. Windham introduced a bill which is of great interest to farmers. It provides that where a laborer has made one contract and makes another without giving notice of the first, he shall be punished by a heavy fine.

The senate, before adjournment, announced its standing committees.

ALABAMA NEWS ITEMS

Physicians Give Out Statement of Colonel Samford's Condition.

The rumor and alleged statement of one of the consulting physicians attending upon Governor-elect William J. Samford that the distinguished patient is suffering with paresis, brought forth an emphatic denial that such was the case, and the following authorized and authentic statement from the consulting physicians:

"Of the number of prominent physicians who have seen Colonel Samford in consultation, not one has offered paresis as a cause of his trouble. The opinion of all is that his trouble is primarily heart trouble, threatened at present with uremic poisoning, due to the defective action of the kidneys. This symptom has been in great measure relieved. The mild delirium from which he suffers is merely an incident of the disease, and will, without doubt, pass away upon his recovery."

Colonel Samford is in a critical condition and is liable to die at any moment.

Unless an unexpected change in his condition occurs, he will not be able to be inaugurated as governor of Alabama on December 1.

Inspecting Coosa River.

Members of the Congressional rivers and harbors committee Monday began an inspection of the Coosa river for the purpose of determining the advisability of building twenty-seven more locks on that stream between Rome and the gulf, giving an open passage and greatly increasing the horse-power for manufacturing purpose. The party is composed of Representatives Bishop, of Michigan; Alexander, of New York; Laurence, of Massachusetts; Lester, of Georgia, and Bankhead, of Alabama. President Burton and the other members of the committee will meet the party at Gadsden.

Marshal of Gurley Shot.

John Childress, city marshal of Gurley, was shot in the back and fatally wounded Monday by Dave Wilburn. Wilburn was arrested Saturday for being drunk by the marshal, who was compelled to club him. Monday Childress was standing with a crowd of friends talking when he was approached from behind Wilburn, who opened fire with two pistols. Childress fell with two bullets in the head. His body was riddled before friends could interfere. Wilburn fled, but was pursued by a posse and was shot down. He was slightly wounded.

Tragedy at Uniontown.

K. D. Chandler, a traveling representative for the McDonald March Company, of Mobile, was killed at Uniontown Monday by T. L. Estes, a blacksmith, who gave himself up. Estes, who had just returned home, was attacked by Chandler with a bludgeon. He grappled with his assailant and managed to get out his knife, with which he cut Chandler's throat, causing instant death.

Asleep on the Track.

Two unknown white men were run over and killed at Alabama City Monday by the Louisville & Nashville passenger train. The men were said to be drunk and asleep on the track and were seated just around a curve, and it was impossible for the engineer to see them until it was too late. They were literally cut to pieces.

Bale of Cotton Fell on Him.

Everett Houston, a well known citizen of Greene county, lies in a dangerous condition at his home, the result of an accident at Clinton a few days ago. He was standing near the platform at the gin house of Brown & Hagaman when a bale of cotton fell on him, injuring his spinal column and inducing paralysis, which, however, is believed to be temporary.

A New Knitting Mill.

The Thompson Land and Investment company has interested a number of Northern capitalists in Huntsville and they have decided to establish a $100,000 knitting mill. Fine underwear and hose will be the products of the proposed industry.

PREGNANT THOUGHTS FROM THE WORLD'S GREATEST PROPHETS.

An Unbeliever—Riches Worth Striving For—Make Your Heart a Garden—When You Preach, Preach Boldly—Thinking Too Much of the World.

They say the world is growing worse,
I don't believe it, though:
They say men worship but the purse,
I don't believe it, though
They say that greatness is no more,
That all the wise have gone before,
And only trouble is in store—
I don't believe it, though.

They say there are no saints today,
I don't believe it, though:
They say we tread a downward way,
I don't believe it, though:
They say there's only gloom ahead,
They say that all the knights are dead,
They say men's sweetest joys are fled—
I don't believe it, though.

Men had their troubles long ago,
And that's what I believe;
The Lord still loves us here below,
And that's what I believe;
Old Homer of the sightless eyes,
And Caesar, lie 'neath other skies,
But greater men than they will rise,
And that's what I believe.

The world grows fairer day by day,
And that's what I believe;
The good have not all passed away,
And that's what I believe;
Though many a one we loved is gone,
Fond hearts and true are beating on!
The happiest days are still to dawn,
And that's what I believe!

Riches Worth Striving For.

Spiritual riches are within the reach of all. They may be inherited, and those of us who have been blessed with a godly ancestry should thank God for the measure of spiritual capital with which our earthly years begin. But it is equally true that earthly riches may be wasted. An honorable family name, the integrity that dwelt in one's father, the faith that belonged to one's mother, the tendency toward religion which is the best bequest which any one can leave his children—all these may be thrown to the winds as spendthrifts in a month run through their patrimony. But let us thank God that these riches depend upon an inheritance of piety, and no one need despair because he has wasted his spiritual substance, that any one who strives as the Bible directs to become good and true and useful and Christlike is certain, provided he relies on God's help, to attain the end in view. These spiritual riches are the reward of him who strives and sacrifices, but when a man once knows what it is to be rich toward God he holds material good at its proper worth and finds his richest and best life in the things of the spirit. No turn in the stock market, no fire or flood, no moth or dust can touch these treasures of the soul.

Make Your Heart a Garden.

Many flowers cannot grow where are the feet of the runner and the strife of the combatants. The first thing done to make an arena for wrestlers is to take away the turf and the daisies, then to beat the soil down hard and flat. And so our lives get flattened, stripped of their beauty and their fragrance, because they are not meant to be gardens, they are meant to be wrestling-grounds. There comes to every life that is worth living hours of sacrifice when duty can only be done at the cost of a bleeding heart. Every man that is not the devil's servant has to carry a cross, and to be fastened to it, if he will do his Master's work. Besides which crucifixion in service, there are all the other common sorrows storming in upon us, so that sometimes it as much as a man can do not to be swept away by the current, but to keep his footing in mid-channel.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

When You Preach, Preach Boldly.

There are men who claim to be preaching the word of God, when they are only preaching their own uncertainties and doubts. No man can be a true and helpful preacher of God's word unless his own faith in that word be full and unshaken. The first apostles had full and unshaken certainty that the Holy Scriptures are in very truth the word of God, and therefore one great characteristic of their preaching was its boldness. They never shrank before attack. They never put themselves on the defensive. They never apologized for the Gospel.—Church Standard.

Thinking Too Much of the World.

"Marks of discontent are plainly visible in the countenances of most men. The eager haste of the busy throngs, pushing their way through the crowded streets of our great cities, clearly indicates the gnawing hunger which preys within. Did the Creator make man to struggle and suffer, and remain forever unsatisfied? Men seek good, but find it not. They knock at doors which never open. They spend their strength for naught and their labor for that which satisfieth not."—Christian Advocate.

We say that the sun sets, but it never really does set. We speak of it as setting only because its evening condition looks like a going down. In reality, it has only the seeming of setting, and meets us as bright as ever next morning. Sleep looks like death, but it is not death. Neither is death itself really death; it is only the shadow or the appearance of death. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil.—Gerard B. F. Hallock, D. D.

The little sharp vexations
And the briars that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper
Who has never failed us yet?

Tell him about the heartache,
And tell him the longings, too;
Tell him the baffled purpose
When we scarce know what to do.

Then, leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden
And carry away the song.

Unless it is spiritualized, the national life is doomed to destruction. We can only remain a sound nation if we are sound at heart. But we can only be sound at heart as a nation if we are open to and affected by spiritual and religious influences.—The London Spectator.

A church supplies to any civilized community what every civilized community requires to complete the moral and social harmony. Where there is no church something essential to a full, free, hopeful life is missing.—Rev. Dr. I. M. Atwood.

Thank God for the sense of incompleteness; for out of it have sprung aspiration, endeavor, growth, and all the completeness possible to humanity.

The germ of all true greatness is humility.

gins denouncing Job by calling him a liar and keeps on the discourse until Job responds to all three of them in the sarcastic words, "No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you."

Oh, what friends Job had! Heaven deliver us from having one such friend, to say nothing of having three of them. It was for such friends that Job prayed, and was it not a religious triumph for him so to do? Would you, the very best of you, be in a very devout mood and capable of making intercession for people who had come to you in a day of trouble and said: "Good for you. You ought to be chastised. You are being taken in hand by eternal justice. If you had behaved yourself aright, you would not have been sick or persecuted or impoverished or made childless." Oh, no, my friend, you would not have felt like Job when he prayed for his friends, but more like Job when he cursed the day of his nativity.

You people who weigh over 200 pounds avoirdupois had better never lose your temper, for at such times apoplexy is not far off. Get the equipose of Job in the text, and it will help you in business directions. Praying for all offenders, you will have more nerve for large undertakings; you will have a better balanced judgment; you will waste no valuable time in trying to get even with your enemies.

Try this height of prayer for your antagonist to-day, and if you fail try it to-morrow. Keep on until you accomplish it, and I should not wonder if, in addition to the moral and religious strength it gives you, it should add a hundred per cent. to your worldly prosperity. Job xlii. 10, "The Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before."

What we all need is to get out of ourselves and go to helping others, whether friends or foes. As beautiful an instance of how this can be done I found last summer in London in the person of Florence Nightingale, the heroine of hospitals and of battlefields when there were no hospitals. The lounge on which she lies prostrate is a throne of power, and, though she has passed into the eighties, she trains nurses for sickbeds, and her influence is now felt among the wounded in South Africa, while her memory is full of the story of Balaklava, Sevastopol and Inkerman, where England and France and Russia grappled. She told me that she had not been happy until she undertook to alleviate suffering and that since she began that work she had never seen an unhappy day. To that work she consecrated her life, her classic attainments, her social position, her brilliant personality. Her whole life for others, and her face shows it. I think so much of heaven is to be found in no other human countenance. Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade" is not more thrilling to me than the womanly bravery and sacrifice that took care of those who were shot from the saddles of the "Immortal six hundred."

My text enthrones prayer and gives it a scepter to wave over our temporal and eternal life. Under God it cured Job and fixed up his finances and restored his home and made him so robust of health that he lived fourteen decades. "But," some one says, "I do not believe in prayer for friends and foes, because I do not think that God is going to change the laws of nature because we ask Him so to do." Neither do I think that God will change the law of nature at our request, but I am sure that He answers prayer through natural law.

Not a physician of any skill, allopathic, or homeopathic, or hydropathic, or eclectic, but has some time been surprised that what was thought to be a fatal disease suddenly relaxes its grasp of the patient, and he recovers. Not one law of nature has been fractured. Prayer may have given the sudden turn to that illness.

A business man may be in difficulty inextricable—mortgages against him foreclosing, goods to be sold for some reason become unsalable, new invention in machinery making the old machinery of his factory worthless, all kinds of commercial troubles pouncing upon him at once.

Most business men have at least once in their lives been put in such agonizing crisis, but the harried merchant or manufacturer gets out of it. Creditors become lenient, the wheels that were made useless for making one kind of fabric turn out to be good for making another style of fabric, the stock of goods that could not be sold comes into unexpected demand, and whereas all things were against him all things are now for him.

What an opportunity is prayer! Why not oftener use it praying for ourselves and, like Job, praying for others? What better work would we do, what better lives would we live, what better hopes would we entertain, if we multiplied and intensified our prayers!

Some one asked a soldier of Stonewall Jackson the secret of the great general's influence over his men. "Does your general abuse you, swear at you, to make you march?" "Swear!" replied the soldier. "No! Ewell does the swearing; Stonewall does the praying. When Stonewall wants us to march he looks at us soberly, just as if he were sorry for us, and says, 'Men, we have got to make a long march.' We always know when there is going to be a long march and right smart fighting, for Stonewall is powerful on prayer just before a big fight." When Stonewall Jackson was asked the meaning of the passage "instant in prayer," he said: "If you will not mistake and think I am setting myself up as an example, which I am not, I will give an illustration from my own habit. I have so fixed the habit of prayer in my mind that I never raise a glass of water to my lips without a moment's asking of God's blessing; I never seal a letter without a brief sending of my thoughts heavenward; I never change my classes in the section room without a minute's petition for the cadets who go out and those who come in."

Now, if God has during these remarks shown us the uses, the importance, the blessedness of prayer, suppose we try to do what Job did when he prayed for his exasperators. Many of us at the beginning of this subject felt that while we could pray for ourselves and pray for those who were kind to us we never could reach the high point of religious experience in which we could pray for those who annoy us and make us feel worse instead of feeling better. That was a Matterhorn, that was an Alp, to the top of which we feared we could never climb, but we thank God that by His omnipotent grace we have reached that height at last. Let us pray! Oh, Christ, who didst pray for Thine assassins, we now pray for those who despitefully use us and say all manner of evil against us. For their eternal salvation we supplicate. When time is no more, may they reign on thrones and wear coronets and sway sceptres of heavenly dominion. Meanwhile take the bitterness from their soul and make them soon think as well of us as now they think evil. Spare their bodies from pain and their households from bereavement. After all the misunderstandings and controversies of this life are over may we keep with them eternal jubilee in the mansions on the hill, and as Thou didst turn the captivity of Job when he had prayed for those who badly used him, and health came to his body and prosperity to his estate, now that we have by thy grace been able to make supplication for our antagonists, cure our diseases, if we are ill, and restore our estate, if it has been scattered; and awaken gladness in our homesteads, if they have been bereft; and turn the captivity of our physical pain or financial misfortune or mental distress, and Thine shall be the kingdom and the power and glory forever and ever. Amen!

LAND OF HUMMING BIRD.

Phenomenon That Follows Digging in Trinidad's Asphalt Lake.

The tourist may take passage to the "land of the humming bird"—as Trinidad people like their country to be called—and after securing accommodation at the only decent hotel in the colony, proceed to the lake by one of the small government steamers plying coastwise three times weekly, disembark at the Brighton pier, and proceed to the scene of "digging." Of all the crude, rough and ready means of extracting wealth from mother earth, the Trinidad lake asphalt operations are the most striking, says a writer in the New York Post. The visitor arrives on a fairly level plateau, spotted here and there with tiny pools of water, beneath which the soft shiny substance known as asphalt glitters in the reflections of a fierce tropical sun. Scattered over the surface of the lake dozens of swarthy negroes are plying pick and hoe, extracting the tar-easily looking stuff from the earth. One may sit in the shade of a near-by shrub or under the protecting shelter of an umbrella and watch the negroes pile heap after heap of the asphalt into the end of the endless chain of tubs that hurry along to the pier, from which one has but recently landed, until a yawning excavation of twenty or more feet suggests to the supervising darky that the time has come to move a bit further on. In the course of a few hours the excavation resulting from the morning's diggings begins to look less deep, and by the evening the spot from which more than five or ten tons have been dug is again level with the surrounding earth and ready to be dug over by the gang of noisy blacks. From the point of digging to the pier is about a mile or less of endless-chain descent; moored to the pier are big sailing vessels and sometimes steamers, into whose capacious holds the tubs discharge the pitch at the rate of two or three hundred tons per day.

Orientals as Soldiers.

No European nation has succeded in holding or controlling tropical possessions without the aid of native troops. Moreover, these can be maintained at a much smaller cost than white soldiers, not to speak of the great expense of transportation. Two-thirds of the Dutch army in Java is composed of native troops; Spain, before the insurrection, had over 13,000 natives doing military service in the Philippines, and England's success in converting the Egyptian fellahs into good soldiers is another example of how apparently poor material can be utilized.

Undergraduate a Milk Hand.

Oxford has among its undergraduates a married Lancashire millhand, 23 years of age, who worked his way into the university by studying after factory hours, with the help of free libraries and university extension lectures. He has won a scholarship worth £80 a year.

The Icelander eats dried fish and butter just as we eat bread and butter.

BY CAT'S EYES.

Chinese Tell the Hour by the Iris in the Feline Visual Organs.

It must be conceded that in some qualities of primitive, but practical resourcefulness the Chinese are ahead of most civilized nations. All travelers agree that if in a district where clocks and watches are unknown you ask a Chinaman the time of day he will, if well disposed, at once proceed to ambuscade and capture the household cat, and after pushing up the lids and looking for a moment into its eyes he will tell the time with astonishing accuracy. The explanation is a simple physiological one. The pupils of the cat's eyes constantly contract until midday, when they become like a fine line, as thin as a hair drawn perpendicularly across the eye; after twelve they begin again to dilate. It is to be hoped that if the practice is ever introduced into this country watches and clocks will continue to be made, as there will probably be many who will not care to run after a cat whenever they want to know the hour, or who may fear some danger to their own eyes from too close an examination of hers. The Chinese have by no means a monopoly of the cat as a perambulating timepiece. The negroes of Jamaica are very well acquainted with the method of telling the time by looking at the effect of the sun on pussy's eyes, and those who twenty years ago were quite illiterate and could not tell the time by a watch used to resort to this method for discovering the time of day. I have myself repeatedly, watch in hand, asked a negro to tell the time in this way, and it was very rare indeed for him to be five minutes out by the clock.

Model Tenement Houses.

Three hundred plans were submitted in an architects' competition in New York for model tenement houses and the first prize plan is to be used at once. The new buildings will be fire proof throughout and will occupy 70 per cent of the ground space, leaving 30 per cent for light and air. In each room a window will open into the outer air and each apartment will be connected with private hall and baths, play grounds, clothes drying chambers and storage rooms. It is calculated that a rental of $1 a week per room will give satisfactory profit.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

FRUIT IN ALABAMA.

Possibilities Far Beyond the Appreciation of Northern People.

When the Pan-American Exposition opened at Buffalo on the 1st of May next, it is to be hoped that Alabama will have an adequate representation of her possibilities in fruit growing. The climate and the conditions of the soil are exceedingly favorable to the production of the fruits of the temperate zone while many of the subtropical fruits attain perfection. Apples, peaches, pears, strawberries, blackberries, raspberries and grapes grow to perfection on the uplands of Alabama and many thousands of acres await the coming of competent fruit growers and farmers to take advantage of the opportunity which the state offers in these lines of industry. The fruits of Alabama ripen many weeks in advance of those of the north and the transportation facilities are now such that all crops may be marketed in the cities and towns of the north at a profit. Alabama peaches are particularly a profitable crop owing to the demand for the early fruit in northern markets.

HORTICULTURE BUILDING.

The growing and shipping of green vegetables to the north have become an important industry in many sections of the state, and the possibilities in this direction are still but little understood. The markets of the north are continually growing and the demand increasing for all such products as Alabama can supply. Everything that the north can produce can be grown in Alabama and shipped into northern markets in advance of the harvest time for northern crops.

Inasmuch as the Pan-American Exposition has set apart a large building for horticultural products and another large building devoted to agriculture, it seems advisable that a state which depends so largely upon the north for its markets should have a fitting exhibition of its products so arranged that the people with whom it has such intimate relations may fully understand what Alabama is prepared to do in fruit growing and truck farming.

What state can make a better display of early vegetables than Alabama or show more perfect early fruits than this same state? The sweet potatoes of Alabama are to be found in every northern market, and her peanut crop is becoming yearly more important.

In the celtral belt along both sides of the Tennessee river this state produces all the grains and products known to the more northern states, and the Tennessee valley is compared in its beauty with the famous Shenandoah of Virginia and the Genesee valley of New York state.

With millions of visitors coming next year to see her wonderful Exposition Buffalo is prepared to offer a rare opportunity for extending to all interested persons a thorough knowledge of the advantages and resources of this great southern state.

Buffalo Millions For the Exposition.

The people of Buffalo have committed themselves to an expenditure of about $5,000,000 for the purpose of the Pan-American Exposition to be held in that city next year. The United States government is spending $500,000 on its group of buildings and exhibits. The state of New York has appropriated $300,000, and it is estimated that the Midway, or pleasure ground, will cost the concessionaires between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 before the gates are open. In addition to these sums, a citizen of Buffalo, Mr. J. J. Albright, who is widely known in the iron trade, has given $400,000 for an Art Gallery, which is to be a permanent building of white marble. This will serve as the Temple of Art for the Exposition and will afterward become the home of Buffalo's public art treasures. The Buffalo Railway Company expects to spend nearly $3,000,000 in new tracks and equipment in preparation for the Pan-American year. The aggregate sum to be paid out before the Exposition gates open thus becomes very large.

Exterior Beauty of Pan-American.

The site for the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo is in the northern part of the city and is about one mile long by one-half mile wide, containing 350 acres. It includes 133 acres of Delaware Park, in which are a beautiful lake and other water features. There will be over 20 large buildings and massive architectural works. A grand canal will completely encircle the main group of buildings and will serve as a means of transit from place to place in electric launches and gondolas. Particular attention has been given to an artistic arrangement of the buildings and the elaborate embellishment of the grounds with trees, shrubs, fountains, large plazas in tubs and formal floral displays everywhere. The buildings are all to have an elaborate scheme of ornamentation, and unusual color effects. The general style of architecture is a free treatment of the Spanish renaissance, most congenial, having been found in the buildings of southern California, Mexico, Central and South American countries.

The Unique Horn of the Unicorn.

The horn of a unicorn was shown at Windsor castle and in 1589 was valued at over £10,000. Lewis Vertomannus, a gentleman of Rome, saw with his own eyes two unicorns presented to the sultan of Meeca by a king of Ethiopia. They were in a park of the sultan of Meeca and were not much unlike horses of 30 months of age. This was in 1503. The animal became extinct about the end of the seventeenth century.

The unicorn is represented on the ruins of Persepolis, and it was regarded by the Persians as the emblem of power and strength. In the middle ages it was the symbol of purity. The lion hated the elephant, and it used to sharpen its horn on a stone before it struck the poor beast in the abdomen. So faithful, in every way, should be without one of these horns, the average length of which was about four feet. They defend from the attacks of craft. Thus Torquemada had his enemies always on his writing table. Failing more, a drinking cup made from the horn will be a safeguard against poison, and will the ground powder put into the ink and indeed the walls of the room. St. Mark could not have asked for the good old days of chivalry when these beneficent items had to be thrown into them. Unicorn's horn formerly sold by apothecaries at an ounce.—Boston Journal.

Fat Policemen.

"Have you ever noticed that all policemen get fat," said a man who keeps his eyes open. "This seem to disprove the theory that living in the open air is a means of reducing superfluous weight. I have noticed new policemen to start on the beat weighing no more than 125 pounds. In six months they would weigh from 140 to 150 and in a year reach the 200 mark. It must be the slow monotony of the open air that does it, for I have noticed that while policemen grow fat, sergeants, who are confined to the station-house, are invariably thin. The officers who patrol the streets gain in flesh and girth with unusual rapidity. Even the mounted men who ride their horses on the beat, instead of walking, become unwieldy. The apparent explanation is that the monotonous burden of doing the same thing over and over again has a great softening effect upon the mind, and that the policeman who is not mentally developed to any great extent is the best suited to the duties of the police force. Anyway, the fact remains that policemen do get fat."

BURGLARS BREAK INTO CHILTON COURT HOUSE.

Early on Monday morning last the clerk's office of the Judge of Probate was broken into by burglars and the safe blown open by dynamite or some other explosive. The force of the explosion can be estimated by the wreck of the room in which it occurred. The heavy door of the iron safe just struck the wall and then hurled through the window some forty-five feet out on the road.

The door was curved as if it had been through a curving mangle.

Judge Adams says $425 in money was stolen, but the books and papers were not injured. The safe is wrecked beyond repair, and a new one will be necessary. Two sashes and all the glass in the clerk's office will have to be replaced.

Mr. G. W. Marcus, whose residence is close to the court house, says he was awakened by a peculiar explosion, as near as he can tell about 12:30 Sunday night, and thought it was the boiler of the pumping station at the depot had exploded.

Suspicion pointed to two strange negro men who had been in town for one or two previous and word was sent to Montgomery and Birmingham. On Tuesday the two were arrested at Montgomery on Monday, and brought to Clanton on Wednesday evening. They were taken before Judge Adams on Thursday, but there being no evidence of their being implicated in the crime they were released.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The fall term of circuit court convened on Monday morning with Judge J. C. Richardson, of Greenville, presiding in the place of Judge N. D. Denson.

Judge Richardson made a very able and concise address to the Grand Jury. S. A. Curry was made foreman, and W. H. Conner bailiff.

Only two cases went to a jury. Miss Annie Young vs Mrs. Pletcher, action for slander, was the most important, and resulted in a verdict for the defendant.

On Tuesday Clerk E. B. Denson was taken sick, and had to confine himself to his room. Leroy Watts, deputy clerk, taken his place in office.

In addition to the home bar the following visiting attorneys were present: Walter Cary, Montevallo; Charles Jones and Mr. Blakey, of Montgomery; J. Savage and D. C. Blackwell, of Wilton.

Siberian Luxuries.

The three great luxuries in Siberia are churches, theaters and museums. Even the smaller villages can usually be sighted from afar by means of the white walls and the towering, dome shaped cupolas of their churches. These are all amply supplied with bells whose rich tones roll in majestic har-mony over distant hill and vale and break the monotony of the peasants' daily toil. Inside these churches are highly ornamented with paintings, and they are presided over by married priests, who take a deep and genuine interest in even the poorest of the flock.

The board of health of Woodstock, Ont., has decided to compel bakers to give up the present system of giving small tickets to their customers, as they consider the distribution of these around to different houses is liable to spread disease.

The Duke of Sutherland has been elected president of the Scottish Self-Control society, whose members are bound (1) not to drink intoxicants before noon or except at their regular meals; (2) not to "treat"; (3) not to give alcoholic drink in return for services rendered.

Experts who have examined rye straw are of the opinion that a very high grade of paper, not only adapted to newspapers, but suitable for books as well, can be made from that material, of which Louisiana produces thousands of tons that are now got rid of as a waste product.

A Frenchman, M. de Regnier, has written a book in which he says New York City and Chicago are the ugliest things he ever saw; also that all other American cities are unlovely. M. de Regnier must have passed through when the people who made it a part of their business to entertain foreign eads were away for the summer.

Twenty m illions of American capital is to be planted underground in London to provide its inhabitants with up-to-date means of rapid transit. John Bull's American cousin gives him a constant series of surprises, lends him money when it used to be the other way, builds and runs his railroads, and gives him new points in the construction of warships, and is otherwise forward and unconventional in his conduct.

It is said in England that the Ashanti trouble is due largely to the carelessness in matters of dress of the British representative, Sir Frederick Hodgson. When the chief met last March for a great "durbar" they came in all the glory of paint, beads and feathers, while the English official wore a shabby shooting costume without a medal or decoration of any kind. The chiefs were offended, thought him an impostor and soon began to rise in revolt.

The will of the late Dr. Lewis A. Sayre disposed of property valued at $93,430. Why is it that most of our doctors die relatively poor? Dr. Sayre was one of the most eminent of American physicians and surgeons. In addition to the revenues of a large and long-extended practice and from many daring and difficult operations, he was the patentee of several surgical instruments and devices in general use. And yet his total estate is very small compared with the property accumulated by a lawyer of equal rank or by business men of moderate success. A leading physician said recently that it was very rarely that a member of the profession dies in possession of as much as $25,000. Is it because their style of living must be expensive, or are the collections poor?

An analysis of the award of the ten fellowships of Byrn Mawr college for the year is interesting as showing the range of higher scholarship among the women students of America and the wide diffusion of the zeal for those higher studies. Of the 10 fellowships three are from Wisconsin, one each from Massachusetts, Nebraska, Ohio and Pennsylvania and Canada and one not assigned. Their college degrees were obtained, three from the University of Wisconsin and one each from Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Nebraska, Wooster, Pennsylvania, Edinburgh and Toronto. The departments of learning in which the fellowships are awarded are Greek, Latin, English, Teutonic philology, Romance philology, history, philosophy, mathematics, chemistry and biology.

Lace-Making as an Art.

The most difficult of all lace-making are the pillow laces, so called from the cushion that suports the pins and bobbins while the weaver works. Mechlin, Bruges, real point-lace and Valenciennes are pillow laces, though many are made on black parchment, which is far easier. The pattern once fixed in the weaver's mind, the shuttles are worked in and out, minute threads are tied, flowers are formed like magic under the tireless fingers. In many hand-made laces tiny braids or infinitesimally small threads are used to outline the pattern, but so careful are needled into flowers, leaves, and that they defy the closest scrutiny and stand for what they really are—hand-made laces.—Harper's Bazar.

TREATY RIGHT IS WITHHELD

Sultan of Turkey Gives More Offense.

HE IGNORES OUR CONSUL

England, On the Other Hand, Is Shown Favor and the Turk's Attitude May Precipitate Serious Trouble.

A special of Friday from Constantinople says: The porte has definitely rejected the request for an exequatur for a United States consul at Harpoot. This refusal is regarded by the United States legation as a direct violation of treaty rights, and, consequently, despite the refusal, Dr. Thomas H. Norton, who was appointed by President McKinley some time ago to establish a consulate at Harpoot, has been directed to proceed to his post. The expected visit of the battleship Kentucky to Smyrna is believed to relate as much to this matter as to the indemnity question.

NO OFFICIFL NEWS RECEIVED.

A Washington special says: The refusal of the Turkish government to grant an exequatur to the American consul at Harpoot has not yet been received by the state department. It will scarcely be expected that such notice will be made, as the Turkish way generally is procrastination rather than direct refusal, which serves the same end, without giving tangible ground for reprisals.

Dr. Norton, who was appointed consul at Harpoot, has now been in Constantinople waiting for the exequatur about three months. The claim of the United States in this case was based on article 2 of the treaty of May 7, 1830, which reads:

"And the United States may appoint their citizens to be consuls and vice consuls at the commercial places in the dominions of the sublime porte where it shall be found needful to superintend the affairs of commerce."

The Turkish objection to the establishment of a consulate at Harpoot and Erzeroum under this apparently clear permission has been based on the rather novel reason that there was no commeoce at these two points, and it has been difficult for our officials to establish the contrary proposition.

But some time ago the Turkish government accorded to the British government the right to establish a consulate at Harpoot and the state department immediately based an additional claim on the "favored nation" clause of its general treaty which would appear to warrant it in demanding the same privilege of establishing a consulate at a given point in Turkey, as was granted to Great Britain.

Advices from Naples are to the effect that the United States battleship Kentucky, which arrived there November 19th, sailed Saturday for Smyrna.

POPULISTS TO MEET.

Call Is Issued For Convention In St. Louis December 29th.

National Chairman J. A. Parker, of the national committee of the Populist party, has issued a call for a convention at St. Louis Saturday, December 29th, to "consider the best interests of the party and the most effective means of continuing the fight for Populist principles; also to confer with such representatives of other reform parties as may desire to attend, looking to the organization of all reformers against the capitalistic parties." In his call he arraigns both the Democratic and Republican parties, and says:

"The Populist party holds the key to the political situation."

AGREEMENT IS REACHED

By Diplomats In Conference at Pekin. Based on French Note.

Advices from Pekin state that the diplomatic body held a final meeting Saturday morning and agreed upon the terms of the preliminary treaty. Nothing now remains except to secure the approval of the respective governments before definite negotiations with the Chinese peace commissioners are begun.

The precise terms of the settlement have not yet been made public, but it is believed outside of the diplomatic corps that the main points are in a substantial agreemant with those contained in the French note.

NEW MONITOR AFLOAT.

The Nevada Launched and Christened at Bath Ship Yards.

The United States monitor Nevada, in tonnage the largest government vessel ever built by the Bath Iron Works, was launched in that city Saturday. ATTEMPTED BRIBERY.

Governor Longino, of Mississippi, Caused Arrest of Prominent Contractor.

In Jackson, Miss., Saturday night J. E. Gibson, a prominent contractor from Logansport, Ind., was arrested on the charge of attempting to bribe Governor Longino and secure his assistance in capturing the contract for the new $1,000,000 capitol building. The arrest was made at the instance of Governor Longino. Immediately after the alleged attempt at bribery occurred he emerged from his private office trembling with excitement, exclaiming:

"You have struck the wrong man; I can't be bought," and directed his private secretary to send for the chief of police to take Gibson into custody.

Gibson was arrested a few minutes later at the Edwards house and unceremoniously bundled off to jail. An hour later he was given a preliminary hearing before Judge Fitzgerald and admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000. At the hearing of the testimony Governor Longino stated that he had received two visits from Gibson. During the first visit he stated that a combination had been formed among St. Louis and Chicago contractors to capture the state house contract, and he intended to fight their scheme, but would not give away details when the governor asked for facts.

At the second visit, which occurred Saturday morning, so Governor Longino states, Gibson offered him any sum of money he might ask for his assistance in capturing the contract, insinuating that the price of materials could be changed so that both would be able to make a considerable amount out of the deal.

BIRMINGHAM PRINTERS OUT.

They Make New Scale Which Employers Won't Accept.

All the union printers in the job printing offices in Birmingham, Ala., went out on strike Friday morning. The strike was inaugurated for the purpose of enforcing the scale recently adopted by Typographical Union No. 104, and which the proprietors of the job offices refused to pay. The new scale calls for a minimum of $18 per week. The old scale's minimum was $16, but no printing office in Birmingham had paid less than $16.50, and this was generally regarded as the minimum.

The printers made some concessions, so far as the daily newspapers are concerned, from their original demands, and they now expect that the newspapers will adopt their scale. The printing offices affected by the strike are Roberts & Son, Leslie Printing Company, Dispatch Printing Company, American Newspaper Union, Birmingham Courier and City Paper Company.

SULTAN IS OBSTINATE.

Still Refuses an Exequatur to Our Consul at Harpoot.

A dispatch from Constantinople says: United States Charge d'Affaires Griscome called upon Tewfik Pasha, minister for foreign affairs to urge a settlement of the difficulty in relation to the granting of an exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton, who some time ago was appointed by President McKinley to establish a consulate at Harpoot. The porte, however, is firm in its refusal to grant the request for an exequatur.

In regard to the above a Washington special says: The Turkish authorities having refused to grant an exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton, to act as United States consul at Harpoot, the indications point to some retaliatory measures on the part of our government in the near future.

IN QUIESCENT STATE.

Administration Is Calmly Awaiting Developments In China.

The administration has adopted a waiting policy in the matter of Pekin negotiations, says a New York Herald dispatch from Washington. No action has been taken upon Germany's proposal to make the execution of the Boxer leaders a condition precedent to the continuance of negotiations. The president has decided, it is understood, that this matter can well rest until further developments show what the German and other governments propose to do.

OATH TO BE ADMINISTERED.

Governor Samford Will Be Sworn In On December 1st.

A special from Opelika, Ala., says: Governor Samford's condition is much better. He will take the oath of office on December 1st. Further plans than that have not been arranged.

He will not be well enough to go to Montgomery December 1st, but if he continues to improve as he has recently he will be able to sit up and attend to any necessary affairs.

FRENCHMEN WILD OVER MR. KRUGER

Exiled Transvaal President Accorded a Gladsome Reception.

HIS TOUR WAS AN OVATION

Parisians Vie With Each Other In Doing the Old Man Honor.

Oom Paul Kruger has become for a time at least the popular idol of the French. His triumphant progress northward through the country from Marseilles to Dijon and from Dijon to Paris settled this beyond doubt. He met a tremendous reception in each town along the route where the train stopped, culminating in scenes of frenzied enthusiasm calculated to turn the head of any man.

The population of Marseilles gathered in thousands to escort him to the railroad station and gave him a rousing send-off, while at Tarascon, Avignon, Valence, Lyons, Macol and Dijon the inhabitants, who crowded the railroad stations, made the rafters tremble with enthusiastic shouts of "vive Kruger" and "vive les Boers."

Saturday the city of Paris welcomed Mr. Kruger in a whole-hearted manner, according him a sincere reception at the railroad station and showing by the cheering of the crowds along the route that he was cordially welcome and had the sympathy of the populace.

From early morning the street hawkers did not permit the throngs to forget that it was Kruger day. All sorts of insignia were offered for sale. Small Boer flags, badges of the Boer colors and scarf pins of the same character were called out on the boulevards and lucky were the salesmen, for almost every one wore a Boer emblem.

By the time Kruger's train was due all the places of vantage about the railroad station and the hotel were packed for the distance of about a block. Among those gathered at the railroad station were Count Boni de Castellane and several other well known nationalists and Miss Maude Gonne and a party from the Irish delegation. The crowd on the platform pressed so closely about Mr. Kruger's salon car that for a time he was unable to alight and stood on the footboard, bareheaded, acknowledging the plaudits of his admirers.

Mr. Crozier, chief of the protocol department of the foreign office, to which is intrusted the questions of etiquette and the reins of diplomats, and others advanced and bid Mr. Kruger welcome in behalf of President Loubet and the French government. Mr. Kruger bowed his thanks.

Mayor Grevaul then greeted Mr. Kruger in behalf of the municipality of Paris, and the president of the pro-Boer committee and others presented the aged traveler with addresses of welcome, to which Mr. Kruger replied that he was extremely happy to again find himself in the beauty city of Paris, and asserted that he was touched to the bottom of his heart by the welcome he had received and could not find words to express his appreciation of the sympathy Frenchmen were displaying toward his country. He concluded with saying he had faith in the Boer nation, which, though temptest tossed, would keep afloat and never sink.

A sight which stirred the feelings of the crowd to the utmost was the appearance on the hotel balcony of the great grandchildren of Mr. Kruger, waving a Boer flag. The little ones were cheered to the echo as, held aloft by a servant, they unfurled the Boer colors.

Through all this fervid welcome the anti-British sentiment did not appear. The cries were confined to plaudits of Mr. Kruger and the Boers. If there were any shouts opposed to Great Britain they were not heard in the general tumult.

Engineer Killed In Wreck.

Fast passenger train No. 78, of the Plant system, collided with a freight train on a siding at Green Pond, S. C., Saturday morning at 4 o'clock, killing Engineer T. N. Jones, of the passenger train, and seriously injuring his fireman, Thomas Lester.

Mr. W. J. Bryan arrived in Chicago Saturday from Lincoln. He drove to the auditorium annex, he did not register, but was at once shown to the room occupied by Charles A. Towne of Minnesota. There he remained in consultation with Mr. Towne and former Senator Fred T. Dubois, of Idaho, until night when he returned to Lincoln.

Br. Bryan refused to say what was discussed during the meeting, but did not deny that the future policy of the Democratic party was one of the topics discussed.

CHURCH PERIODICAL

Causes a Heated Discussion In the North Georgia Annual Conference.

The North Georgia conference in session at Atlanta, Ga., held one of the liveliest sessions Friday perhaps known in the history of the organization. For over an hour the delegates grappled with an important question and the discussion and settlement goes on record as the feature of the conference.

The matter which caused the discussion was the report of the committee on The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, the Methodist paper published by a board of trustees appointed by the North and South Georgia conferences, and of late differences have arisen between the two boards in reference to the management.

The committee, of which Dr. J. H. Sapes is chairman, realized that some action was necessary to adjust these differences as soon as possible, but their plan did not meet with the favor of the conference, it seems, and a resolution was passed, which leaves the situation unchanged. Dr. W. F. Glenn and Dr. W. C. Lovett are the present editors of the paper, Dr. Glenn being from the North Georgia conference and Dr. Lovett from the South Georgia conference. In the latter conference opposition has arisen, it appears, to Dr. Glenn, and Dr. Lovett appears not to be in great favor with some members of the North Georgia conference.

During the discussion Dr. Glenn arose and after stating that all he had done had been in the interest of the church, tendered his resignation as editor of the paper. "There has been no friction whatever between Dr. Lovett and myself," he said. "But I think the present plan impracticable. We have no business management at all."

There was only one editor of the paper until about a year ago, when Dr. Lovett was elected. Dr. Glenn had been the editor for eleven years previously. South Georgia wanted a representative on the paper, however, and then the trouble began.

The paper at present has no business manager, Dr. M. J. Cofer, who was elected, refusing to serve.

The matter was simply a clash between north and south Georgia. The differences among the trustees have been kept comparatively secret, but the inevitable volcanic eruption came Friday, and those engaged in the discussion did not hesitate in the least to express just exactly what they thought about the matter either. Some plain words were used.

The committee recommended as a salve the following preamble in its report:

Whereas, there seems to be irreconcilable differences existing between the trustees of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, elected by the North and South Georgia conferences respectively, we therefore recommend

1. That a commission composed of three laymen and three preachers be elected from this conference to confer with a like conference which we hereby request the South Georgia conference to appoint, looking to an adjustment of the existing differences in the present board of trustees touching the management of the paper.

2. In case the South Georgia conference should decline to appoint this commission, or if when appointed the joint commission should fail to agree, then the trustees of the North Georgia conference are hereby empowerd to proceed at once to establish a paper for this conference and elect an editor and business manager, and also proceed to an equitable division of the assets of the present corporation.

MAYOR VERSUS PREACHER.

Dr. Broughton Scored By Atlanta's Chief Executive, Woodward.

"The man who is the author of that statement, no matter whom he may be or what his calling, uttered knowingly a falsehood and is unworthy the name of man. He is a lying cur and a carrion crow."

That is what Mayor James G. Woodward said during a meeting of the police committee of the Atlanta city council. He was referring to a statement made in a sermon delivered by Dr. Len G. Broughton last Sunday night, in which the minister was quoted as saying that the mayor and the police had been at Piedmont park drinking whisky and gambling on the races.

ROAD SEEMS A CERTAINTY.

Second Survey of Line From Athens to Augusta Completed.

A special from Athens, Ga., says: It begins to look as if the new railroad from Augusta to Athens is to be built at an early date. The second survey of the line has just been completed, and the work will now follow that will give Athens another valuable railroad connection.

Alabama Senate Follows Suit.

A special from Montgomery, Ala., says: The succession bills vetoed by the governor and passed over his veto in the house met with the same fate in the senate amid cheers. The vote was very pronounced—23 to 5.

POWERS ARE DIVIDED.

Program of Settlement of the Chinese Muddle Difficult to Arrange.

"A serious divergence has arisen in Pekin," says the Tien Tsin correspondent of the London Daily Mail. "Japan, the United States, Russia and France favor demanding a milder punishment than the execution of Prince Tuan and the others, while Great Britain, Germany, Austria-Hungary and [illegible] nothing less than the [illegible]

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A Viennese dentist, while [illegible] menting at the Hygienic Institute, Wurzburg, claims to have discovered the successful application of electricity for the destruction of [illegible]. It is said that the treatment is very simple.

With such comparatively [illegible] work in the study of the earth's [illegible]ure, it is interesting to recall the observations of Eratosthenes, B. C. [illegible], who is supposed to be the first astronomer, though Thales and Pythagoras both taught that the earth was a sphere. Eratosthenes noted that at noon on the day of the summer solstice there was no shadow cast by the ground at Syene, while at the same time at Alexandria at noon on the same day a shadow could be seen and measured. From the data thus obtained and knowing the distance between the two places he was able to calculate the [illegible] of the earth's circumference.

Cow's milk should be [illegible] one-third its volume of water and [illegible] teaspoonfuls of white sugar to each quart of liquid. A small portion of rennet is rubbed into a paste with [illegible] and added to the milk which is then placed in strong bottles and allowed to ferment. After a few days the bottles in which the bottles should be occasionally shaken, a beverage of great value in cases of digestive disturbance [illegible] as of excellent palatable [illegible] for healthy person, is produced. Extreme care must be used in corking the bottles tightly, and it is safer to [illegible] the great pressure produced by fermentation, to wrap the bottles in heavy cloth before shaking them.

Captain R. H. Elliott, who has for some time been conducting research into the nature and action of cobra venom in India, has come to the following conclusions regarding snake-charmers: The snake men of South India are certainly ignorant of any method of producing in themselves a highly developed condition of immunity. Some few of them appear to practice the system of [illegible] or the inunction of venom into the limbs, but it is doubtful if they do so with any well-defined object. It is possible, however, that they thereby obtain some degree of immunity. They confine their snake-charming operations almost exclusively to the cobra, and escape harm by their intimate knowledge of the safe method of handling this snake.

The Petrified Forest or Chalcedony Park or Lithodendrum [illegible] Valley, as it is variously called, is situated in Apache County, Arizona, between the Little Colorado and the Rio Puerco, about six miles south of Adamana Station on the Santa Fe Pacific Railroad. Professor L. F. Ward of the Department of the Interior, Washington, has recently published a report based on a recent visit to the forest. The trip was made especially with reference to the desirability of setting aside the district as a national park. Professor Ward fully confirms the great interest of the formation and points out the fact that its greatest is much enhanced by its great age, probably dating as far back as the Triassic. The destruction of this natural wonder, due to the piecemeal raids of idle curio hunters, is becoming more apparent with each succeeding year.

"Romeo and Juliet" Up-to-Date.

At a small seaport town [illegible] actress of the third magnitude appeared as Juliet.

"I cannot do justice to myself," said to the manager, "if you don't have a lime-light thrown on me. I appear at the balcony."

"We ain't got no lime-light, but I think we could get you a search light," replied the obliging [illegible] and to this the lady agreed.

The lad who went to the shop for the bluelight brought back a rocket, which was given to him by mistake. The prompter took the rocket in good faith.

Romeo—"He jests at scars who never feels a wound."

(Juliet appears. Prompter lights match.)

"But, soft! What light through yonder window breaks?"

(This was the match lighted by the fuse.)

"Arise, fair sun!"

The sun, or, rather, the rocket, did rise, with a terrific hiss. Juliet was knocked off the balcony, the scenery borders were set on fire, and the whole theatre was filled with sulphurous smoke, while the audience, which was fortunately a small one, made a stampede to the doors.

Since then "Romeo and Juliet" has always been looked upon in the profession as a dramatic work that could not be witnessed without personal danger.—New World.

Lady Wilson Betrayed by a Pig.

The Duke of Marlborough, [illegible] Woodstock Agricultural and Horse Show, told an amusing anecdote of the Boer war. Referring to the use of homing pigeons he mentioned that during the siege of Mafeking General Baden-Powell expressed a wish that a message should remain in the town. Lady Sarah Wilson went out a distance of some fifteen miles and, being desirous to communicate with General Baden-Powell, she attempted to do so by means of a carrier pigeon. Lady Sarah wrote a letter and dispatched it by the pigeon, in the hope that it would fly straight into Mafeking, but instead of that it settled on the house of a Boer Commandant who was in the town. The result was that the Boer Commandant ascertained who she was, and she had to explain the reason why she was near Mafeking.—St. James's Gazette.

WOMAN'S REALM

FASHION'S VERSATILITY.

Gowns For the Wardrobe of the Well Dressed Woman.

[illegible] of the most exquisite and striking [illegible]strations of the season's craze for trimming is seen in the open robe of a leading house. It is a robe [illegible] chiffon richly embroidered in gold in a floral design that surrounds the skirt, curving in the front to outline the front gore. The flowers are in solid raised work. Art of exquisite delicacy, and the whole is a triumph of art.

[illegible] robe appears in every form for [illegible] and evening wear. There are fine [illegible] woven henriettas and cashmeres with lace designs wrought in the piece or with rich, embroidered cutwork, through which delicate silk shimmers. There are [illegible] robes of cloths with woven borderings and there are the daintiest things that ever were seen in the way of Tita [illegible] redowa or ball evening occasions. In all the [illegible] material is a part of the robe, [illegible] generally in the form of a Pompadour jacket, bolero or Eton high and [illegible] in the day gowns and décolleté in the evening. In the latter it is [illegible] to employ accordion pleated chiffon [illegible] of the prevailing tone in the material.

[illegible] imported gowns this year show the most daring color combinations [illegible] nevertheless, produce perfectly [illegible] effects. A "home gown" of [illegible] blue crepe, for instance, has a [illegible] velvet bolero, with revers of [illegible] panne, which is used on collar [illegible] sleeves, also a band of heavy [illegible] guipure, with touches of gilt, [illegible] decorates the bolero. A dinner [illegible] me of hunter's green velvet has [illegible] cordings of pale blue, violet and [illegible] outlining the flat pleated blue [illegible] inserted at each seam, nearly [illegible] knee. For the front of the corsage the blue chiffon is used and similarly treated, and the square decollete [illegible] is corded in the same manner.

[illegible] costume of strawberry colored [illegible] cut with trimming of white satin, [illegible] bended with velvet roses, sounds [illegible] rather startling when considered as a [illegible] time gown, yet such is the velvet [illegible] color craze that a visiting costume [illegible] that basis is being made for a society [illegible] leader. The velvet coat has revers [illegible] of the brocaded satin, with waistcoat [illegible] to match and the long velvet tunic is [illegible] caught up at one side to show a petticoat [illegible] of the satin. The strawberry velvet [illegible] hat is lavishly trimmed with white [illegible] ostrich plumes radiating from a large [illegible] jewel ornament at the front.

A French Wedding.

[illegible] a recent wedding in Paris the [illegible] bride amazed all beholders by wearing [illegible] a long, voluminous tulle veil flecked [illegible] with silver. The innovation pleased [illegible] much as it surprised, and it is not [illegible] improbable that we shall be taking [illegible] a last look at the winter bride-to-be through a mist of tulle and silver. The [illegible] lady who introduced this novelty was a young woman of social importance, [illegible] and as her frocks were made by the [illegible] "great artists" of Paris, it is possible [illegible] that the spangled veil was the inspiration of one of these faiseurs, and not [illegible] the idea of the demoiselle herself. The [illegible] bridal wreath was of myrtle and [illegible] orange blossoms. The gown was [illegible] of ivory-white duchess satin, the [illegible] tulle skirt made in groups of tucks, [illegible] the bodice having a bolero of corded [illegible] satin and applications of embroidered [illegible] mousseline de soie. The sleeves and [illegible] revers were trimmed with the same [illegible] embroidery and the yoke was of transparent [illegible] mousseline.

[illegible] There was one maid in attendance, [illegible] who wore the newest of new frocks—[illegible] a peau de gant cloth, which name [illegible] describes the fabric perfectly. It had [illegible] a small bolero strapped with cloth and [illegible] a large collar of Roman point. The [illegible] sleeves were rolled at the elbow, showing [illegible] undersleeves of crepe de chine. [illegible] The skirt was plain. She wore a hat [illegible] of white beaver with one long white [illegible] ostrich plume and a knot of velvet ribbon [illegible] as trimming and carried a bouquet [illegible] of pink roses.

"To the Queen's Taste."

[illegible] Queen Margherita of Italy gave the following reply: "From fifteen to thirty

[illegible] a woman loves [illegible] from thirty to fifty [illegible] some man, and [illegible] ships a man in [illegible]

[illegible] Princess Henry [illegible] "Many ugly men [illegible] doubtedly - but [illegible] men. However [illegible] some does not [illegible] with only his [illegible] upon would have [illegible] winning any [illegible] tion."

Princess Henry of Battenberg wrote: "Many ugly men are very lovable, undoubtedly—but, then, so are handsome men. However, handsome is as handsome does, and a good-looking man with only his good looks to fall back upon would have a poor chance of winning any right-minded girl's affection."

In answer to the question, "What quality do women most admire in men?" the Queen of Portugal herself wrote in her book: "Purity in a man is surely as grand and as ennobling as purity in a woman." The Princess of Wales admires "modesty" in a man above all other qualities.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Bridal Etiquette.

A maiden is usually married in white; a widow never. A widow on remarrying may wear gray, fawn, lavender or some such delicate shade.

If you know only the bridegroom and are selecting a present choose something useful for the home or something suitable for a gentleman. With your present send congratulations and kind wishes.

Wedding invitations are issued in the name of the bride's father and mother or, in lieu of these, her guardian. No one should go to a wedding in mourning; either decline the invitation or discard the mourning for the event. Wedding presents may be sent a week in advance of the event, accompanied by a visiting card or a note.

The bridegroom provides the flowers carried by his bride; the flowers carried by the bridesmaids and the carriage which drives his bride from the church and all other expenses incidental to a wedding are paid by the parents of the bride.—American Queen.

Many green leaves are to be seen on winter hats.

Flaming red hats, feathers, ribbons and velvet flowers are prominently displayed by high-class milliners.

Loose meshed ribbons in gold and silver in narrow widths are made up with velvets and ribbons for hair ornaments.

A real velvet gown is trimmed extensively with a heavy, coarse braid lace around the skirt, and the jacket nearly covered.

Lacings of gold cord are much used in velvet and taffeta boleros, and are also introduced in the side panels of many new skirts.

Marked favor will be shown to both plain and fancy panne velvets for costumes entire and for accessories of every description.

A princess effect is given to some gowns by carrying the pleats which finish the back of the waist down the skirt. These may be in box or side pleats.

The Eton jackets show fronts double, triple and even quadruple. Shaped ruffles at the lower edges of the skirts with these give the effect of nearly as many skirts.

Panne velvet is a great favorite with the fashionables of Paris, not infrequently taking precedence over ordinary silk velvet. It will be much employed for separate waists, trimming, and also for muffs and hats.

A little lace Eton jacket, which is short and hangs straight without fitting to the figure, has a pretty finish around the edge. It is made of narrow folds of satin, lavender and pale blue interlacing loosely, and sewed on so that it hangs freely.

The general persistence with which the bolero holds favor, both here and abroad, indicates its general becomingness. In traveling suits, shopping or afternoon gowns it appears in some form or other, and appeals always to the woman of fashion.

The sleeves in tinted gold are certainly beautiful. Not the enamel, that has an unreal look. Take an oval belt buckle in gold with a wild rose and buds lying across it, the rose-tinted pink and the buds showing a little pink and the pretty green calyx, and there is nothing more beautiful in metal.

BILL ARP'S LETTER

Bartow Man Goes to Mississippi to Get "Santa Claus" Money.

HE RUNS UP AGAINST A CYCLONE.

His Audience at Ripley Fled in Terror. His Mission However Ended Successfully.

BLUE MOUNTAIN, Miss.—Some good people called me over here and I came. My wife said I had better go, for the winter was at hand and the family needed clothes and she was obliged to play old Santa Claus, as usual, and provide some Christmas gifts for the children and grand-children. That is a good part of her life and happiness—pleasing the children. She never asks for anything for herself. She don't have to. The girls tell me what she needs and I surprise her with it if I have the money, and if I haven't I strain my credit and get it anyhow. Professor Lowery called me here to talk to his college girls, for he is a noted educator and has 260 girls out here in the woods and is building up an institution that is the pride of north Mississippi. He got four other towns to join him in the call, and so I lectured in Tupelo last Monday night to a large audience in a large house and found a warm welcome.

It is wonderful how these old towns are looming up and taking on new life. Twenty years ago I was in Tupelo and I thought it was pretty dead. I had only about 100 people out to hear me then, and this time there were near 400. Prosperity has done it. Ten-cent cotton and a cotton mill has done it. McKinley had nothing to do with it. Last night I was billed for Ripley—a nice old courthouse town not far away. The evening betokened a storm and by night the lightning was flashing incessantly all around the horizon and the thunder pealed heavily. Country people became alarmed and hurried home, for everything seemed ominous of coming trouble. There seemed to be something in the elements that was brooding over us, and sure enough there was

The courtroom was about half full of people who had dared to venture out to hear me. Suddenly the storm came with fearful fury. There was an awful roaring sound from the southeast that was like the sound of many waters. It hushed the audience into a solemn silence. I did not take the platform, but waited. In a few minutes some wild, excited messengers came rushing up the stairs and called for the doctors and other help, for the cyclone had come and torn up everything in the suburbs and killed men and women and children. The night was intensely dark, but the men rushed to the rescue in haste and the lecture programme was broken up in a twinkling. Everybody hurried to their homes or to the scene of the disaster.

What an awful thing is a cyclone! What a merciless thing it is! How quickly it comes and as quickly goes, leaving swift destruction in its track. Happily it gives no warning, for the terror and apprehension would be worse than death. This morning we rejoiced to learn that nobody was killed, though many were badly wounded. Some houses were wrecked and blown away and many were unroofed and some set on fire. One man was lifted up and carried away and thrown to the ground in the woods, with only a few bruises. How strange that so few people are killed by a cyclone. It seems providential, and this morning the question discussed at the breakfast table was whether God or the devil was the author of these terrible visitations.

One said that the spirit of evil was still on the earth and was ever contending against the spirit of good, and this spirit brought famine, pestilence, fires, storms and all disasters. Another said that all these things came from natural causes, and that neither God nor the devil had any agency in them. Another quoted from Job, where the Lord delivered him over to Satan, who was going to and fro upon the earth and walking up and down in it. He afflicted Job awfully, but was not allowed to take his life. Another quoted from the Savior's words when He said: "Think you that those upon whom the tower of Siloam fell were wicked above all people? I tell you nay, but unless ye repent ye shall perish."

Professor John Fiske, a very great and learned man, has written a little book called "The Mystery of Evil." I have read it twice and found but little comfort or philosophy in it. His argument is that evil is of divine creation and designed to illustrate and exalt the good. That but for sickness we would not appreciate or enjoy good health. But for an occasional famine we would not enjoy the blessing of abundant food, and but for sin we would not enjoy heaven. His book leaves you just where it found you, and the mystery is still unexplained. We know that God loves His creatures, and that is enough. Not a sparrow falls to the ground without His notice, and He did not wish to destroy Nineveh, where there were 600,000 people and much cattle. "And much cattle." That was always a very significant expression to me.

Well, I had to come here from Ripley by private conveyance. We had a good team, but the road was fearful, for it had rained nearly all night. Mr. Pitner, an old Georgian, had the lines and did not anticipate trouble, but when we got to the river we found the lowlands flooded on both sides for a quarter of a mile, and after we crossed the bridge the horses plunged suddenly into a washout and submerged us into deep water. It flowed into the buggy and over it and up to the cushions, and for a time we were both alarmed for fear of a collapse. But we got out of it safely, and here I am with a valise full of wet clothes and no change for tonight. Here I am at the college and will have to stand up before two or three hundred pretty girls tonight.

Fortunately Mr. Lowrey is about my size and says he will lend me some garments while mine are being renewed at the laundry. Hard, hard, indeed, is the contest for freedom and the struggle for Christmas money. Cyclones and floods are pursuing me and disturbing my tranquillity. But one thing more may come which I cannot fight, and that is a Methodist revival, for like a cyclone, they are terribly in earnest and always break me up. Old Simon Peter Richardson says in his book that the Methodists are all fire and the Baptists all water, and some others are all wind. I hope they won't all come upon me at once.

But I am still hopeful and trying to keep calm and serene. Tonight I shall be inspired with the presence of these college girls and for an hour or so will be the cynosure of their beautiful eyes. Yes, the cynosure. That word comes from two Greek words which mean the dog's tail, and so I will be the dog's tail of the fair assembly. Professor Lowrey's father was the brave old soldier known as General Lowrey who succeeded General Claiborne as commander of that corps in the Army of Tennessee. He is buried near here, and I shall visit his grave. I go from here to Pontotoc, the oldest town in the state, where the Indian agency was located and the chief of the Chickasaws lived. From there I go to New Albany, and from there to my own home, where there is always a light in the window for me and many happy ones to greet me.—BILL ARP in Atlanta Constitution.

TRUE CONDITION CONCEALED.

It Is Thought That the Czar Has Slim Chance of Recovery.

From three sources of information, direct y connected with as many ministries of state, the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Associated Press, Sunday, ascertained that imperial officials are becoming extremely pessimistic regarding the condition of Emperor Nicholas, and assert that the Livadia bulletins conceal the gravity of his illness.

In spite of the notorious ease with which an alarmist rumor can be circulated in the Russian capital, many good judges believe that the chances of the czar's recovery are diminishing.

One report says that the emperor, in addition to typhoid fever, with pectoral complications, has brain fever, the result of the blow he received from a fanatical policeman during his tour in Japan; and it is even asserted in some quarters that trepanning has become necessary.

In addition to Mr. McKinley, there were present Theodore Roosevelt, vice-president-elect; the members of the cabinet, with the exception of Secretary of War Root, who is in Cuba, and Senators Lodge and Wolcott.

President McKinley's reception was most enthusiastic, and much importance was attached to his address, as it was his first public utterance since his recent victory.

The burghers, the dispatch adds, simultaneously attacked a garrison of Fusiliers on Wilge river, but were beaten off with the loss of 120 men killed and wounded.

VALUABLE MINES DESTROYED.

Landslide Engulfs Them Completely, But No Lives Were Lost.

A big landslide occurred north of Clarksburg, W. Va., Saturday morning in which five of the largest coal mines were completely destroyed and several miners' homes were shattered. The slide completely changed the course of a large creek near by.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: The Faith of Rahab—There Is Mercy For All Sinners—Cheer For All Who Are Engaged in Life's Battles—Meaning of the Sun's Standing Still.

[Copyright 1900.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage follows Joshua on his triumphal march and speaks encouraging words to all who are engaged in the battles of this life; text, Joshua ii, 5, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

Moses was dead. A beautiful tradition says the Lord kissed him and in that act drew forth the soul of the dying lawgiver. He had been buried; only one person at the funeral—the same One who kissed him. But God never takes a man away from any place of usefulness until He has some one ready to replace him. The Lord does not go looking around amid a great variety of candidates to find some one especially fitted for the vacated position. He makes a man for that place. Moses has passed off the stage, and Joshua, the hero, puts his foot on the platform of history so solidly that all the ages echo with the tread. He was a magnificent fighter, but he always fought on the right side, and he never fought unless God told him to fight. He got his military equipment from God, who gave him the promise at the start, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life." God fulfilled this promise, although Joshua's first battle was with the spring freshet, the next with a stone wall, the next leading on a regiment of whipped cowards and the next battling against darkness, wheeling the sun and the moon into his battalion and the last against the king of terrors, death—five great victories.

As a rule, when the general of an army starts out in a war he would like to have a small battle in order that he may get his own courage up and rally his troops and get them drilled for greater conflicts, but the first undertaking of Joshua was greater than the leveling of Fort Pulaski or the assault of Gibraltar or the overthrow of the Bastille. It was the crossing of the Jordan at the time of the spring freshet. The snows of Mount Lebanon had just been melting, and they poured down the valley, and the whole valley was a raging torrent. So the Canaanites stand on one bank, and they look across and see Joshua and the Israelites, and they laugh and say: "Aha! They cannot disturb us until the freshets fall. It is impossible for them to reach us." But after awhile they look across the water, and they see a movement in the army of Joshua. They say: "What is the matter now? Why, there must be a panic among those troops, and they are going to fly, or perhaps they are going to march across the river Jordan. Joshua is a lunatic." But Joshua, the chieftain, looks at his army and cries, "Forward, march!" and they start for the bank of the Jordan. One mile ahead go two priests carrying a glittering box four feet long and two feet wide. It is the ark of the covenant. And they come down, and no sooner do they just touch the rim of the water with their feet than, by an Almighty fiat, Jordan parts. The army of Joshua marches right on without getting their feet wet over the bottom of the river, a path of chalk and broken shells and pebbles, until they get to the other bank. Then they lay hold of the oleanders and tamarisks and willows and pull themselves up a bank thirty or forty feet high, and, having gained the other bank, they clap their shields and their cymbals and sing the praises of the God of Joshua. But no sooner have they reached the bank than the waters begin to dash and roar, and with a terrific rush they break loose from their strange anchorage. As the hand of the Lord God is taken away from the thus uplifted waters—waters perhaps uplifted half a mile—they rush down, and some of the unbelieving Israelites say: "Alas, alas, what a misfortune! Why could not not those waters have staid parted, because, perhaps, we may want to go back? O Lord, we are engaged in a risky business! These Canaanites may eat us up. How if we want to go back? Would it not have been a more complete miracle if the Lord had parted the waters to let us come through and kept them parted to let us go back if we are defeated?"

But this is no place for the host to stop. Joshua gives the command, "Forward, march!" In the distance there is a long grove of trees, and at the end of the grove is a city. It is a city with arbors, a city with walls seeming to reach to the heavens, to buttress the very sky. It is the great metropolis that commands the mountain pass. It is Jericho. That city was afterward captured by Pompey and once by Herod the Great and once again by the Mohammedans, but this campaign the Lord plans. There shall be no swords, no shields, no battering ram; there shall be only one weapon of war, and that a ram's horn. The horn of the slain ram was sometimes taken, and holes were punctured in it, and then the musician would put the instrument to his lips, and he would run his fingers over this rude musical instrument and make a great deal of sweet harmony for the people. That was the only kind of weapon. Seven priests were to take these rude, rustic musical instruments, and they were to go around the city every day for six days—once a day for six days—and then on the seventh day they were to go around blowing these rude musical instruments seven times, and then at the close of the seventh blowing of the ram's horn on the seventh day the peroration of the whole scene was to be a shout, at which those great walls should tumble from capstone to base.

The seven priests with the rude musical instruments pass all around the city walls on the first day and score a failure. Not so much as a piece of plaster broke loose from the wall, not so much as a loosened rock, not so much as a piece of mortar lost from its place. "There," say the unbelieving Israelites, "did I not tell you so? Why, those ministers are fools. The idea of going around the city with those musical instruments and expecting in that way to destroy it. Joshua has been spoiled. He thinks because he has overthrown and conquered the spring freshet he can overthrow the stone wall. Why, it is not philosophic. Do you not see there is no relation between the blowing of these musical instruments and the knocking down of the wall? It is not philosophic." And I suppose there were many wiseacres who stood with their brows knitted and with the forefinger of the right hand to the forefinger of the left hand, arguing it all out and showing that it was not possible that such a cause could produce such an effect. And I suppose that night in the encampment there was plenty of caricature, and if Joshua had been nominated for any high military position he would not have received many votes. Joshua's stock was down. The second day the priests blowing the musical instruments go around the city, and again a failure. The third day, and a failure; the fourth day, and a failure; fifth day, and a failure; sixth day, and a failure. The seventh day comes, the climacteric day. Joshua is up early in the morning and examines the troops, walks all about and looks at the city wall. The priests start to make the circuit of the city. They go all round once, all around twice, three times, four times, five times, six times, seven times, and a failure. There is only one more thing to do, and that is to utter a great shout. I see the Israelitish army straightening themselves up, filling their lungs for a vociferation such as never was heard before and never heard after. Joshua feels that the hour has come, and he cries out to his host, "Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city!" All together the troops shout: "Down, Jericho! Down, Jericho!" and the long line of solid masonry begins to quiver and to move and to rock. Stand from under! She falls! Crash go the walls and temples, the towers, the palaces, the air blackened with dust.

The huzza of the victorious Israelites and the groan of the conquered Canaanites commingle, and Joshua, standing there in the debris of the walls, hears a voice saying, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

Only one house spared. Who lives there? Some great king? No. Some woman distinguished for great, kindly deeds? No. She had been conspicuous for her crimes. It is the house of Rahab. Why was her house spared? Because she had been a great sinner? No, but because she repented, demonstrating to all the ages that there is mercy for the chief of sinners.

The red cord of divine injunction reaching from her window to the ground, so that when the people saw the red cord they knew it was the divine indication that they should not disturb the premises, making us think of the divine cord of a Saviour's deliverance, the red cord of a Saviour's kindness, the red cord of a Saviour's mercy, the red cord of our rescue. Mercy for the chief of sinners. Put your trust in that God, and no damage shall befall you.

When our world shall be more terribly surrounded than was Jericho, even by the trumpets of the judgment day, and the hills and the mountains, the metal bones and ribs of nature, shall break, they who have had Rahab's faith shall have Rahab's deliverance.

When wrapped in fire the realms of ether glow
And heaven's last thunder shakes the earth below,
Thou, undismayed, shalt o'er the ruins smile
And light thy torch at nature's funeral pile.

But Joshua's troops may not halt here. The command is "Forward, march!" There is the city of Ai. It must be taken. A scouting party comes back and says: "Joshua, we can do that without you. It is going to be a very easy job. You must stay here while we go and capture it." They march with a small regiment in front of that city. The men of Ai look at them and give one yell, and the Israelites run like reindeer.

Look out when a good man makes the Lord his ally. Joshua raises his face, radiant with prayer, and looks at the descending sun over Gibeon, and at the faint crescent of the moon, for you know the queen of the night sometimes will linger around the palaces of the day. Pointing one hand at the descending sun and the other at the faint crescent of the moon, in the name of that God who shaped the worlds and moves the worlds he cries, "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajalon." They halted. Whether it was by refraction of the sun's rays or by the stopping of the whole planetary system I do not know and do not care. I leave it to the Christian Scientists and the infidel scientists to settle that question while I tell you I have seen the same thing. "What!" say you. "Not the sun standing still?" Yes. The same miracle is performed nowadays.

The wicked do not live out half their day, and their sun sets at noon. But let a man start out in battle for God and the truth and against sin, and the day of his usefulness is prolonged and prolonged and prolonged.

But Joshua was not quite through. There was time for five funerals before the sun of that prolonged day set. Who will preach their funeral sermon? Massillon preached the funeral sermon over Louis XVI. Who will preach the funeral sermon of those five dead kings—king of Jerusalem, king of Hebron, king of Jarmuth, king of Lachish, king of Eglon? Let it be by Joshua. What is his text? What shall be the epitaph put on the door of the tomb? "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

Before you fasten up the door I want five more kings beheaded and thrust in—King Alcohol, King Fraud, King Lust, King Superstition, King Infidelity. Let them be beheaded and hurl them in. Then fasten up the door forever.

What shall the inscription and what shall the epitaph be? For all Christian philanthropists of all ages are going to come and look at it. What shall the inscription be? "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

But it is time for Joshua to go home. He is 110 years old. Washington went down the Potomac and at Mount Vernon closed his days. Wellington died peacefully at Apsley House. Now, where shall Joshua rest? Why, he is to have his greatest battle now. After 110 years he has to meet a king who has more subjects than all the present population of the earth, his throne a pyramid of skulls, his parterre the graveyards and the cemeteries of the world, his chariot the world's hearse—the king of terrors. I think if this is Joshua's greatest battle it is going to be Joshua's greatest victory. He gathers his friends around him and gives his valedictory, and it is full of reminiscence.

Young men tell what they are going to do; old men tell what they have done. And as you have heard a grandfather or great-grandfather seated by the evening fire tell of Monmouth or Yorktown and then lift the crutch or staff as though it were a musket to fight and show how the old battles were won, so Joshua gathers his friends around his dying couch, and he tells them the story of what he has been through, and as he lies there, his white locks snowing down on his wrinkled forehead, I ask if God has kept His promise all the way through. As he lies there he tells the story one, two or three times—you have heard old people tell a story two or three times over—and he answers, "I go the way of all the earth, and not one word of the promise has failed, not one word thereof has failed; all has come to pass, not one word thereof has failed." And then he turns to his family, as a dying parent will, and says: "Choose now whom you will serve, the God of Israel or the God of the Amorites. As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." A dying parent cannot be reckless or thoughtless of his children. Consent to part with them forever at the door of the tomb we cannot. By the cradle in which their infancy was rocked, by the bosom on which they first lay, by the blood of the covenant, by the God of Joshua it shall not be. We will not part, we cannot part. Jehovah-Jireh, we take Thee at Thy promise. "I will be a God to thee and thy seed after thee."

Dead, the old chieftain must be laid out. Handle him very gently. That sacred body is over 110 years of age. Lay him out, stretch out those feet that walked dry shod the parted Jordan. Close those lips which helped blow the blast at which the walls of Jericho fell. Fold the arm that lifted the spear toward the doomed city of Ai. Fold it right over the heart that exulted when the five kings fell. But where shall we get the burnished granite for the headstone and the footstone? I bethink myself now. I imagine that for the head it shall be the sun that stood still upon Gibeon and for the foot the moon that stood still in the valley of Ajalon.

W H KILLINGSWORTH, V Pres

REPORT OF GRAND JURY

o the Hon, J, C, Richardson, Judge presiding:

We, the Grand Jury, empanelled by your Honor, for the Fall Term, 1900, of the circuit court of Chilton county, respectfully submit this as the final report of our actions,

We have investigated all violations of law that have been brought to our knowledge, and as a result have brought into your Honor's court twenty indictments.

We have examined the court house building and find the same in good condition, except damage to one window by burglars last Sunday night, which will be promptly repaired,

We have examined the county jail and find that the prisoners confined therein have been properly cared for, except one prisoner who made his escape, we think, by assistance from outside of jail, We recommend and insist that if the Sheriff permits prisoners to be outside of cells in corridor at any time, that he use all possible watchfulness until the prisoners are returned to the cells,

We have made inquiry into the matter of our county poor, and find that the county poor-house and its inmates receive proper attention,

From reports made to us we find he public roads in good condition, but would recommend that their condition be improved.

We have examined the books of the county officers and find them neatly and correctly kept so far as we have been able to ascertain.

The bonds of the various officers afford good surity, we think.

The financial condition of our county is good. The report of County Treasurer is hereto attached and marked "Exhibit A,"

Sheriff Killgore accepted ten dollars from a prisoner, John Cleckler, and claimed that the money was received as partial security for the bond of the prisoner, and that the money will be returned, To accept what the Sheriff says about this matter as true, his conduct in this matter was not founded on anything akin to good sense. Should a like occurance take place it would not be possible to say that such error is of the head alone,

We thank your Honor for the able and explicit instructions as to our duties; and Solicitor Brewer for his assistance in the discharge of our labors, as well as Mr W H Conway for his efficient services as Bailiff, and now respectfully ask to be finally discharged,

A BILL

To be entitled an act to better provide for the working of public roads and their maintainance in Chilton county.

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Alabama: That the court of county commissioners of said county, at its first regular term in each year, shall, after giving notice for three weeks in some newspaper published in the county and by posting notices in three public places in each beat in said county, let to the lowest responsible bidder the contracts for reparing, working, changing, opening and maintaining the public roads of said county under such specifications as are hereinafter provided, provided that no contract shall be let for less than the roads of an entire beat except that where an old road is to be changed or a new road is to be opened or special piece of road working or reparing is to be done; the same may be reserved for special letting, should the court so determine.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted: That each contractor shall give bond with surity to be approved by said court, with waiver of exemption as to personality in double the amount of his contract payable to the county and conditioned on the faithful performance of the contractor; he shall furnish his own tools and implements with which to work the road for all his hands. He shall at the end of each quarter report to the supervisor of roads in his beat the number of days worked and by whom and the amount of money collected and from whom paid. Whenever he shall determine that a road needs working he shall call upon such hands as may have been listed to him as he may deem sufficient in number, for not exceeding two days work in any one week but may take instead thereof one dollar for each day's work, for which each hand is called at the option of the road hand, and if any hand shall fail or refuse to work or pay, it shall be the duty of the contractor to return him to the justice of the peace in the beat or if there be no justice of the peace in the beat, then to the justice of the peace in the beat nearest his beat and proceed against him as a road defaulter under the general laws of the State.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted that it shall be the duty of the supervisor before any contractor is settled with to inspect the work done and if the work be done according to contract, to certify same to the commissioners court; but in case such contractor has failed to comply with his contract, the supervisor shall report the probable amount necessary to be expended to have contract fulfilled, and such amount shall be withheld by the court until the terms of the contract shall be complied with or the same is determined by the commissioners court on hearing with the contract.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted that in making settlements with contractors the county shall have credit for all money paid to the contractors during the quarter, and for all work done by those subject to road duty, at the rate of one dollar per day of 10 hours actual labor or 10 cents per hour of time actually imployed. Provided, that no contract shall be valid in which any person charged with the execution of this law shall be directly interested.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted that the warning of hands shall be made by the contractor in person, or by substitute, by giving one days notice to the hands, stating to the hands on what road and at what point on the road the hands shall report for service, or may be made by leaving a written notice for same length of time at the residence of the hand, but no hand shall be worked for more than two days in any one week, unless it be for the removal of an obstruction or other casualty that prevents travel occurring after he shall have worked two days. No hand shall be required to go more than six miles from his residence in working the public roads.

Sec. 6. Be it further enacted that when a road hand listed to a contractor who has performed part of his road service removes from a beat, it shall be the duty of the contractor to furnish him on demand a written certificate showing the time he has served during the current calender year, which certificate shall be an exemption to such hand to the extent of time worked or money paid from road service in any other precinct or beat in the county to which he may remove.

Joppa, September 4, 1900

We took train at 8 a.m. for Joppa. Left a big city of Jerusalem with about 80,000, and has no ice factory, no newspaper, no street car, no water works, no coal yard. They are now digging up stumps and roots for fuel and they are very scarce. The poor use buffalo chips for fuel, as is done in some parts of the west. We finally make our way through the crowd of beggars and boot blacks to the warf, by punching them in the ribs with our umbrellas and kicking them on the shins. Dr. Ellis kicked one on the shin, and after we got in the boat be waded out in the water and called down all the curses of Allah on him in fine Arabic. We reach Haifa at 2 a.m same night; take carriage, without any rest, at 5 for Nazerith. We pass first along Mt. Carmel, where Elijah slew the priests of Baal, and through the valley of Kishon, over the hill of Oak, thence through the valley of Esdraelon, so often mentioned; see in the distance little Mt. Hermon, Mt Ebal, Mt. Gilboa, the place where Saul and his sons were slain; also Mt. Tabor is in sight. The places Jesteel, Nain, Shanen and Endor, are seen off some distance from our road. See reputed site of Elisha's tomb. Arrive at Nazerith at 12, and look at the bazars after lunch; we wanted to buy some mementoes but the shops were soddy looking in anything attractive, so Dr. Sheafe bought a bridle and I bought a new strop for my valise, it being a pair of bridle reins, and two clay pipes. We see the shop and home of Joseph and the place of the visitation. Had pointed out the mount of precipitation from which they would have thrown. It, like Bethlehem, is a very decent place for Palestine. Has perhaps 5,000 persons, and looks real pretty scattered over the hills with no regard to streets. They also show a stone here upon which our Lord eat a supper with his disciples after the resurrection. We resume journey in the evening. Pass Cana, where Captain Byeres buys a water jug of a maiden as a memento. A monastary is here too, of course, and everywhere else if I fail to tell you about it. We pass on to the Horns of Hattin, the mount upon which our Saviour preached the famous sermon. We next descend a long slope of over 2,000 feet, and find ourselves at Tiberias on the shore of much sung Galilee. We have the novelty of spending the night here in a monastary; we were up early and hired some Arabs to row us in a boat up to old Capernium, Bethsaida, Magdala. We find nothing in the world but two monks at Capernium living in a small stone house; nothing in the world at the other places. The Monks have been trying to get some excavation done at Capernium, but the lazy Arabs will not Rheumatism.

Nobody knows all about it; and nothing, now known, will always cure it.

Doctors try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, when they think it is caused by imperfect digestion of food. You can do the same.

It may or may not be caused by the failure of stomach and bowels to do their work. If it is, you will cure it; if not, you will do no harm.

The way, to cure a disease is to stop its cause, and help the body get back to its habit of health.

When Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil does that, it cures; when it don't, it don't cure. It never does harm.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

A Bishop's Retort.

At a dinner party a young man was once talking rather foolishly about Darwin and his books, and he said to the bishop of Winchester (Wilberforce), "My lord, have you read Darwin's last book on the 'Descent of Man?'" "Yes, I have," said the bishop, whereupon the young man continued: "What nonsense it is talking of our being descended from apes! Besides, I can't see the use of such stuff. I can't see what difference it would make to me if my grandfather was an ape."

"No," the bishop replied; "I don't see that it would. But it must have made an amazing difference to your grandmother!"

The young man had no more to say.

Undertook Too Much.

"George," said Mrs. Ferguson, "for heaven's sake straighten up! You're worse hump shouldered than ever."

"Laura," retorted Mr. Ferguson, "be satisfied with having married me to reform me. When you try to reshape me, you are undertaking too much."—Chicago Tribune.

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time, soon grow into fatal complications. That female trouble are filling graveyards proves this. DICK'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

N the day before Thanksgiving the boys were returning after a day spent in the wood, and all were in high spirits. They had succeeded in trapping a rabbit, which was slung over Dick Morris's shoulder in sportsmanlike fashion, for to him was due most of the credit of capturing it, and he felt very proud.

"What are you going to do with the rabbit, Dick?" Edward White asked, gazing admiringly at it.

"Yes, that's it," exclaimed Archie Rhodes, "what shall be done with it? Somebody tell."

"Why, cook it, of course," said Dick, and then a happy thought struck him. "Oh, I'll tell you what, fellows. We'll have it for dinner to-morrow. What did we catch it for if we didn't want to use it." And glowing with pride, he gave all the boys a hearty invitation to dinner at his home the next day.

"It's a go!" shouted Fred Miller, "it's a go! I'll come early in the morning so's to be on time."

With a burst of pleasure his companions joined him in accepting the invitation, and then all went home to dream of the morrow's feast, when they would partake of the spoils of the day's adventure.

* * * * * * *

"Did you bring anything from town for our Thanksgiving dinner?" Mrs. Morris was saying to her husband as Dick stepped in the door.

Mr. Morris laughed.

"Did I bring anything? Ha! ha! I brought a thirty-five pounder. I sold the colt this afternoon and turned all the money over to Pritchard, and that just raised the mortgage on our home. I tell you, I was mighty thankful, and I thought we'd celebrate the occasion 'mong ourselves with the biggest turkey we could get. How's that?" holding the fowl at arm's length.

"Couldn't we have a rabbit, too?" Dick suggested as he laid his bundle on the table.

"Mercy sakes!" exclaimed his mother, "where did you get that?"

With reluctance Dick told how in the spirit of fun he had trapped the rabbit, and how Fred Miller's father had skinned and dressed it for him, and how he had invited all the boys to dinner.

"Well," said his father, "I don't mind havin' the boys come, but plain, every day turkey's all they'll get, and that's good enough for anybody. There won't be any frills on our dinner. And look ahere," he added sternly, "I don't 'prove of your trappin' rabbits for fun."

Dick was deeply disappointed, and soon went to bed, but he couldn't sleep, and in the dead of night he stole out of his room.

"This is a nice fix," he said.

If he hadn't invited the boys he wouldn't have cared. How would he tell them of the change in the menu of the expected feast? He simply couldn't do it, that was all. By the light of the moon that came in the window he saw on the table before him the nimble little animal that he had captured lying by the side of the big turkey, which had been made ready for the oven and was fairly bursting with delicious dressing.

"Oh, I know what I'll do! There!" he said, as he unfastened the stout cord that bound the bulging sides of the turkey, scooped out the dressing, stuffed the rabbit in the ample cavity and fastened the cord again. "We'll have the rabbit, anyhow, but nobody will know till it's cooked."

Then he went back to his room.

When he awoke in the morning the first thought that struck him was that his mischievous prank might spoil the whole dinner. Yes, he was sure it would. He had never heard of such articles of food being cooked together, and he became badly frightened. He hastened to undo his work of the night, but it was too late. The turkey with its strange consort was already roasting to a nice brown in the oven. He felt very sorry, and when the boys came he took them aside and told them everything.

"HOW'S THAT?" HE SAID.

"Say, that's the jolliest kind of fun," Archie laughed, "I'm glad I came!"

"So am I," put in Edward. "What's the matter, Dick? You don't seem to enjoy this."

Dick thought only of the spoiled dinner and what his parents would say when they discovered his trick.

Soon dinner was ready, and the guests were seated. Then came the vital moment. Mr. Morris took his place at the head of the table and was about to cut the turkey.

"I wonder what he'll say when he pulls the rabbit out," Fred whispered to Archie Rhodes.

"Guess he'll wonder what the turkey swallowed," was the humorous answer, and then both laughed.

"Cut that turkey, Sam," Mrs. Morris said to her husband, "what are you waiting for?"

Mr. Morris looked around at the smiling faces of his guests, then dug the knife deep into the savory fowl and suddenly stopped. "Sairy!" addressing his wife, "you——"

The boys burst into a fit of laughter. Dick turned a deep crimson and stood up:

"She didn't do it; I did it," he confessed.

"Sairy," Mr. Morris repeated, ignor-

"OH, I KNOW WHAT I'LL DO."

ing his son, "you burned the gravy. I smell it."

"No, I didn't. There! Pass the dressing around."

With a spoon he scooped the delectable filling of bread-crumbs and chopped sausage and chestnuts out of the breast of the fowl, pleid it on the plates, which wer then passed around. Each boy stared in astonishment as he received his plate, and the meal began in silence.

"And now, boys," Dick's father said with a smile, "when you're finished with that we'll fetch in the rabbit."

And sure enough it was brought in, covered with rich brown gravy and slices of lemon.

"Won't we have a feast, though!" he exclaimed, looking at Dick.

But this was too much of a surprise for Dick, and he hardly knew what to say. When the dinner was fairly started his father arose to make a speech while Mrs. Morris tried to repress a smile.

"As this is a day of thanksgiving," he began, "we'll all give thanks. First, 'cause the mortgage is all paid now, and second 'cause by a lucky streak the rabbit got cooked alone. It was discovered just in time. When two strange feet are found sticking out of a turkey where it ain't held together 'tain't hard to guess what's happened, especially when all the dressin's left in a bowl right beside it and everythin' generally looks as if it had been done in the dark. But seein' 'at you'd captured the poor little thing and wanted it so bad, we just thought that we'd fix it up and serve it to-day, hopin' that in the future you'll never trap any more."

All laughed heartily as Mr. Morris concluded. For the first time that day Dick's mind was relieved of its great burden and he joined in the merry laughter. He never heard the end of his trick, but as his parents had taken it so kindly he respected their wishes and never again indulged in the sport of trapping rabbits.—Josephine Voss, in Detroit Free Press.

An Old-Time Celebration.

This quaint account of an old-time Thanksgiving celebration has been found in the diary of a Connecticut minister, dated in 1714: "When ye services at ye meeting house were ended ye council and other dignitaries were entertained at the house of Mr. Epes, on ye hill near by, where we had a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner, with bear's meat and venison, the last of which was a fine buck, shot in the woods near by. After ye blessing was craved word came back that ye buck was shot on ye Lord's Day by Pequot, an Indian, who came to Mr. Epes with a lie in his mouth, like Ananias of old. Ye council therefore refused to eat ye venison; but it was afterward decided that Pequot should receive forty stripes save one for lying and profaning on ye Lord's Day, and restore Mr. Epes ye price of ye deer; and considering this a just and righteous sentence on ye sinful heathen, and that a blessing had been craved on ye meat, ye council all partook of it but Mr. Shepard, whose conscience was tender on ye point of ye venison."

Rhode Island Turkey—The Secret of Him.

Anybody accustomed merely to the ordinary turkey of commerce has a gastronomic revelation before him if he has not had an opportunity to tackle the fowl of Rhode Island or Eastern Connecticut. It is the food, presumably, that makes most of the difference, for, whereas, the everyday bird is encouraged to pick up a living as it listeth, the gobbler of this chosen district is furnished with all the hard corn it can eat.—Boston Transcript.

Old Time Customs.

Every one in health (except one to watch the turkey) went to meeting, and after that the invited friends came to dinner. Dinner lasted one hour. Of course supper was not of much account, but mother always had nice dip toast and some of the cold fowl cut up, and cranberry sauce and preserves and cakes and pies. After a quiet evening of social talk and party prayers Thanksgiving was ended.

Thanksgiving Wonder Ball.

A Thanksgiving wonder ball is wound of yellow wool to simulate a pumpkin. Trifling gifts, as tiny dolls, little whistles, lace pins, etc., are wound in it. As it is unwound the gifts fall out. The wool should be rolled up again as it is pulled off.—Ladies' Home Journal.

After a hearty late dinner one hardly cares for turkey again in the evening, and it is well to leave the remains of the fowl for new and fragrant dishes later. A simple "sideboard spread" is just the thing for Thanksgiving close. The buffet must be provided with the necessary china and linen; glasses, water, etc., should be placed on side tables.

THE PUMPKIN'S LAMENT

I wanted some laughing urchin to carve
Me into the form of a man,
That taken for one of the rarer race,
I might get a-past the cook on my face;
'Tis only such mortals who can.

But here must I languish, deep in the dough,
And simmer and sizzle and die.
No! I have a future beyond the pan.
I yet will get "into the form of a man,"
For here he comes now for the pie.

J. A. Coll.

The November Bird.

Of meats the chief, good rare roast beef
The English have crowned king;
The French make a course out of any old horse,
For the sauce is the principal thing.

The German heart will never depart
From sausages mit beer;
In ancient Rome, in each stately home,
Peacocks were thought good cheer.

The Russians eat, a remarkable feat,
The stuff called caviare;
The Spaniards sigh and eat humble pie,
Although it is meagre fare.

Chinese, I've heard, eat the nests of a bird
And dogs and cats galore;
But all these meats must take back seats,
When the Turkey takes the floor.

From his legs, so brown, the juice runs down,
And his breast in snowy white;
And I'm sure we'll say, "We give thanks," on the day
When the Turkey is cooked just right.

—Margaret Wentworth, in the New York Sun.

Thanksgiving For the Birds.

If you live in the country, young people, you should scatter grain under the trees near your home where you can have the pleasure of watching the birds and squirrels enjoy your hospitality. In the city a basket or box may be put on a high pole in your yard, well out of the reach of cats, or be hung at your window, where the birds will soon discover it. It is a great amusement to an invalid to watch the various kinds of birds fly in and out of the basket restaurant. For an every-day diet coarse ground oatmeal is a favorite food with the hard-billed birds, and chopped fat of any kind delights and nourishes them.

"Are you looking for me, little boy?"

WIT AND HUMOR

The Unattainable.

A man might study all his life
O'er dusty tomes with wisdom rife;
Becoming heavy eyed and gray
Through getting knowledge day by day,
He still would labor all in vain
One useful bit of lore to gain;
To learn, by reason or by rote,
Just when to wear his overcoat.

To Fit the Work.

"What kind of music," asked the leader of the mandolin orchestra, "do you think your wife will want?"

"Well," said the man who had called, "it's a sewing society of some kind that's to meet at the house. I guess any kind of rag-time would be appropriate."—Chicago Tribune.

Brevity.

"Why is brevity considered the soul of wit?" asked the man who asks foolish questions.

"Because," answered the man who makes foolish answers, "when a man is short he is much more likely to be acute. Nothing stimulates mental activity like needing the money."

Lucky Bird.

"Don't you feel sorry for a bird in a gilded cage?" inquired the sentimentalist.

"No, I don't," answered the short-haired man. "A bird in a gilded cage is about the only creature in the animal kingdom that gets its rent, heat, light, food and janitor service without its costing a cent of money or a stroke of work."—Washington Star.

CHINESE AS COLONISTS.

What They Have Done in the Philippines and the East Indies.

Frank M. Todd, in Ainslee's Magazine, writes: "In the middle of the seventeenth century one Koxinga, a Chinese chief that refused to surrender to the Tartars, invaded Formosa at the head of an army of 100,000 men, attacking and driving out the Dutch. In 1902 he opened correspondence with the Chinese in Manila, and the Spanish governor, fearing treachery, slaughtered 40,000 of them as a warning to the survivors that any more frequently doings with General Koxinga would meet with his displeasure. In the latter half of the seventeen hundreds they were massacred by thousands in Papanga Province. Despite of this Spanish method of dealing with the Chinese question there were 30,000 of them in Manila at the beginning of the century.

"They constitute an important factor of the Philippine population, often marrying native women and sending their sons to China to be educated. Rosario street in Manila is given up to Chinese shops, and many of those who have no capital invested are employed as clerks and storekeepers by merchants of other races.

"The Chinaman pervades not only the Philippines, but all the islands of the seas from Colombo eastward wherever trade promises profit. Bancroft says that the first Europeans at Malacca, Penang, Singapore, and the important island ports of East Asia and Oceanica found Chinese there before them. They have generally clung to their places with all the tenacity that characterizes the race. Their cousins have gained in this country. They are thick in the Spice lands. The British say they are excellent citizens in Borneo. They populated Singapore. There were 20,000 of them out of a population of 111,000 in Batavia in 1894. There are said to be over 250,000 of them thrifty under the tyrannical government of the Dutch East Indies, most of them with no apparent thought of ever going home except for burial purposes, because their practical business ability and ability to live without luxuries have made them dominant in trade. On their account the Australian gold diggings have had their race riots, and the Australian colonies their exclusive legislation in defiance of the diplomacy of the London government. Chinese merchants have invaded Japan, where they compete successfully with the European trader. All over the East Indian seas the union of Chinese comprador has held commerce in the hollow of its hand, and its law has been the most terrible that could be invoked to punish or to ruin the Western merchant that tried to do business without them."

A Queer Bequest.

It has always been young Squallop's understanding that he would be left "something handsome" when his uncle, a studious and somewhat scholarly man, passed off the stage of life. The uncle died, and the will was opened.

Young Squallop was indeed remembered. The bulk of his relative's means was found to have been invested in annuities, but the size of the legacy bequeathed to the young man surprised him. He opened it, examined the contents, and locked it away from prying eyes.

"I hear your uncle left you something," said an acquaintance a week or two afterward, meeting him on the street.

"Yes," he replied. "My uncle left me ten thousand——"

"I congratulate you. With such a young man may be considered to have at least a fair start in life."

"I didn't say dollars. He left me ten thousand chess problems."

It was even so. For many years the old gentleman had been making a collection of such problems, clipping them from the chess columns of various weekly papers, and as his most established possession he left it entirely to his favorite nephew, a youth who did not know a pawn from a bishop.

Life is full of disappointments, certainly young Squallop's experience will prove of incalculable benefit to those who demanded a volume will also be found of great value, the knowledge they have acquired.—Youth's Companion.

BY OSMOSIS.

Sugar in Solution Easily Passes Through Animal Membranes.

Sugar is a substance that dissolves easily and in considerable quantity in water. When in solution it easily passes through an animal membrane by osmosis, and so the question of its absorption seemed simple enough. The disease diabetes showed, however, that sugar might exist very plentifully in the blood, and yet the nutrition of an individual suffer very much for the lack of it. Something else besides its mere presence in the system was necessary to secure its consumption by the tissues. Bernard thought that the liver was active in the consumption of sugar, and that disease of this organ caused diabetes. He therefore secured some of the blood going to the liver of a living animal, and some of the blood that was just leaving it. To his surprise the blood leaving the liver contained more sugar than that entering it. After assuring himself that his observations were correct, he tried his experiments in different ways. He found that even in the blood leaving the liver of an animal that had been fed only on substances containing no sugar, sugar could be demonstrated. Even in a fasting animal the liver itself and the blood leaving it showed the presence of a form of sugar. The only possible conclusion from this was that the liver was capable of manufacturing this form of sugar out of non-sugar-containing material, or even from the blood of a fasting animal. This was the first time in physiology that the idea of an internal secretion was advanced. Glands within the body that gave off a secretion always possessed a duct by which the secretion was conducted to where it was to produce its effect. The idea that glands exist which poured their secretion directly into the blood stream had not occurred.—Catholic World.

PROXY TALKERS.

Use of the Phonograph for Political Orators Is Popular.

The employment of the phonograph as a mechanical substitute for the tired or bashful candidate is likely to be an interesting feature of the approaching general election. For some years the talking machine has played an important part in the politics of America, where in many instances the candidate has in the retirement of his own home contented himself while breathing his political views into the funnel of a phonograph and allowing the machine to do the rest on tour. In the hands of a capable agent, and under the control of a popular chairman, the meeting of electors takes place just as if the candidates were present in person, and with certain added advantages which many unsuccessful candidates will readily appreciate. For the unpopular candidate the phonograph as a clockwork expounder of political opinions is an unmixed blessing. The hostile constituency may roar itself hoarse with unfriendly criticism, it may refer to the candidate in every unpublished term imaginable, it may even want to throw antiquated vegetables at him, but the machine, deaf, blind and impervious, will go right along, steadily grinding out its proprietor's views on the war of the youthful offenders' act without even pausing to say: "Gentlemen, I am much touched," when a retired egg breaks impotently inside the funnel. By a simple contrivance the phonograph may be made to register the feeling of the audience, so that when the meeting is over the records can be sent back to the candidate, who reproduces the proceedings and perhaps feels gratified that he did not attend in person. Only one English member of parliament has so far addressed his constituents by means of the phonograph. This enterprising gentleman is Frederick John Dorniman, M. P. for Falmouth and Penrhyn.

There is a far more widespread interest in politics among the women of England than among their sisters on this side of the Atlantic. The smart set in London all take an active part in affairs. There is a Tory woman's club in the English capital known as the Primrose Dames, and a more serious body, the Women's Liberal Federation, makes its influence felt in constituencies.

Then there are large numbers of women who do not register under any banner, but they can be counted upon to forward such political questions as appeal to them.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

Salt Water Day.

Asbury Park (N. J.) Cor. of the New York Sun: The heat Saturday was decidedly unfavorable for the proper observance of Salt Water Day or the Farmers' Annual Carnival, as it is sometimes called, but about 500 farmers and their families from Monmouth and Ocean counties celebrated the occasion at Wreck Pond, between Sea Girt and Spring Lake. All sorts of conveyances were called into use, but the one most often seen was the immense canvas covered caravan. These caravans, which are found only in rural districts, served as temporary bathhouses and retreats from the boiling sun. The temperature was about 100, but it had no terrors for the pleasure-seekers. Old calico wrappers served as bathing suits for the women, while overalls and shirts answered the same purpose for the men. The bath was the important event of the day and next to it came the three-card monte men, the shell gamblers and the cane and ring men. The farmers lost heavily in the gambling devices, and several free fights were narrowly avoided. The sun had gone down when the farmers entered their caravans and started homeward. Many summer guests of Asbury Park, Long Branch and Set Girt were present and enjoyed the carnival.

Shirt-Waist Man Chased.

Fun for the Guests.

The onion is appetizing, spite of delicate noses. Served in slices with vinegar, pepper, and salt, what more savory relish may be found for cold meats or cold fish than the kitchen-lily? What salad is complete without it? What would the cook do without her jar of pickled onions? Cooking eliminates much of the ill odor, but renders the bulb less valuable as an article of diet than the raw onion is. Even the soaking in vinegar renders it less useful than the bulb fresh sliced. Every housewife knows the fried onion—that rich and savory dish—and knows also that if she would have a rich brown coloring for her gravies she can find nothing better than the fried bulb, more especially if she includes a little of the skin in her frying. This coloring is due to the presence of caramelin, a black substance identical with that found in burnt-sugar when fired for the making of "black jack," the gravy coloring, the value of which is well known to the maker of meat extracts. This caramelin is due to the presence of carbon in the onion and sugar alike.—Chambers' Journal.

Collection of Teapots.

A Chicago woman, Mrs. Helen Crittenden Adams, is the possessor of more than 200 teapots. Mrs. Adams has been about eight years in collecting this remarkable aggregation of tea receptacles and some of her possessions are extremely valuable and unique, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. She had a friend who had spent much time in the Orient and made a large collection of teapots during her residence there. This fired Mrs. Adams to emulation.

The teapots are collected from all the four quarters of the globe and each one has an interesting history. This history their owner has set down in a book, together with the date upon which the pot came into her possession. There are larger collections in the country, but few of them possess as much historic value as do those of Mrs. Adams.

PAIN OPENED HER SKULL

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story—Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, will make you well and strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a physician's prescription, formulated from a discovery after years of investigation and experiment. Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the discoverer. He can be consulted free personally or by letter.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE "NECESSARY" MAGAZINE.

The best-informed men and women in the world use the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS to keep well informed, and call it the "necessary" and "indispensable" magazine. In the busy rush of to-day ambitious men and women must know about the important questions of the month, and not only this, they want to know about them at the right time. When the whole country is puzzled over the gigantic combination of trusts, a well-informed article is printed in the AMERICAN MONTHLY, giving the facts, and its editor discusses the theory; when the Dreyfus affair is in everyone's mouth, the best story of Dreyfus and the great case comes out in this magazine.

Every month, in "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw gives a comprehensive picture of the world's history during the previous thirty days. In the departments, the valuable articles and books that have been published during the past month are reviewed and quoted from, so that the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY can get the gist of them. In every issue nearly a hundred pictures are printed, including the portraits of the men and women who are making the history of the month.

To be thoroughly well informed helps any man or woman in his or her work. A subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS represents an investment for the best kind of profit, as well as entertainment. One subscriber has just written: "Count me a life subscriber, and when you send me a number beyond the limit of my subscription and secure no renewal from me, consider it a notice of my death."

Price 25 cents per number, $2.50 a year.

ALABAMA'S SHOWING

MINERAL, AGRICULTURAL AND FOREST PRODUCTS AT BUFFALO FAIR.

Northern Capital Can Find Unusual Opportunity For Safe and Profitable Investment In Countless Ways In This Great Southern State.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo during the six months from May 1 to Nov. 1 next year will offer to the states of the Union, Alabama among the rest, an opportunity of exceptional value to place forcibly before the people of the north some knowledge of her resources. No matter how thoroughly the people of Alabama themselves may understand the facts and figures concerning the natural resources of this great southern state, in order to induce northern capital to seek investment here, a knowledge of them must be spread abroad. For example, how few whose homes are in the north understand the boundless resources of the three great coalfields of Alabama. If we can tell them that 28 of the 66 counties or more than one-third of the state, contain valuable minerals and that rich forests cover this vast mineral belt, the opportunity to do so should not be lost. How few of them know that Alabama contains enough coal to mine 10,000 tons a day for 12,000 years. The three coalfields of this state, the Warrior, Cahaba and Coosa contain an aggregate area of 8,600 square miles. In 1888 the state ranked seventeenth in coal production; in 1896 it was the fourth state in this industry and is winning largely the trade of Pennsylvania as well as opening up new markets in Europe. Throughout the coal regions of Alabama iron ore lies in close proximity to the coal. The red ore of St. Clair, Jefferson and Shelby counties has made the city of Birmingham the great center of iron manufacture in the south. Brown iron ore is found along the Tennessee river and is mined in Cherokee, Etowah, Calhoun, Talladega and Bibb counties. In 1890 Alabama was the fourteenth state in the production of pig iron; in 1896 it was third. One-third of the state of Alabama is covered with timber, there being over 20,000,000 acres of forest lands. The 15 southern counties of the state are known as the timber belt and vast stores of southern pine will make fortunes for future investors in lumber interests.

The cotton belt comprises some 17 counties, reaching from the east to the west line of the state. The dark soil of this broad belt is watered by nearly all the principal rivers, while the production of cotton has for many years been extensive and is steadily increasing.

Alabama has, indeed, a variety of natural resources of which she may well be proud, and the opportunity to display them with advantage to the many millions of people who will visit the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo certainly should not be lost.

FLOWERS AT PAN-AMERICAN.

Charming Landscape Effects and Beautiful Floral Exhibits.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next summer will possess unusual charm for lovers of flowers and of beautiful landscape effects. Perhaps in recognition of this the members of the Society of American Florists have decided to hold their annual convention in Buffalo in 1901. Chicago was anxious to win the convention, but in view of the special attractions for its members which the Pan-American Exposition will possess it was decided to meet next year in the Pan-American city. The gathering will bring to Buffalo about 1,000 delegates and their families from all parts of the United States. The floral features of the Pan-American Exposition and its landscape effects will surpass anything ever seen before by visitors to expositions held in the United States. The laying out of the grounds was done with the view of providing for such attractions, and ample space was left for courts and fountains, canals and lakes, which will be bordered with plants and flowers of all kinds and descriptions. While there will be charming scenery of this character in all portions of the grounds, an especial effort will be made to embellish the southern portion, adjoining Delaware park, at the entrance to that part of the grounds where the main Exposition buildings are situated. On both sides of the splendid Triumphal Bridge at this point will be two artificial pools called the Mirror Lakes, connecting with the Grand Canal, which encircles the grounds. The slopes of these lakes and the whole vicinity will be adorned with a magnificent outdoor exhibit of flowering plants set in the midst of shrubbery and trees in such a way as most to enhance the beautiful effect. There will be a large display of rare water plants, including the Nilumbiums and the wonderful Victoria Regia, or Amazon Lily, and many Nymphaeas not before exhibited. Applications for space for exhibits on the grounds and in the special building to be devoted to horticulture are coming from florists all over the country, and the expressed desire of the cultivators of flowers and plants to be represented at the Pan-American insures an extensive exhibition of these beautiful products of [illegible]

A Curious Combat.

A traveler in South Africa witnessed not long since a singular combat. He was musing one morning, with his eyes on the ground, when he noticed a caterpillar crawling along at a rapid rate. Pursuing him was a host of small black ants.

Being quicker in their movements the ants would catch up with the caterpillar, and one would mount his back and bite him. Pausing, the caterpillar would turn his head and bite and kill his tormentor. After slaughtering a dozen or more of his persecutors the caterpillar showed signs of fatigue. The ants made a combined attack. Finally taking himself to a stalk of grass, the caterpillar climbed up the tree and was followed by the ants. As one approached he seized it in his jaws and threw it off the stalk.

The ants, seeing that the caterpillar had too strong a position for them to overcome, resorted to strategy. They began sewing through the grass stalk. In a few minutes the stalk fell, and hundreds of ants jumped upon the fallen caterpillar. He was killed at once, and the victorious [illegible]

A Curious Combat.

A traveler in South Africa witnessed not long since a singular combat. He was musing one morning, with his gun on the ground, when he noticed a caterpillar crawling along at a rapid pace. Pursuing him was a host of ... black ants.

Being quicker in their movements the ants would catch up with the caterpillar, and one would mount his back and bite him. Pausing, the caterpillar would turn his head and bite at his tormentor. After slaughtering a dozen or more of his persecutors the caterpillar showed signs of fatigue. The ants made a combined attack. Then taking himself to a stalk of grass the caterpillar climbed up the tree followed by the ants. As one appeared he seized it in his jaws and threw it off the stalk.

The ants, seeing that the caterpillar had too strong a position for them to overcome, resorted to strategy. They began sawing through the grass stalk. In a few minutes the stalk fell, and hundreds of ants pounced upon the fallen caterpillar. He was ... once, and the victors ...

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25c.

To the Farmers of Chilton Co.:

Apropos to the question of hog, goat and sheep law now being agitated, it is our duty to write to our representative on the subject, giving him an idea of our wishes in the matter. It will facilitate his decision as to what stand to take. I hope, though, that our people will look at the question from a liberal standpoint. From those interested enough to have a good reason either way, we would like to have letters to the public, through the Banner. Every voting citizen of a county should subscribe for the county paper in order to keep posted upon such movements if for nothing else, but there are several reasons why the Banner should go into every home in Chilton county. A notice of any kind in a county paper is supposed to reach all in that county.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash avenue, Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by CLANTON DRUG CO., and D. I. DERAMUS, Verbena.

JEMISON, Dec. 3, 1900.

Editor Banner:—I saw a little piece in favor of stock laws I will try to express my opinion of it. We don't need a stock law in Chilton county; we have hundreds of acres in the county fit for nothing else but pasturage. I want to know if Chilton county is going to sit still and let this horrid thing get its clutches fastened upon us. Let every boat get up a petition against it, and come to the front with it. I want to know what the men are going to do that have got no land, but shouts that go outside and he cannot fence them all the time. In the name of God and high heaven, what will people do that have got no land to keep them on? Let the people come to the front; if they sit still they will get it. I see six men asking for it. Of course that would suit some of these six men to have it, but it wont suit the next fifty to have it. I want the people to ponder it well before it comes on them, and it will be too late then. Just think about being too late for anything. I call on the people of Chilton to think seriously about this matter? Now, of course it would suit I. N. Langston all right, but think about the rest it would not suit. If necessary I will canvass beat 2 against it. I hope that the people of Chilton will respond at once. Just take Clanton for instance; they had the same law down there that these six men are asking for. Now see where it is today. The people of Clanton and the surrounding country were all madass long as it lasted. I will close for this time. This is the first step towards the stock law in full. ONE OF THE BOYS.

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. For sale by CLANTON DRUG CO., and D. I. DERAMUS, Verbena.

The Banner is the organ of the citizens of Chilton county. Her columns have always been placed at the disposal of her to express their views on all points of interest and importance. The standard principles that were ordained to make man and keep him a high ordered being; has been well maintained and constantly kept before us by the Editor. The present good condition of our county is largely due to this fact alone. This scribe for one is proud of Chilton county—proud of the Banner, and may it ever wave o'er the land of the free and the homes of the brave.

Brother, as the new century dawns upon us, let us resolve to rally around our Banner and strive to make it the best country paper in the state. We can do this by helping to enlarge the subscription list, sending in the news, contributing articles of interest and speaking a good word for OUR paper.

The Haitian government has concluded to furnish light to its cities itself and in future will not grant concessions for this work to others but will cancel all past concessions and pay holders of them for any expenses already incurred.

In a list of the number of telephones in use in proportion to every 10000 inhabitants, Sweden leads the list, having 413; the United States has 107; Norway, 97; Switzerland, 93; Canada, 67; New Zealand, 60; Denmark, 46; Germany, 29; Great Britain and Ireland, 18; Holland, 16; Belgium, 14; Austria, 9; France, 7; Spain, 6; Hungary, 6; Italy, 4; Russia, 2; Japan, 1.

A man of the classic name of Edmund Spenser is trying to prove in the Illinois courts that a husband has the right to whip his wife. He lost his case in the lower courts but an appeal has been taken. Mr. Spenser holds that he has scriptural authority for chastising his helpmeet. The particular offense he is accused on is when he whipped his wife for not washing the mud off the buggy so he could drive to church respectably.

Maurice Thompson says that the word "hoosier" comes from "who's yer?" and that that was the inquiry of cabin dwellers in Indiana, put to those who knocked at their doors, o'nights, in times of danger. This is just as correct as the statement that Saratoga is composed of the word Sara and of the Latin word toga, which means a cloak. Both theories of derivation are phonetically fine, lingually grammatical, audibly impressive, typographically taking and amusingly apocryphal.

In spite of the vast sums expended upon irrigation works and the general development of India under British auspices, the hopelessness of the situation is expressed by an eminent Anglo-Indian authority recently deceased, who says that no compensating influences can prevent these recurring periods of continuous droughts with which large provinces of India are afflicted. Water works on a scale adequate to guarantee the whole of India from drought not only exceed the possibilities of finance, but are beyond the reach of engineering skill.

Apropos of the oft-discussed subject of limiting the number of passengers carried by street cars, are the observations of an American who went over to Europe to inspect the underground systems of Paris and London. In both places a car is supposed to carry a specified number. For instance, 36 seated and eight standing is the rule on one road. When this quota is secured the cars do not stop. In both cities this results in as many as 1000 persons congregating at a station waiting for a chance to get a car. Imagine limiting the number of passengers on a car to 44, and then endeavoring to handle the 6 o'clock crowd at the Brooklyn Bridge entrance!

A question that is of world-wide interest is raised by the remarkable record made by the Deutschland. Germany now owns the two swiftest ocean liners. Will England allow her to maintain this superiority? The matter is largely one of pride, since after a certain point increased speed means enormously greater expense of running. The English companies have found out that there is very little, if any, money in the "ocean greyhound," but the desire for prestige may prompt one of them to again try for the lead, and in that case we may see a few more minutes, or perhaps hours knocked off the passage to Europe.

A new use has been found for the kangaroo and a movement has been started in France which has for its purpose the preservation, or rather the cultivation, of this beast, which has been rapidly proceeding toward extermination. Dr. Brisson, a French surgeon, says that there is likely soon to be an exceptional demand for the animals in consequence of the success attending the use of kangaroo tendon in the hospitals. It has been employed in scores of instances to tie up the fractured bones of a man's leg, in order that he may use his knee while the bones are knitting together. Kangaroo tendon, he says, is as strong as silver wire. It is taken from the tail, and being animal in its nature is absorbed, and the leg does not have to be cut open, as is necessary when silver wire is used.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Discusses Chinese Trouble at Length.

THE LESSON IT TEACHES.

Recounts Instructions to Philippine Commission.

THINKS LARGER ARMY IS REQUIRED.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The President's message was sent to Congress to-day. The message says:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives:

"At the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new century you begin the last session of the Fifty-sixth Congress with evidences on every hand of individual and national prosperity and with proof of the growing strength and increasing power for good of Republican institutions. Your countrymen will join with you in felicitation that American liberty is more firmly established than ever before and that love for it and the determination to preserve it are more universal than at any former period of our history.

"The Republic was never so strong because never so strongly intrenched in the hearts of the American people as now. Popular government has demonstrated in its 124 years of trial here its stability and security and its efficiency as the best instrument of national development and the best safe guard in human sight.

"When the Sixth Congress assembled in November, 1800, the population of the United States was 5,380,488. It is now 76,304,799. Then we had sixteen states. Now, we have forty-five. Then, our territory consisted of 900,000 square miles. It is now 3,846,595 square miles. Education, religion and morality have kept pace with our advancement in other directions, and while extending its power the government has adhered to its foundation principles and abated none of them in dealing with our new peoples and possessions. A nation so preserved and blessed gives reverent thanks to God and invokes His guidance and the continuance of His care and favor.

TROUBLES IN CHINA.

"The recent troubles in China spring from the anti-foreign agitation which for the past three years has gained strength in the Northern provinces. Their origin lies deep in the character of the Chinese race and in the tradition of their government. The Tai-Ping rebellion and the opening of Chinese ports to foreign trade and settlement, disturbed alike the homogenity and the seclusion of China. Meanwhile, foreign activity made itself felt in all quarters, not alone on the coast, but along the great river arteries and in the remoter districts, carrying new ideas, and introducing new associations among a primitive people which had pursued for centuries a national policy of isolation. The telegraph and the railway spreading over their land, the steamers plying on their water, the merchant and the missionary penetrating year by year further to the interior became to the Chinese mind types of an alien invasion changing the course of their national life and fraught with vague forebodings of disaster to their beliefs and their self-control.

"For several years before the present troubles all the resources of foreign diplomacy backed by moral demonstrations of the physical force of fleets and arms, have been needed to secure due respect for the treaty rights of foreigners and to obtain satisfaction from the responsible authorities for the sporadic outrages upon the Philippine Islands and property of unoffending sojourners, which from time to time occurred at widely separated points in the Northern provinces as in the case of the outbreak in Sze-Chuan and Shau Tung. Posting of anti-foreign placards became a daily occurrence which the repeated reprobation of the imperial power failed to check or punish.

The President then recounts events which called forth protests from the diplomatic representatives of the powers in Pekin. Efforts to check the Boxer movement, which centered about Pekin, were met with evasive edicts from the Palace. Hostile demonstrations, aimed at no particular class of foreigners, had the sanction of the imperial forces, and the immediate counsellors of the Empress Dowager were in full sympaty with the anti-foreign movement.

OUR POLICY WAS PEACE.

"The increasing gravity of the conditions of China and the imminence of peril to our own diversified interest in the Empire, as well as to those of other treaty governments, were soon appreciated by this government, causing it profound solicitude. The United States, from the earliest of foreign intercourse with China, had favored a policy of peace, omitting no occasions to testify good will, to further the extension of lawful trade, to respect the sovereignty of its government, and to insure by all legitimate and kindly, but earnest means, the fullest measure of protection for the lives and property of our law-abiding citizens, and for the exercise of their beneficent callings among the Chinese people.

"Mindful of this, it was felt to be appropriate that our purposes should be announced in favor of such course as would hasten united action of the powers at Pekin to promote the administrative reforms so greatly needed for strengthening the imperial government and maintaining the integrity of China, in which we believed the whole Western world to be alike concerned. To these ends I caused to be addressed to the several powers occupying territory and maintaining spheres of influence in China, the circular proposal of 1899, inviting from them declarations of their intentions and views as to the desirability of the adoption of measures insuring the benefits of equality of treatment of all foreign trade throughout China.

"With gratifying unanimity the responses coincided in this common policy, enabling me to see in the successful termination of these negotiations proof of the friendly spirit which animates the various powers interested in the untrammeled development of commerce and industry in the Chinese Empire as a source of vast benefit to the whole commercial world.

AN AGREEMENT REACHED.

"In this conclusion, which I had the gratification to announce as a completed agreement to the interested powers on March 20, 1900. I hopefully discerned a potential factor for the abatement of the distress of the foreigners, whose presence for the past year had appeared to inspire the policy of the imperial government, and for the effective exertion by it of power and authority to quell the critical anti-foreign movement in the Northern provinces most immediately influenced by the Manchurian sentiment."

All pending questions were remitted to the ordinary resorts of diplomatic intercouse, "but the Chinese government proved unable to check the rising strength of the Boxers and appeared to be a prey to internal dissensions. In the unequal contest the anti-foreign movement soon gained the ascendency under the leadership of Prince Tuan.

FREET ASSEMBLED.

"Attacks upon foreigners, destruction of their property and slaughter of native converts were reported from all sides. The Tsung Li Yamen already permeated with hostile sympathies, could make no effective response to the appeals of the legations. At this critical juncture, in the early spring of this year, a proposal was made by the other powers that a combined fleet should be assembled in Chinese waters as a moral demonstration, under cover of which to exact of the Chinese government respect for foreign treaty rights and the suppression of the Boxers.

"The United States, while not participating in the joint demonstration, promptly sent from the Philippines all ships that could be spared for service on the Chinese coast. A small force of marines was landed at Taku and sent to Pekin for the protection of the American legation. Other powers took similar action until some 400 men were assembled in the capital as legation guards.

LEGATIONS CUT OFF.

"By June 19 the legations were cut off and an identical note from the Li Yamen ordered each minister to leave Pekin under a promised escort within twenty-four hours. To gain time they replied asking prolongation of the time which was afterward granted, and requesting an interview with the Tsung Li Yamen on the following day. No reply being received on the morning of the 20th, the German Minister, Baron Von Ketteler, set out for the Yamen to obtain a response and on the way was murdered.

"An attempt by the legation guard to recover the body was foiled by Chinese troops. Armed forces turned out against the legations. Their quarters were surrounded and attacked. The mission committee compounds were abandoned, their inmates taking refuge in the British legation, where all the other legations and guards gathered for more effective defense. Four hundred persons were crowded in its narrow compass. Two thousand native converts were assembled in a nearby palace under protection of the foreigners. Lines of defense were strengthened, trenches dug, barricades raised and preparations made to stand a seige which at once began.

THE SEIGE AT PEKIN.

"From June 20 until July 17,' writes Minister Conger, "there was scarcely an hour during which there was not firing upon some part of our lines and into some of the legations, varying from a single shot to a general and continuous attack along the whole line.'

"Attempts were made to burn the legations by setting neighboring houses on fire, but the flames were successfully extinguished, although the Austrian, Belgian, Italian and Dutch legations were then and subsequently burned. With the aid of the native converts directed by the missionaries, to whose helpful co-operation Mr. Conger awards unstinted praise, the British legation was made a veritable fortress. The British Minister, Sir Claude MacDonald, was chosen General Commander of the defense, with the Secretary of the United States legation, Mr. F. G. Squires, as Chief of Staff.

"During the seige the defenders lost sixty-five killed, 135 wounded and seven by disease—the last all children.

A SORT OF ARMISTICE.

"On July 14 the besieged had their first communication with the Tsung Li Yamen, from whom a message came inviting to a conference, which was declined. Correspondence, however ensued and a sort of armistice was agreed upon which stopped the bombardment and lessened the rifle fire for a time. Even then no protection whatever was offered nor any aid given, save to send to the legations a small supply of fruit and three sacks of flour.

A TEST MESSAGE SENT.

"With the negotations of the partial armistice of July 14, a proceeding which was doubtless promoted by the representations of the Chinese envoy in Washington, the way was opened for the conveyance to Mr. Conger of a test message sent by the Secretary of State through the kind offices of Minister Wu Fang.

"Mr. Conger's reply, dispatched from Pekin on July 18 through the same channel, afforded to the outside world the first tidings that the inmates of the legations were still alive and hoping for succor.

PUNISHMENT IMPERATIVE.

"For the real culprits, the false counsellors who have led the imperial judgment and diverted the sovereign authority to their own guilty ends full expiation becomes imperative within the rational limits of retributive justice. Regarding this as the initial condition of an acceptable settlement between China and the powers, I said in my message of October 18 to the Chinese Emperor:

"'I trust that negotations may begin so soon as we and the other offended governments shall be satisfied of your Majesty's ability and power to treat with just sternness the principal offenders who are doubly culpable, not alone toward the foreigners, but toward your Majesty under whose rule the purpose of China to dwell in concord with the world had hitherto found expression in the welcome and protection assured to strangers.'

MATTER OF INDEMNITY.

"The matter of indemnity for our wronged citizens is a question of grave concern. Measured in money alone, a sufficient reparation may prove to be beyond the ability of China to meet. All the powers concur in emphatic disclaimers of any purpose of aggrandizement through the dismemberment of the empire. I am disposed to think that due compensation may be made in part by increased guarantees of security for foreign rights and immunities, and most important of all, by the opening of China to the equal commerce of all the world. These views have been and will be earnestly advocated by our representative.

"The government of Russia has put forward a suggestion that in the event of protracted divergence of views in regard to indemnities the matter may be relegated to the Court of Arbitration at The Hague. I favorably incline to this, believing that high tribunal could not fail to reach a solution no less conducive to the stability and enlarged prosperity of China itself than immediately beneficial to the powers.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

The President next deals with our foreign relations. Efforts have been made during the past year in the interest of our expanding trade to conclude conventions with the South American Republics for the enlargement of postal facilities. Two agreements of this kind were signed with Bolivia. The message touches on the insurrectionary movements in Colombia. Relations with Germany and Great Britain continue friendly. The President reviews the questions growing out of the Boer war and says whatever complications arose, so far as we were concerned, came to a satisfactory conclusion.

The modus vivendi looking to a settlement of the Alaska boundary dispute has worked well. The President urges the complete establishment of the frontier line, to which we are entitled by the Russo-American treaty for the cession of Alaska.

INTER-OCEANIC CANAL.

On the subject of the inter-oceanic canal the message says that this idea has assumed a new phase. He adds:

"Adhering to its refusal to open the question of the forfeiture of the contract of the Maritime Canal Company, which was terminated for alleged non-execution in October, 1899, the government of Nicaragua has since supplemented that action by declaring the so-called Eyre-Cragin option void for non-payment of the stipulated advance. Protests in relation to these acts have been filed in the State Department, and are under consideration. Deeming itself relieved from existing engagements, the Nicaraguan government shows a disposition to deal freely with the United States by taking measures to promote the waterway.

"I commend the early attention of the Senate to the Convention with Great Britain to facilitate the construction of such a canal and to remove any objection which might arise out of the convention commonly called the Clayton-Bulwer treaty."

RELATIONS WITH SPAIN.

Satisfactory progress has been made toward the conclusion of a great friendship and intercourse with Spain in replacement of the old treaty, which passed into abeyance by reason of the late war. A new convention of extradition is approaching completion and the President would be much pleased were a commercial arrangement to follow. By the terms of our peace treaty the line bounding the ceded Philippine group failed to include several small islands lying Southwest of the Sulus. The President has directed the negotiation of a supplementary treaty whereby Spain quits all title and claim to the islands in question in consideration of which we are to pay Spain $100,000.

The President asks that an appropriation be made carrying into execution Article VIII. of the Spanish peace treaty to pay certain claims for indemnity of our citizens against Spain.

THE FINANCIAL SHOWING.

On the subject of finance the message says in part:

"It is gratifying to be able to state that the surplus revenues of the fiscal year ended June 30, 1900, were $79,527,06[illegible]. For the six preceding years there had only deficits, the aggregate of which from 1894 to 1899, inclusive, amounted to $283,022,000.14. The receipts for the year from all sources, exclusive of postal revenues, aggregated $567,240,851.89, and expenditures for all purposes except for administration of the Postal Department aggregated $487,713,791.71. The receipts from customs were $233,164,871.16, an increase over the preceding year of $27,036,389.41. The receipts from internal revenue were $295,327,926.76, an increase of $21,890,765.25 over 1899. The receipts from miscellaneous sources were $38,748,053.97, as against $36,394,976.92 for the previous year.

"The present condition of the treasury is one of undoubted strength. The available cash balance was $139,308,794 50. Under the form of statements prior to the financial law of March 14th last this would have been included in the statement of available cash gold coin and bullion held for the redemption of United States notes.

MUST INSURE PARITY.

"It will be the duty of Congress to provide whatever further legislation is needed to insure the continued parity under all conditions between our two forms of metallic money, silver and gold. Our surplus revenues have permitted the Secretary of the Treasury since the close of the fiscal year to call in the funded loan of 1891 continued at 2 per cent. in the sum of $25,364,500. And including November 30th, $223,478,100 of these bonds have been paid. This sum together with the amount which may accrue from further redemption under the call will be applied to the sinking fund.

SHIPPING.

"American vessels," says the President, during the past three years have carried about 9 per cent of our exports and imports. We think the judgment of the country favors the policy of aid to our merchant marine.

TRUSTS.

The President quotes from his last message on the subject of trusts, on which he said that uniformity of legislation upon this subject in the several States is to be desired, and that restraint upon such combinations as are injurious and which are within Federal jurisdiction should be promptly applied by Congress.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Progress in the direction of pacifying the Philippine Islands has been favorable. Our forces have successfully controlled the greater part of the islands, overcoming the organized forces of the insurgents and carrying order and administrative regularity to all quarters. What opposition remains is for the most part scattered, obeying no concerted plan of strategic action, and operating only by methods common to guerrilla warfare.

The President then tells of the appointment of a Civil Commission to go to the Philippines to open the door for the extension of a stable administration. The scope of the commission was set forth in instructions given to them April 7, 1900. Here follows in detail the instructions given the Taft Commission, which contemplated the gradual transfer of the government of the islands from military commanders to civil officers. The instructions which are directed to the Secretary of war, says in part:

"Beginning with the first day of September, 1900, the authority to exercise, subject to my approval, through the Secretary of War, that part of the power of the government of the Philippines which is of a legislative nature is to be transferred from the military government of the islands to this commission, to be thereafter exercised by them in the place and instead of the military government under such rules and regulations as you shall prescribe until the establishment of the central government of the islands contemplated in the last foregoing paragraph, or, until Congress shall otherwise provide.

Speaking of the Filipinos, whom he calls "the wards of the nation," the President says:

"The Filipinos are a race quick to learn and to profit by, with the teachings of contemporaneous history in view would fix a limit to the degree of culture and advancement yet within the reach of those people if our duty toward them be faithfully performed."

PORTO RICO.

The civil government of Porto Rico, provided for by act of Congress approved April 12, 1900, the President says, is in successful operation.

CUBA.

Relative to Cuba the President says that on July 25, 1900, he directed that a call be issued for an election for members of a Constitutional Convention to frame a Constitution on a basis for a stable and independent government in the island. The election was held on the 15th of September and the convention met November 5th, and is now in session. When it concludes its labors the Military Governor of Cuba will transmit to Congress the Constitution as framed for its consideration, and for such action as may be deemed advisable.

CABLE TO HAWAII.

The President renews his recommendation for cable communication between the United States and Hawaii with extension to Manila.

LARGER ARMY NEEDED.

On the question of the needs of the army, the message says:

"The present strength of the army is 100,000 men—65,000 regulars, 35,000 volunteers. [illegible] March 2, 1899, on the 1st of next the present volunteer force will be discharged and the regular army will be reduced to 2[illegible] 29,025 enlisted men.

The message says in conclusion:

Some few of them have learned to practice the swallowing of poison or the insertion of venomous snakes into limits, but it is doubtful if they ever do this with any wilful intention. Pending the submission of the document to the senate, which body must ratify the agreement, its terms will not be made public.

It is understood, however, that generally, Nicaragua grants to the United States government the exclusive right to construct and operate the canal across Nicaragua, including the free use of [illegible] between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, of the San Juan river, and of [illegible] Managua, as a part of the river [illegible]

Nicaragua is also to rid herself of all outstanding treaties that would [illegible] in any way to abridge the privileges to be acquired by the United States. It is understood that Nicaragua concedes to the United States authority to police the canal. Nicaragua is to receive in compensation a certain amount of the securities of the canal construction company, and although it is not now possible to learn the figure set down in the treaty, it is believed to approximate $10,000,000.

The state department has already entered into an agreement on similar lines with the republic of Costa Rica. It was because Costa Rica has established a claim to the right bank of the San Juan river, which must of necessity form about a third of the length of the canal, should the Nicaraguan route be selected and be constructed along the lines which will be suggested by the "Walker commission."

An understanding also has been arrived at with the United States of Colombia, covering the same rights and privileges for the Panama route as are conveyed by Nicaragua and Costa Rica in the case of the Nicaragua route. So the state department has already cleared the way for such action as congress may care to take in the matter of [illegible] either of the canal routes which have been found feasible.

Emperor William Still Holds Out For Punishment of Chinese.

A representative of the foreign office at Berlin has informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that Germany has not indicated a disposition to modify her demands for the punishment of guilty Chinese officials, because she does not know what the different powers want.

"Germany, above all," the official said, "wants harmony of action. Germany foresaw that the note to be formulated by the Pekin ministers would [illegible] be accepted entirely by all the powers.

We have to admit that several of the powers, including Russia, desire a change in several of the provisions. The whole matter is still involved in great uncertainty, so that it is impossible to predict what form the final agreement will take."

Captain Carl Reichmann, of the Seventeenth infantry, who was detailed by the war department to report on the operations of the Boer forces in the South African war, has reported at Washington to prepare his report and collate the information gathered.

Captain Reichmann's experience was varied and interesting. During the month of March he was with General Piet's army for several succeeding months; as he himself expressed it, he "drifted for himself" until after the fall of Pretoria, and then he joined the forces under General Louis Botha, the commander in chief in the Transvaal republic.

CHASING A FIEND.

Mob Wants Brute Who Forced a Red-Hot Poker Down Little Child's Throat.

A special, under date of Friday, says: "All day hundreds of people have walked the streets in the little town of Catlettsburg, in Boyd county, awaiting and wishing for the return of the searching party bringing back to the scene of his crime William Gibson, who so cruelly murdered his step-daughter Wednesday night by running a red hot poker down her throat.

"Gibson, who escaped hatless and coatless, has disappeared as though the earth had swallowed him up. Rumors came thick and fast during the day and kept the waiters in a frenzy. They showed that they do not intend to let the law have its course. It was reported that Gibson was captured five miles from town and that the officers had spread the report that his half brother instead was under arrest in order to throw the crowd off its guard, but it cannot be learned as yet whether this is true or not. Gibson is a much hunted man. The two bloodhounds put on his trail could do nothing since they could get no lead from the house where the crime was committed.

"Gibson is thirty-five years old. His wife was a widow and three-year-old Lillian Patrick was her only child. Gibson disliked the child. Another rumor is that Gibson is insane and is defying arrest in the hills between Boyd and Louis counties. There are several organized posses in pursuit and many volunteers in the chase."

"SUE FOR PEACE,"

Is Plea of London Paper to Government In Regard to the Boer War.

The London Statist proposes that the government should begin negotiations with Commandant General Botha and General Dewet to bring the war to a close. As the Boer leaders might misunderstand the motive of an overture from the military authorities, it will suggest that the highest civil authority in Cape Town should begin the negotiations, if not Sir Alfred Milner, then the chief justice of Cape Colony, or even J. H. Hofmeier.

This great financial journal leads up to its proposal by an analysis of the situation in South Africa, and says:

"We are losing in every way, losing in prestige and losing in life. We are seeing our South African possessions plunged into greater distress, and the opinion is gaining ground abroad that we are incapable of bringing the struggle to a satisfactory termination."

Military incompetence is alleged, and the Statist avers that military harshness should be avoided and the Boers be conciliated.

"If men like Botha and Dewet voluntarily surrender and bind themselves not to act against us in the future," says The Statist, "is there any good reason why a promise should not be given not to send them out of the country? J. B. Robinson suggests that Botha and Dewet should be invited to take seats in the legislative council that will be established. The suggestion is worthy of approval. The Boers should not be excluded, even from the beginning, from anything which can safely be given them."

NEGRO'S BLOODY DEED.

Jacksonville's Thanksgiving Day Was One of Tragedy.

Thanksgiving day was one of tragedy in Jacksonville, Fla. There were twenty thousand visitors in the city to witness the carnival. The streets were congested from early morning until late at night. In some sections there was considerable rowdyism throughout the day.

Late in the afternoon, at the corner of Davis and West Forsyth, Policeman Henry Raley arrested a negro for fighting.

A mob of fifty negroes, headed by John Baxter, son of a well-to-do barkeeper, demanded the release of the prisoner. Before Raley could draw his gun he was shot dead by Baxter.

Ex-Policeman Tucker ran to the officer's assistance and received two serious wounds in the abdomen.

Chandler Brooks, an inoffensive negro, attempted to assist the dying officer, and was shot dead.

Baxter escaped, but was arrested near midnight two miles from the city.

KRUGER SNUBBED BY KAISER BILL

German Ruler Refused to Receive Boer Ex-President Officially.

BERLIN VISIT CALLED OFF

Old Man Will Proceed Direct to Holland From Cologne.

Advices from Berlin, Germany, state that Mr. Kruger has abandoned his proposed visit to that city owing to the recipt of an official intimation that Emperor William regrets that owing to previous arrangements he will be unable to receive him. The Boer statesman, therefore, will proceed direct from Cologne for Holland. The Cologne Gazette, in an inspired communique, says:

"Mr. Kruger's visit is not agreeable to Germany, his aim being to obtain intervention in South Africa. It would be a grave political mistake, a political crime, to allow him to entertain even a spark of hope that Germany will render him any practical support."

This declaration is accompanied with reproaches, Mr. Kruger being charged with "having encouraged a useless guerrilla warfare and having disregarded Germany's advice when he still might have followed it." The press generally strikes the same note.

KRUGER LEAVES PARIS.

Mr. Kruger left Paris Saturday shortly afternoon. The Boer leader was cheered as he drove away, swinging his hat from the landau window in reply.

Mr. Kruger spent the morning in conferences with his party, only receiving three or four persons outside his followers. Just before leaving his apartments he went out upon the balcony. His appearance was the signal for warm cheering.

When the carriage conveying Mr. Kruger and his accompanying friends, who occupied separate carriages surrounded by guards, started for the northern railroad station, the same station where Mr. Kruger arrived a week previous at almost the same hour, the crowd along the streets and the people who filled the windows cheered him warmly as the cortege passed, many ladies throwing flowers toward Mr. Kruger's carriage while the men cheered and waved their hats.

At the railroad station there were a few hurried farewells and at 1:40 p. m. Mr. Kruger departed for Cologne.

Mr. Kruger arrived in Cologne at 11:30 o'clock p. m. A considerable crowd had assembled and caused a dangerous crush. No official reception had been arranged and Mr. Kruger drove to the Cathedral hotel, the crowd cheering as he left the station and as he drove along the route. The absence of an official welcome is said to have been due to neglect to secure an understanding with the imperial court, which is necessary in the case of visits of the heads of states.

DIAZ AGAIN TAKES OATH.

President of Mexico Qualifies as Chief Executive of Republic.

A special from Mexico City says: President Diaz, escorted by his military staff and presidential guards, left his house at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and passing through streets lined with troops went to the hall of the house of representatives, where he took the oath as president of the republic for the next four years.

FOUR FILIPINOS TO HANG.

General MacArthur Confirms Sentence of Death on Murderers.

At New York, Saturday, Lieutenant Hobson, United States navy, was taken from the Army and Navy Club to the Presbyterian hospital. He is threatened with typhoid fever. Lieutenant Hobson was taken ill in Washington some days ago. He immediately went to New York and put up at the Army and Navy Club. It was decided to take him to the hospital.

JOHNSTON VACATES.

Representative of Governor Samford of Alabama Takes Formal Charge of Office.

Without pomp and without ceremoney of any kind, the transfer of the office and power of governor of Alabama was made at Montgomery Saturday.

At two minutes past 12 Governor Joseph F. Johnston came out of his private office and greeted Captain T. D. Samford, son and private secretary of Governor W. J. Samford. They were closeted for five minutes. Ex-Governor Johnston stepped out with his hat in his hand and his overcoat on his arm. The oath of office of Colonel William J. Samford as governor of Alabama had a few minutes before been filed with Secretary of State McDavid.

Crowded about in the ante-room were a number of Governor Johnston's friends with friends of the Samford family, and some few aspirants for appointments under the new administration. Governor Johnston's friends crowded about him and bade him godspeed.

Captain Samford spent the larger portion of the morning in the governor's office perfecting himself in the details of his new duties. He was shown through the records and given every assistance by Mr. Chappell Cory, the retiring private secretary, and he was in consultation several times with Governor Johnston.

FIRE IN CONVICT CAMPS.

Plant of Chattahoochee Brick Company Almost Annihilated.

The Chattahoochee convict camp, located on the Chattahoochee river, about eight miles from Atlanta, Ga., was the scene of a disastrous conflagration Sunday, which destroyed almost the entire camp and entailed a loss of about $50,000 or $60,000.

This immense loss is complete, as the management carried no insurance whatever on the camp. This is perhaps the largest convict camp in the south, and almost the entire operating plant is only a mass of blackened and charred debris, displaying to view here and there masses of ruined machinery. Only the stockade buildings, the office, and two or three kilns were kept free from the ravishes of the flames.

The fire was discovered about 10:30 o'clock in the morning and the greedy flames were not subdued until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Chief Joyner, of the Atlanta fire department, was called on for aid shortly before noon and he responded with men and hose.

About twenty or thirty convicts were at work in the yards when the fire was discovered, and all of them, with the exception of a number of trusties, were immediately locked in the stockade. The stockade was placed under strict guard, and, although great excitement prevailed, no escapes occurred. The trusties and a force of free laborers assisted the firemen and did valiant work.

Captain J. W. English, of the Chattahoochee Brick Company, states that the plant will be rebuilt at once.

TEXAS' OFFICIAL VOTE.

Owing to Letharzy Ballots Fell Far Short of Those Cast in 1896.

A special from Austin says: The secretary of state has completed the task of counting the votes cast in Texas for the presidential electors on November 6th and finds results for the three leading tickets as follows: Democratic—votes 267,432; Republican 121,173; Populists 21,100. The vote falls 110,270 short of the one cast four years ago, due to the fact that it was conceded that the state was going for Bryan and little interest was manifested in the election.

Russia's Present to Germany.

Russia, it is understood in Tien Tsin, will transfer the Shan-Hai-Kwan railroad to the Germans December 15th.

JUDGE OFFERED SEAT.

Loren W. Collius, Republican associate justice of the Minnesota state supreme court, has been offered by Governor Lind, the United States senatorship made vacant by the death of Cushman K. Davis.

The man appointed by Governor Lind will hold until a senator shall be elected by the state legislature, which will convene soon.

GERMANS ARE GUESSING.

Kruger to Visit Berlin and Kaiser's Action Is Problematic.

The semi-official statement that Mr. Kruger is to visit Berlin is discussed cautiously. It is regarded as premature to predict that Emperor William will receive him. There is no appreciable sign of public demonstration, and some of the papers warn the public to beware of a policy of sentiment, pointing out that Germany is not in a position to change the fate of the Transvaal, and deprecating the manifestations which are likely to disturb

The largest stock of gold coin and bullion ever held in the United States is now accumulated in the treasury and its branches. The total has been rising steadily during the whole of the present year, and the amount is now $474,108,336, or about $76,000,000 greater than at the close of 1899.

CHINA HOLDS KEY TO THE SITUATION

For Sake of Peace Allies May Yield Many Points.

LONDON PAPERS GLOOMY

Blame Is Attached to United States and Czar's Government.

The London Spectator, in a striking article dealing with the Chinese crisis, expresses the opinion that the most recent developments at Pekin foreshadow a Chinese victory over the allies.

"The quarrel has been brought to the test of force," it says, "and force on the civilized side has proved insufficient. This result is mainly due the attitude of Russia and the United States. If China escapes with the payment of a small indemnity and many promises on paper, as seems not unlikely, since Germany and Great Britain may not be willing to incur the expenditure and risk involved in persisting in their demands, it will be equivalent to a victory for China, for nothing has occurred which will convince the Chinese that their mighty empress has been defeated or that Europe can avenge any future massacres."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post, wiring Thursday, says:

"Despite the cordial reception given Admiral Seymour, the situation is unchanged. The Hankow viceroy refuses to stop sending supplies to the court unless the Nankin viceroy will also refuse; and the latter, although he undertakes to send no more arms, says he must continue sending supplies so long as the emperor requires them.

"In fact, all our remonstrances amount to a miserable farce. We have no courage to do more than to talk. In the Chinese theater here the allies are represented by a soldier with an enormous mouth, who does nothing but talk until his career is ended by decapitation."

"The Japanese consul here," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Daily London News, "acting under instructions from Tokio, has withdrawn his assent to the consular proclamation forbidding the importation of articles used in the manufacture of war articles. This action has caused general surprise. It is rumored that the Chinese are actively purchasing arms and ammunition and the customs officials are conniving at the passage of false declarations, under the official instructions."

The Shanghai correspondent of The Times, says:

"Reports of uneasiness at Tien Tsin continue. Chinese regulars and boxers are believed to be returning to that district secretly and a renewal of trouble is feared when the port is closed for the winter.

"It is alleged that the Kalgan expedition met with a reverse and it is believed that a party of Germans who were cut off were obliged to abandon their dead and wounded."

On the other hand Count von Waldersee has telegraphed to Berlin that the German column was returning from Kalgan and would continue the march under General Gayl."

A similar reverse had been previously rumored and denied at Berlin.

FEARFUL ACCIDENT THIS.

A Roof Collapses and Results In Death Of Fourteen People.

Not in the history of San Francisco has an accident happened approaching in horrible details that of Thursday, when more than a hundred men and boys, who were viewing the Stanford-California football game from the roof of an adjoining glass manufactory, were suddenly precipitated into the interior of the building, many on top of the white hot furnaces.

The ventilator annex to the roof, on which they were perched, collapsed under the strain and without warning fourteen persons were hurled to their death. The injured now being cared for in hospitals or at their homes number eighty-three, and of these several cannot survive.

FRENCHMEN ARE SURPRISED.

Kaiser's Act In Giving Kruger the Cold Shoulder the Cause.

Emperor William's refusal to receive Mr. Kruger has occasioned surprise in Paris. Most of the morning papers make it an excuse for articles sympathizing with the Boer statesman or condemning the kaiser.

"The kaiser is no longer a modern Lohengrin," says The Echo de Paris, "but a simple disciple of Birmarck. His attitude is dictated by the interests of Germany, which he considers identical with those of England."

Strikers Confident of Victory.

There is little change in the job printers' strike in Birmingham, Ala. Numerous printers, not members of the Typographical union, have been imported to fill the places of the strikers, but the leaders of the strike express themselves as confident that they will win.

Votes Sympathy For Kruger.

The French senate Friday unanimously adopted a resolution of sympathy with Mr. Kruger, in the same terms as the resolution previously passed in the chamber of deputies.

SULTAN IS "BLUFFED."

Appearance of Our Battleship May Settle Indemnity Question.

A Washington special says: No proposition has come to the United States government from Turkey looking to the payment of the missionary claims under the guise of an order for a warship to be built in the United States. While it is hardly expected that any formal proposition of this kind will be forthcoming, it is, of course, beyond the power of the state department to prevent or interfere with any arrangement that the Turkish government may enter into with American ship builders and individual claimants. The point is, after all, to have the claims paid, and the state department officials are not very particular as to the form in which the payments are made.

A telegram from Constantinople says that the opinion is expressed that the American claims arising from the American massacres "may now be regarded as practically settled, as an irade providing for the building of a cruiser in the United States is officially promulgated."

The question of the consulate at Harpoot remains open, the porte persisting in its refusal to grant an exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton. The moral effect, however, created by the presence of the United States battleship at Smyrna, in support of the representations of the American legation, taken in conjunction with the settlement of the other claims, leads the legation to hope for an early arrangement of all outstanding differences.

MUST FIGHT ALONE.

Sympathetic Strike In Tampa, Fla., Will Not Materialize.

At an early Sunday morning, after a long session, the trades assembly at Tampa, Fla., called the general sympathetic strike off. It was decided that the striking unions should assist the International Cigarmakers' Union, in the interest of whom the general strike was called, with liberal donations from their salaries. Every line of industry will begin work except the box makers, which it was determined to keep closed. The cigarmakers will continue their struggle with no settlement in sight.

GIBSON KEPT IN HIDING.

Captors of Child-Murderer are Awaiting a Large Reward.

A dispatch from Ashland, Ky., says: William Gibson, who is charged with burning his two-year-old stepdaughter to death with a poker, is undoubtedly captured, and it is said the officers have given up the chase.

A message from Rush, Ky., says he has been captured there, and is being held for a reward. His captors are miners, and have him secreted in the mines. Governor Beckham will offer a reward of $500 but his captors will not turn him over unless the reward is raised to $1,000.

Body of Davis Entombed.

At St. Paul, Minn., Saturday, all that was mortal of United States Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis was placed in the receiving vault of the chapel at Oakland cemetery, later to be privately given its last resting place. The last ceremonies were impressive in their simplicity.

It appears that the ownership of the Isle of Pines has been adjudicated in favor of the United States, and it is also decided that a body of troops will be stationed there in the near future.

Dewet Secured Seven Guns.

COTTON GROWERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the members of the Cotton Growers' Protective Association of Chilton county is hereby called to meet at Clanton on Wednesday, December 19, 1900, at 11 a.m, for the purpose of considering what action shall be taken in the movement Every beat is requested to send delegates, and everyone interested is invited to participate in the proceedings

W H CONWAY, President
FRANK CRICHTON, Secretary.

WE are authorized to say that Col. W. A. Collier will be a candidate for delegate from Chilton county to the constitutional convention, subject to the action of the people.

THE proposed stock law for the county is greatly exercising the minds of many of our people. We have given up all the space we possibly could to our friends this week and are still unable to publish all the communications received.

Stanton, Dec. 3, 1900.

Editor Banner:—Will you allow me a few words. I presume the the stock law is being agitated in our section which I am apposed to. Now gentlemen I am acquainted with the result of this business and if you should succeed in getting your petition granted, I think you will regret the day you started such a petition. So far as my individual interests are concerned I can live with or without it, but a majority of this county is dependent upon thier stock for a living and to pass a stock law in any part of Chilton county would be against the interest of the county at large. Now as the general assembly don't know our needs why not leave it to our commissioners whom are acqurinted with the county at large Now, Mr. Editor, please let me congratulate you for the expression of your political views since our county election, as you are right.

Very truly,
FRANK MARTIN.

Kincheon. Dec. 4, 1900

Editor BANNER—I see in the Banner where Messrs. Collins and Langston and Robinson have given notice that there will be a stock law bill introduced in the legislature for this county. We do not want it, for we have timber and muscle to make the rail with. So let us get up a petition in each beat and put it down. Send each petition to our member in the legislature, asking him not to let it pass if he can help it, for we do not need it. We are all poor men and need our stock, and some of us have no land and some have no water, and cannot keep our stock if such a law is passed. The writer of this has a petition now with several names on it. Beat six don't want a stock law. Now, if we had no timber to make rails it would be different, but let them wait.

IN THE HOLY LAND

Jaffa, Sept. 4, 1900

Let me say right here, before I forget it, that all the way from Haifa through Nazareth and Cana to Tiberias is a fine [illegible] country and several large [illegible] are in here, and they are making it bloom and blossom like the rose.

We have had to eat a bread (made of barley I think) since entering this part of the country and some of us are not feeling well.

We resume our journey that evening on our return to Haifa by same route. We reach Nazareth for supper and spend the night. By next day at dinner, we are at Haifa, and take first train down the coast to Joppa, as there is no steamer going any time soon. We pass point of Mt. Carmel, next to the Mediterranean sea, where Elijah prayed for rain. We pass on the route of the poor Arabs, who must stand guard all the time in his field, or else his crop will be stolen; his rotten Turkish government giving them no protection at all. They grow a good deal of sesame in this country now.

We pass Arthlithe, the last of the crutsader castles to fall; we pass a great many in all. Next is Sarepta of the Bible. All at once in this land of no progress, no comfort, no modernness, we see on both sides of our road a wire fence. We climb a hill that is well graded, and find beautiful hedges made of locust trees. We see all kinds of fruit trees in the fields, bananas, lemons, olives, oranges, etc We see a beautiful spring inclosed in marble and we all wonder and wonder from whence comes all this. Higher we climb until the summit of the high hill is reached, and we find wine presses, one factory, water works and a nice clean, shady little town of 2500 people. Nice white stone houses; large front yards; picket fences in treeless Palestine. Happy playing children. It is the Jewish colony of the Paris Rothschild, Beth Sharmar, the Hebrew calls it; Zammarine, the Arab calls it; a rose in desolation calls it We stop here for the night; have clean beds and good food. My companions have been abusing the Jews all along. I ask them now what can they say, when the Jew is given a chance he will do something for himself. They answer with the narrow prejudice that characterizes so many. "Rothschild's money did it not the Jew." I am sorry to say I find that spirit among the very ministers of our own country.

We are up at 1 o'clock a.m. and take carriage again, as we must hurry on to Joppa to catch a steamer same evening for Port Said; we are soon out in the desert, a pure, sandy plain; my comrades all asleep, myself and the driver on the front seat, try to entertain each other in the dreary darkness of the desert.

Pity and Beauty

The most beautiful thing in the world is the baby, all dimples and joy. The most pitiful thing is that same baby, thin and in pain. And the mother does not know that a little fat makes all the difference.

Dimples and joy have gone, and left hollows and fear; the fat, that was comfort and color and curve—all but pity and love—is gone.

The little one gets no fat from her food. There is something wrong; it is either her food or food-mill. She has had no fat for weeks; is living on what she had stored in that plump little body of hers; and that is gone. She is starving for fat; it is death, be quick!

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the fat she can take; it will save her.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

ALABAMA RAILROADS.

Remarkable Development of Transportation Lines in Late Years.

Alabama has very interesting figures to show with reference to her railway development. It is hoped that the opportunity to bring this wonderful growth to the attention of the world which Buffalo will offer next year will not be lost. The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo will open on the 1st of May next and continue six months. In the great building to be devoted to transportation exhibits Alabama should occupy an important place.

Alabama really began building railroads in 1845, but progress was then exceedingly slow, and not until after the civil war were the lines extended so as to furnish a satisfactory transportation system to all parts of the state. Her numerous navigable rivers supplied to Alabama a means of transportation in earlier times; but, valuable as the waterways are and useful as they still are today in bringing to railway shipping points the products of the state, investors early saw the opportunity for a profitable extension of railway lines.

Of the 66 counties of Alabama all but two either have railways or lines planned for early completion. In 1880 Alabama ranked fourteenth among the states in railway mileage. In 1896 she held third position, having 3,624 miles. The taxable valuation of these lines is $45,496,602, and an army of 14,000 men find employment upon the railways of Alabama. Nearly all of the railways of the state are in a prosperous condition and are gradually extending their lines as the prospective business justifies new investments. The prosperity of the railways is an indication of the prosperity of the people, and the railway commissioners report a generally satisfactory financial condition, and the sources of revenue have become more permanent and reliable.

EXPOSITION NOTES.

Brief Items Relating to Progress of Pan-American Fair.

The Chittenango Pottery Company has been granted the exclusive privilege of selling pottery at the Exposition.

Frederick Law Olmstead, who advocates the abolishment of billboards because of their inartistic and unsightly character, is the landscape architect who laid out Delaware Park, Buffalo, a part of which is to be used for the Pan-American Exposition in 1901.

We have only admiration for the courage, enterprise, liberality and energy displayed by the city at the foot of the lake in preparing for the great Exposition which is to be held next year. If ever success was earned, Buffalo has earned it. The city deserves to be filled with visitors during the life of the Pan-American Exposition and to reap a rich harvest of honor, glory and substantial gains.—Cleveland Leader.

"We have never advertised the resources of our state half enough," says The Times-Democrat of New Orleans in an article upon the Pan-American Exposition, in which it urges an adequate representation of the resources of Louisiana. The same may be said of other states, and the opportunity now offered by Buffalo is of exceptional value.

The enthusiasm and interest displayed by the people of southern California in the preparation of their great display of products for the Pan-American Exposition present a lesson and an example for all citizens to contemplate. American enterprise seems to have a very high development in "the glorious climate of California." The Californians purpose to make a very large and effective display.

One of the most conspicuous features of the Niagara Falls landscape now is a mammoth sign handsomely lettered thus: "Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., 1901." There are several similar signboards placed where thousands of people passing and repassing upon the great railroads may in this way have their attention called to the great event of next year which so vitally interests all the states and countries of the western hemisphere.

Greatest Year In Athletics.

During the Exposition of 1901 at Buffalo the greatest athletic sporting carnival that ever took place in America will be held. For the purpose of this grand carnival the largest sporting arena ever erected in America is to be built. It is to be known as the Stadium and will cover nearly ten acres, having a seating capacity of 25,000. It will be supplied with numerous entrances and broad aisles, so that the comfort of the spectators will be assured. The large space beneath the seats will be used for exhibits, being the equivalent of a very large building. The arena will contain a quarter mile track and ample room for the various pageants and exhibitions of live stock, automobiles, farm and road machinery, vehicles, etc. At the western end of the Stadium is a large ornamental building, which forms the main entrance to this grand arena.

"KRUBB'S KORNER."

The owner of this Korner has again returned to it, after wandering many days in foreign lands older, uglier and we trust a little wiser in some respects. He rejoices at his return, and would be glad to see all of the good and bad people of Chilton county. I only ask don't all of you come same day, as I have not got enough to go round for dinner. I have enough yarns however to make up shortness in grubb. Come to see me anyhow and we will talk it over, and no charge for the yarns. Please remember I keep all things the farmer needs, and I will sell him

A sewing machine, a wagon, or a buggy,
A suit, a hat, a pair shoes or a knife,
Or he can call himself very lucky,
If he will just bring his wife.

LATEST TRIUMPH IN THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

Look at this immense block of granite shown at the top of the picture and think of the amount of work that must be put upon it to convert it into a perfectly round, high-polished column. Then look at the companion picture taken only a few days later with the granite already reduced to cylindrical form ready for the polishing process. The machine which works this rapid transformation is the latest triumph in the industrial world. It is called a stone lathe, and the work that it has been doing since it was installed has demonstrated that it is a success. This lathe was built in Philadelphia, and has been installed in the granite quarries at Vinalhaven, Me., where columns of many sizes are being turned out for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City. This great new cathedral is to have no less than thirty-two granite columns fifty-four feet long by six feet in diameter, which will weigh when completed 160 tons each. In addition to this it will have innumerable columns of smaller dimensions. In length the lathe that will perform this work is eighty-six feet, and when in working order it weighs 135 tons. It has swings six feet six inches by sixty feet long, and it has eight cutters. Each tool takes out about three inches deep, the entire eight cutters reducing the column twenty-four inches in diameter at one pass over the stone. The block of granite in the illustration weighs 310 tons; it is sixty-seven feet long, eight and a half feet high by seven feet wide.

Gun With a Remarkable Range

The 16-Inch Rifle and the 20-Inch Smooth-Bore Compared.

In our recent article of the new army sixteen-inch gun, we described the construction of this powerful weapon and gave some particulars of its remarkable ballistic powers. It was shown that if the gun were set up at the Battery, New York, with an angle of elevation of forty degrees, and fired with a full charge of smokeless powder, the shell would reach a maximum height of five and three-quarter miles, and range to a distance of just under twenty-one miles. With a view to showing what a vast area would be dominated by such a gun, we present the accompanying map of New York City and vicinity, from which our cosmopolitan readers may readily determine whether their nightly ride of one hour, more or less, into the suburbs would be sufficient to place them beyond its zone of fire.

By the courtesy of the War Department, we are enabled to present the accompanying photograph showing a full-sized model of the new sixteen-inch army gun, suspended above two of the largest coast-defense guns of the Civil War period. The one to the left is a twenty-inch smooth-bore Rodman, the largest smooth bore in the world. The gun to the right of it, below the chase of the sixteen-inch gun, is a 300-pounder Parrott rifle, which also is the only one of its size ever constructed, all the other Parrotts being of eight-inch, six-inch and smaller bores. The twenty-inch Rodman closely resembles in outline and relative proportions the celebrated fifteen-inch smooth bores, of which so many were used in the Civil War. The length of this gun is twenty feet three and a half inches, the maximum diameter five feet four inches, the diameter of the muzzle is two feet ten inches, and the total weight 115,200 pounds. For the sake of comparison we recapitulate some figures of the new sixteen-inch army rifle as follows: The length of the gun is forty-nine feet 2.9 inches, the maximum diameter at breech five feet, and at muzzle two feet four inches, and the weight of the finished gun 300,000 pounds. The weight of the shot for the twenty-inch smooth-bore was about 1000 pounds, whereas the shell for the sixteen-inch gun will weigh 2370 pounds.—Scientific American.

Facts About Switzerland.

Switzerland enjoys the unenviable distinction of having a larger percentage of lunatics than any other country.

In Switzerland a favorite dish is boiled chestnuts mashed fine and served with whipped cream.

In proportion to its size, Switzerland has more inns than any other country in the world. The entertainment of tourists has become the chief industry of the land, and has been officially computed to bring in $23,000,000 a year.

Little Switzerland comes up with 125,000 men, of whom 102,507 are infantry, 3758 cavalry and 21,632 artillery. The cost of her army annually is about $3,750,000.

The waterfalls of Switzerland are being rapidly utilized for the driving of electric dynamos, and it is rare to find a place of any size which is not well lighted by the power of some mountain stream.

The longest tunnel in the world is that of St. Gothard, on the line of the railroad between Milan and Lucerne. It is nine and a quarter miles in length and cost over $45,000,000.—Stray Stories.

The Game of German East Africa.

The Governor of German East Africa reports to the Foreign Office in Berlin that whilst elephants have almost disappeared from the districts under his control, hippopotami, lions, and leopards of every species abound. He says that the plantation employes have to take the greatest care in protecting themselves against night attacks of these animals.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS:

Canapes of Asparagus.

Scrape and wash well a fresh bunch of asparagus; separate the stalks, tying them in small bunches, and boil eighteen minutes in boiling water, to which one-half tablespoonful of salt has been added. When done remove at once, as they quickly become water-soaked and lose their flavor. Drain in a warm towel, and cut in lengths of four inches long. Serve on canapes made of dry bread with sauce mousseline.

Sauce Mousseline: Put over a very slow fire in a small saucepan the yolks of three eggs, being careful to remove every particle of the white; stir constantly with a wooden spoon; as soon as it begins to thicken smoothly add one teaspoonful of butter, and after the butter is melted a second teaspoonful, and so on until six teaspoonfuls of butter have been used, the stirring being constant. Have a half-pint of whipped cream ready, add it to the sauce little by little, stirring all the time, until the quality is exhausted. Serve at once in a round sauce-boat.—Harper's Bazar.

The Model Kitchen.

The model kitchen should have the walls tiled, but if this is not possible, have a high dado of oilcloth with a pretty varnished paper above, representing tiles; blue and white always look cool and clean.

Linoleum or cork carpet is the best covering for the floor, and this must be a good one, as it will get hard wear.

A good roomy dresser with cupboards underneath and drawers for holding clothes, etc., should occupy one side of the kitchen.

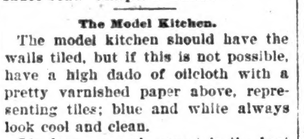
Another very useful thing is a drying rail for drying and airing the clothes; this can be raised and lowered by pulleys, and is quite out of the way of the cook's head.

A good clock should be in the kitchen, also a slate for writing down orders, plenty of hooks for hanging up things, and if there is no sitting room for the maids several easy chairs will be necessary; a table cover to put on in the afternoon, and a shelf or small table for holding books, newspapers, workboxes, writing materials, etc.

If the pastry is made in the kitchen, a marble slab should be fixed in the coolest part, and a mortar with a pestle attached will be found very useful.

An Afternoon Tea.

There is nothing particularly novel about an afternoon tea. But then "old friends are best," after all, and there is many a nicer thing in the world than a so-called "novelty." Novelty in entertaining is very apt to degenerate into something rather bizarre or at best mildly idiotic. It is a matter for thankfulness that we are in no danger of losing "afternoon tea," for it forms an excellent excuse for going to other people's houses or for inviting friends to one's own. Without tea, systematic conversation, or gossip, if you will, would be impracticable, or would flag for want of sustenance. Moreover, tea, if it comes at the opportune moment, as it does in well regulated households, serves to fill up those unfortunate gaps in conversation which are otherwise so hopeless if the acquaintance is but newly made. That there need be no lack of variety is manifest. Dainty little sandwiches are always acceptable; these can be made of apricot or any other jam, honey, lettuce, celery and watercress, cream or chocolate. For the latter the chocolate should be grated very finely; the bread must be cut thinly and then be well buttered; the chocolate should then be sprinkled between the layers. If celery or watercress are used, they must first be chopped slightly.



HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

Baked Oysters on Toast—Wash and drain the oysters; place them in a buttered dish; season with pepper, salt and a little mace; dot with bits of butter and bake until the edges ruffle. Have ready some nicely buttered squares of toast, lay them on a platter and pour the oysters over them. There will be plenty of juice.

Jellied Fresh Fruit—Jellied fresh fruit of any kind, except pineapple, may be made with a basis of lemon jelly. If there is sufficient fruit to loosely fill the wetted mold the jelly may be poured in as soon as cold. If two or more kinds are used and a pattern is to be formed on the bottom and sides the mold should be partly imbedded in cracked ice and each layer allowed to stand until the jelly stiffens.

Swedish Rolls—Take enough light dough to make a small loaf, roll out one-fourth of an inch thick, spread with one tablespoonful of soft butter, sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a half-teaspoonful of cinnamon and a third of a cup of cleaned dried currants. Roll like jelly roll, cut in one-half inch slices, lay flat in a greased breadpan, put in a warm place for one-half hour to rise and bake twelve to fifteen minutes in a moderate oven.

SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL.

The powerful artesian wells of South Dakota, which are such an interesting feature of that country, have been so multiplied in number that the power developed by them is becoming greatly reduced. The source of this water supply is not fully known, though it is generally supposed to come from the Missouri River in the vicinity of Great Falls, Mont.

During the recent solar eclipse the sensitive pianta of the Madrid Botanical Garden were seen to move their leaves spontaneously, and acacias from New Holland did the like. The oriental poppy and some other plants closed their flowers, whereas the Calandrinia and others opened their corallas during the darkness and shut them with returning day.

An enterprising German firm has succeeded in making luminous paint not only in the familiar yellowish white, but in pure white, blue, red, green, violet and gray, so that objects intended for use in the day time may have, by this process, a suitable and agreeable color. These colors are called by the inventors fluorescent. They are being successfully used on letter boxes and many other objects desired to be conspicuous at night.

Professor Sebrero, of Turin, suggests that an eel or two kept in a cistern or well will keep the water pure. They devour nearly everything that comes in their way, and even the animalcules do not escape. This seems to be the old-fashioned notion revamped, for it is no uncommon belief in the country that a fish in the spring keeps the water pure. It is an important fact, however, that the plan is recommended by a high scientific authority.

A product called "cork tiling" has recently been placed upon the market, and is giving excellent satisfaction as flooring. Besides being noiseless, waterproof, warm and germ-proof, it is capable of withstanding severe usage. By varying the degree of compression and modifying the manufacturing process slightly, sheets of cork different in color and density are obtained, which, when sawed and finished in the form of panels, can be used for wainscoting alone, or in connection with cork tile floors.

A series of experiments has been carried on in Russia recently on plant life as referred to electricity. They were on three different lines, one being a repetition of the well-known one showing that electrified seeds germinate more rapidly and give better crops than those that have not been so treated. The next experiment was burying in the soil one copper and one zinc plate between which electricity was allowed to pass. It was found that potatoes and roots grown in the space electrified gave crops three times heavier than those not so treated. In his third test, M. Spyeshneff, the investigator, started out on original lines. He placed on his experimental plat, about ten yards apart, wooden posts surmounted with metallic aigrettes connected by wires, so as to cultivate his plants under a network of wires. One of the most striking results was that the growth and ripening of the barley crop was accelerated by twelve days. The cost of the process would prevent its use in a practical way by farmers, but it is believed that it might be adopted with advantage in hot-houses.

Against Alliteration.

Silent serenity sat supreme in the pretty pink parlor of sweet, snuggling Sally's happy Harlem home. The miserable moment of midnight made militant Mortimer Mountjoy move.

Softly squeezing sweet, snuggling Sally's sylph-like sixteen inch sash, he dared to do homage to her lovely lips in the delicious darkness. Luminous lamps lighted the harmonious hallway, but blissful blackness blessed the babes in the pretty pink parlor.

Suddenly stole on this sumptuously sighing, sibilant scene a sad and sorrowful sound. The dire and dreaded voluminous voice of the soft, snuggling Sally's paternal parent, cruel and coarse, was heard in the hallway.

From the top of the tall, steep stairway he roared rumblingly:

"Tell me the time!"

Sweet, soft, snuggling, snickering Sally sought sanctuary, sylphlike and simple. Sighing, she said, glancing gracefully at the ancient, ancestral, artistic and amiable anachronism in the humble, harmonious hallway:

"Please, precious popper, ten ticks to ten by the timepiece."

"So," snapped the sneering and snarling old cynic, "when that diddering dude departs start the clock."

This was the terrible time of twelve thirty-two.

An ancient, ancestral anachronism was again allowed to accelerate the approximation of its hands in the humble, harmonious hallway to the zanyistic zenith at twelve thirty-three. Meanwhile, mournful, militant Mortimer Mountjoy miserably made movements, meandering meekly to mother in the mild midwinter morning.—New York Herald.

Aluminum Pontoon Boats.

The use of pontoon boats made of aluminum for the construction of flying bridges for armies was suggested some years ago, but recently a practical test of material of this kind was made by the engineer section of one of the Austrian dragoon regiments stationed at Stockerau, near Vienna, with very satisfactory results. The special pontoon used had a carrying capacity of 11,000 pounds. These pontoon boats are transported on specially constructed wagons, and can be taken over the most difficult country and at any rate of march the column may demand.

REV DR. TALMAGE

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY.

Subject: Spirit of Unrest—It is the Cause of Much Unhappiness—Need of the Church and the World is More Stability—Stop Gadding About.

[Copyright, 1896.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—From an unusual text Dr. Talmage in this discourse rebukes the spirit of unrest which characterizes so many people, and shows them the happiness and usefulness to be found in stability; text, Jeremiah ii, 36, "Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way?"

Homely is the illustration by which this prophet of tears deplores the vacillation of the nation to whom he wrote. Now they wanted alliance with Egypt and now with Assyria and now with Babylon, and now they did not know what they wanted, and the behavior of the nation reminded the prophet of a man or woman who, not satisfied with home life, goes from place to place gadding about, as we say, never settled anywhere or in anything, and he cries out to them, "Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way?"

Well, the world has now as many gadabouts as it had, in Bible times, and I think that that race of people is more numerous now than it ever was—gadabouts among occupations, among religious theories, among churches, among neighborhoods—and one of the greatest wants of the church and the world is more steadfastness and more fixedness of purpose.

It was no small question that Pharaoh put to Jacob and his sons when he asked, "What is your occupation?" Getting into the right occupation not only decides your temporal welfare, but may decide your eternal destiny. The reason so many men and women are dead failures is because instead of asking God what they ought to be or do they, through some vain ambition or whimsicality, decide what they ought to be. Let me say to all young men and young women in homes or in school or college, do not go gadding about among occupations and professions to find what you are fitted for, but make humble and direct appeal to God for direction.

While seeking divine guidance in your selection of a lifetime sphere examine your own temperament. The phrenologist will tell you your mental proclivities. The physiologist will tell you your physical temper ment. Your enemies will tell you your weaknesses. If you are, as we say, nervous, do not become a surgeon. If you are cowardly, do not become an engineer. If you are hoping for a large and permanent income, do not seek a government position. If you are naturally quick tempered, do not become a minister of the gospel, for while any one is disadvantaged by ungovernable disposition there is hardly any one who enacts such an incongruous part as a mad minister. Can you make a fine sketch of a ship or rock or house or face? Be an artist. Do you find yourself humming cadences, and do the treble clef and the musical bars drop from your pen easily, and can you make a tune that charms those who hear it? Be a musician. Are you born with a fondness for argument? Be an attorney. Are you naturally a good nurse and especially interested in the relief of pain? Be a physician. Are you interested in all questions of traffic and in bargain making, are you apt to be successful on a small or large scale? Be a merchant. Do you prefer country life, and do you like the plow, and do you hear music in the hustle of a harvest field? Be a farmer. Are you fond of machinery, and are turning wheels to you a fascination, and can you follow with absorbing interest a new kind of thrashing machine hour after hour? Be a mechanic. If you enjoy analyzing the natural elements and a laboratory could entertain you all day and all night, be a chemist. If you are inquisitive about other worlds and interested in all instruments that would bring them nearer for inspection, be an astronomer. If the grass under your feet and the foliage over your head and the flowers which shake their incense on the summer air are to you the belles lettres of the field, be a botanist.

If you have no one faculty dominant and nothing in your make up seems to point to this or that occupation, shut yourself up in your own room, get down on your knees and reverently ask God what He made you for and tell Him that you are willing to do anything He wishes you to do. Before you leave that room you will find out. For the sake of your usefulness and happiness and your temporal and eternal welfare do not join that crowd of people who go gadding about among businesses and occupations, now trying this and now trying that and never accomplishing anything.

There are many who exhibit this frailty in matters of religion. They are not sure about anything that pertains to their soul or their eternal destiny. Now they are Unitarians, and now they are Universalists, and now they are Presbyterians, and now they are nothing at all. They are not quite sure that the Bible was inspired or if inspired whether the words or the ideas were inspired or whether only part of the book was inspired. They think at one time that the story in Genesis about the garden of Eden is a history, and the month after they think it is an allegory. At one time they think the book of Job describes what really occurred, but the next time they speak of it they call it a drama. Now they believe all the miracles, but at your next interview they try to show how these scenes had nothing in them supernatural, but can be accounted for by natural causes. Gadding about among religious theories and never satisfied. All the evidence is put before them, and why do they not render a verdict? If they cannot make up their mind with all the data put before them, they never will. There are all the archaeological confirmations of the Bible brought to view by the "Palestine Exploration Society." There are the bricks of Babylon, the letter "N" impressed upon them—"N" for Nebuchadnezzar, showing that he was not a myth—and the farther the shovel of the antiquarian goes down the more is revealed of that most wonderful city of all time. Professor Heilprecht, of the University of Pennsylvania, presents us tablets found in the far East ratifying and explaining Scriptural passages which were before in mystery. As the builders in Jerusalem today dig for the foundation of new houses they turn up with their pickaxes the ashes of the animals that were used for burned offerings in the temple ages ago, demonstrating the truth of the Bible story about the sacrifices of lambs and heifers and pigeons. There is the history by Josephus describing on uninspired page scenes which the Bible depicts. On the banks of the Dead Sea there are pieces of the very brimstone that fell in the sulphurous storm that destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah. Make up your mind whether the Bible is a glorious revelation of God or the worst imposition of the centuries. Why go gadding about among infidels, atheists and deists asking questions and surmising and guessing about the authority and value of a book which involves the infinities? It is either a good book or a bad book. If it be a bad book, you do not want it in your house nor have your children contaminated with its teachings. If it is a good book, your eternal happiness depends upon the adoption of its teachings. Once and forever make up your mind whether it is the book of God or the book of villainous pretenders.

So, alas, there are those who gad about among particular churches. No pastor can depend on them for a single sermon after all prayer and [illegible] putting nerve and muscle and soul into its very paragraph, [illegible] mittent attendants are not there [illegible] it.

But, oh, how the gadabouts among churches! Instead of staying [illegible] prayer meeting or Sunday [illegible] fect other prayer meetings and [illegible] schools. I meet them on the street [illegible] the wrong way on Sunday evening, and I accost them [illegible] of the text, "Why gaddest [illegible] much to change thy way?"

My text also addresses [illegible] search of happiness [illegible] yonder looking for [illegible] not. Their time is [illegible] "musicales" and "promenades" [illegible] teas and yellow [illegible] and dances and [illegible] insipid of all [illegible] cheeks and insomnia [illegible] neuralgia and exhaustion [illegible] wasted lifetime.

By all means let Christian men [illegible] ter charitable institutions [illegible] as much of their time as [illegible] but the first duty of the [illegible] duty she owes to her home.

The book of Samuel gives [illegible] of Mephibosheth [illegible] we see and one [illegible] in both feet, we [illegible] accident he was [illegible] have been in battle [illegible] he may have been [illegible] less driver or some [illegible] age. So you would [illegible] became lame in both [illegible] a good reason given [illegible] tells us that when [illegible] nurse dropped him [illegible] dropped him. [illegible] got over the effect [illegible] ter the accident we find [illegible] at David's table, but [illegible] called to the fact that [illegible] pled, though so long [illegible] dropped him. And mark you [illegible] in all departments of life there are [illegible] crippled in habits, crippled in morals, crippled for all time. The accident happened in this way. Their mothers were [illegible] bouts and neglected their homes [illegible] work of training them was given over to incompetent nurses, and the nurses let them fall into bad habits, told them praying stories and gave them wrong notions of life and practically ruined them.

But Mephibosheth was taken by King David into the palace and seated at the royal table, so by the grace of God, the heavenly King these unfortunate ones may be seated at the King's table in the King's palace, though the nurses did drop them, so that morally they were lame in both feet.

Now, what is the practical lesson for this present discourse? This: Because so many have ruined themselves and ruined others by becoming gadabouts among occupations, among religious theories, among churches, among neighborhoods, I hereby resolve, that we will stop this gadding about, and waste no time in vain experiments and decisions and uncertainty, but will stay in places where we belong. Life is so short we cannot afford to play with it. The question is settled for us whether the Bible is true or false, whether your nature is immortal, whether Christ is the Son of God, whether you must be comforted and will ever be a more [illegible] your becoming. He will make this 12 o'clock [illegible] 25, the most illustrious [illegible] will ever have passed [illegible] your birth until the [illegible] the coming eternities [illegible] surrender of thought [illegible] tion and life to [illegible] Christ you become a [illegible] woman, a new soul [illegible] and God the Son and [illegible] Ghost and all angels [illegible] Seraphim and archangels [illegible]

Found among the papers of Samuel Johnson was a [illegible] with the words, "When I [illegible] stored to its use and [illegible] ment when we get [illegible] ness and gain our [illegible] a moment from which we [illegible] everything. All the glory [illegible] France vanished when [illegible] a lance extinguished [illegible] disaster that can happen [illegible] the vision of our soul [illegible] have gone wrong [illegible] the morn[illegible] and room of your life [illegible] been a moral defeat [illegible] your life a victory. [illegible] go, lost at 7 o'clock [illegible] gloriously won at 6, and [illegible] mine it is not too late to [illegible] thing worthy of an immortal. [illegible] and keep on. Do not spend too much [illegible] in tacking ship. David felt the importance of fixedness of purpose when he cried out, "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed!"

Moving Villages to a Railroad.

Village moving is an order of things in South Dakota now. Work on the moving of the villages of Old Platte, Old Selby, Castilla, Bloomington and Edgerton to points on the line now being built by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul company between Platte and Napa, a distance of eighty-three miles, is being carried on. Two or three of the villages are four or five miles from the new line. The houses are placed on skids and hauled over to the railroad by traction engines.

Negroes Who Hold Sheep Skins.

Two thousand two hundred and fourteen negroes, including 235 women, have taken degrees from institutions of every sort. All have been self-supporting, and letters from half of them report an average assessed valuation of real estate of $2,500.

"Oh! Dear I'm so Tired."

The ordinary every-day life of most of our women is a ceaseless treadmill of work.

How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system all unstrung!

One day she is wretched and utterly miserable; in a day or two she is better and laughs at her fears, thinking there is nothing much the matter after all; but before night the deadly backache reappears, the limbs tremble, the lips twitch—it seems as though all the imps of Satan were clutching her vitals; she goes to pieces and is flat on her back.

No woman ought to arrive at this terrible state of misery, because these symptoms are a sure forerunner of womb troubles. She must remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is almost an infallible cure for all female ills, such as irregularity of periods, which cause weak stomach, sick headache, etc., displacements and inflammation of the womb, or any of the multitudes of illnesses which beset the female organism.

Mrs. Gooden wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter tells the result.

MRS. J. GOODEN

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very grateful to you for your kindness and the interest you have taken in me, and truly believe that your medicines and advice are worth more to a woman than all the doctors in the world. My troubles began with inflammation and hemorrhages from the kidneys, then inflammation, congestion and falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries. I underwent local treatment every day for some time; then, after nearly two months, the doctor gave me permission to go back to work. I went back, but in less than a week was compelled to give up and go to bed. On breaking down the second time, I decided to let doctors and medicines alone and try your remedies. Before the first bottle was gone I felt the effects of it. Three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash did me more good than all the doctors' treatments and medicine. I have gained twelve pounds during the last five months and am better in every way. Thanking you for your kind advice and attention, I remain. Yours gratefully,

"MRS. E. J. GOODEN, Ackley, Iowa."

Breach of Promise Cases.

Should breach of promise cases be encouraged? On the one hand there is sometimes cruel heartlessness displayed by men, in which cases a verdict of thumping money payments is the greatest punishment to the fiddoer; on the other hand, it is not necessarily the most innocent or the most deserving who choose to go into court. The woman who trusts her fair fame to the tender mercies of her lover knows pretty well the consequences of her act, while the really unhappy and ill-used woman who has suffered most, and whose life is completely shattered, shrinks from dragging her woes into the lurid glare of the law courts. Pecuniary payments can, after all, only soothe outraged feelings, very often the least desirable feelings, those of rage and anger. The tender, confiding female loves on in spite of everything and is probably the last to bear witness against the man who has ruined her prospects. No doubt, ample damages help a future marriage, for, such is the strange irony of fate, an acquitted murderess, or a fair woman in a breach of promise case, promptly find numerous applicants anxious to claim her hand.

Cyclones of West Indies.

About 88 per cent of the West Indies cyclones occur in August, September and October. Fortunately most of them are not very destructive in character. The records in the island of St. Thomas, for example, show that in the century and a half preceding 1897 that island suffered from devastating cyclones only seven times though it is the northern and eastern islands, such as St. Thomas, Porto Rico, Cuba and the Bahamas, that are most frequently in the pathway of the severest cyclones.

THE SHOPPER ABROAD.

He Is Not as Easily Suited in France as He Is in America.

Men accustomed to American clothes are great sufferers in France. It is almost impossible in Paris to get a proper string tie. French collars are ugly in shape—too low for American ideas—and made of heavy linen. French collar buttons are beneath contempt; they are a joke, and it is an unwise man who has less than three before him when he starts to unite his thick, badly fitting collar to his worse-fitting shirt. French shirts are invariably too low in the neck and have yards of superfluous cloth in them. It is impossible to buy in France a negligee shirt with collar attached, although some of the English places will make them at a high price. Shoes are clumsy and dear and the shape of the French hat is not to be trusted. That any of these things shall be all right, one must go to the English tailors and outfitters who have established shops in Paris. These places, while never the equal of the London places, are much more expensive, says the New York Tribune. On the whole, unless a man makes periodical visits to London, he is pretty badly off in Paris so far as clothes are concerned. A woman is worse off, for she can rarely find the things she misses in the London shops. In regard to all cotton things, the Paris shops are huge failures. De. cent sheets are $3 a pair in Paris and, while elaborately trimmed and hand made, underwear is cheaper there than here. Good-fitting, nicely made garments cannot be found for a moderate price. The woman of limited means sighs for the American shops when her stock of underwear gets low. It is absolutely impossible for a woman to find a decent linen collar in Paris or a ready-made shirt waist that will pass muster. She is, indeed, fortunate if she can get anything of this sort properly made to order at a high price. French women wear cheap underwear and clumsy shoes; the footgear that a French woman shows when lifting her skirt is astonishing. Stockings are expensive and badly shaped, unless one pays the equivalent of 70 cents a pair. This refers only to cotton and lisle-thread stockings, for silk stockings are included among the luxurious articles that are cheap. On the whole, it is cotton and woolen goods that are expensive in France. These articles should be cheaper in England than they are in America, and they are; but they are so poorly made as to be impossible for American taste. In combining comfort and style with a modest price, no European country equals America.

Nobility of Ascent.

If there be no nobility of descent, all the more indispensable is it that there should be nobility of ascent—a character in them that bear rule so fine and high and pure, that as men come within the circle of its influence they involuntarily pay homage to that which is the one pre-eminent distinction, the royalty of virtue.—John Stuart Mill.

You're Gambling!

It's too risky, this gambling with your cough. You take the chance of its wearing off. Don't!

The first thing you know it will be down deep in your lungs and the game's lost. Take some of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and stop the gambling and the cough.

"I was given up to die with quick consumption. I ran down from 138 to 98 pounds. I raised blood, and never expected to get off my bed alive. I then read of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and began its use. I commenced to improve at once. I am now back to my old weight and in the best of health."—CHAS. E. HARTMAN, Gibbstown, N. Y., March 3, 1899.

You can now get Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in a 25 cent size, just right for an ordinary cold. The 50 cent size is better for bronchitis, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, and the grip. The dollar size is best to keep on hand, and is most economical for long-standing cases.

WOES OF WORKERS.

The American man or woman is industrious. Our leisure-class is small, our working world very large. Many of our leading citizens of great wealth are hard workers. Our laboring classes are found in herds and hordes in the "hives of industry." What is all this work for? In most cases it is for daily bread, in many for maintenance of others. Great numbers also work to acquire wealth. Some for great commercial prominence. Some to preserve intact a splendid inheritance. Necessity, generosity and ambition are the inspiration of all classes of industry, and the object of every one falls to the ground when ill-health attacks him.

Maintaining health is the most vital thing in the world for workers of every class, and the usefulness of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as a strengthener of the constitutional and vital powers, is beyond all question. This great remedy enters into partnership with Nature and helps human beings do their work without giving up to premature decay. The strain of work is on the minds of some, on the bodies of others, but the nourishing of either, or both, is in the nerves and blood. Nervura acts directly on the fountains of health and its strengthening power is wonderful.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves.

What does the worker do when some chronic trouble manifests itself? He takes some stimulant or something which is designed for temporary effect, and simply weakens his already overworked system. How different from this is the work of Nervura! How beautiful its support to the natural powers! Without shock of any kind its purely vegetable elements seek out the weak spots and build them up. Immediately the circulation of the blood improves and the sluggish elements are expelled. The nerves are quieted, the quality of the blood is enriched and the new and strengthening tide communicates itself to every muscle of the body.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, Electrician for the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:

"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not eat regularly, and got only a few hours' sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed.

"I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give all health seekers his counsel free of charge. His office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, and his advice may be secured by personal call or by letter through the mail; no charge is made in either case. The worn-out in body, mind, or sexual powers will get prompt help from Dr. Greene. His advice is absolutely confidential and is free to all.

THE BIOGRAPH FIEND.

Public Men's Terror, Who Threatens Peace of Notables.

The camera fiend is bad enough, and there is a continual protest against him by every person in whom the public takes an interest. But the biograph fiend, who is threatening the peace of notables, is much worse. Kinetoscope pictures are about to be put within the reach of everyone. A London concern has established a studio where people may go to have moving pictures taken of themselves, just as they now go to be photographed, and a cheap apparatus for the reproduction of films is sold, which, while not so good as those used in the theaters and nickel-in-the-slot devices yet answers the purpose. The manager of the studio says that it is in demand for weddings. The bride and bridegroom, bridesmaids, best man and all the rest are photographed while the wedding ceremony is being performed, and the happy pair and their friends have copies of the films as souvenirs of the occasion. But this is not the worst. A cheap biograph machine has been invented, by which a person may take hundreds of snap shots of anyone whom he chooses, and reproduce them. It is but natural for the owner of a few biograph strips to want other films for his machine. The worry to public people will be great. They will be the sufferers. For instance, instead of Gov. Roosevelt's children being photographed in bathing, the biograph fiend will take snap shots of their movements, and reproduce them on the screen as living pictures. The aim of the fiends naturally would be to secure statesmen in the most undignified attitudes possible.—

Our Postal System.

For the first time since 1883 our postal revenues exceeded the expenditures. In that year there was a surplus of nearly $3,000,000, the second since 1865 (the first being about $1,800,000 in 1882), and congress got so excited about it that the rate of letter postage was reduced from three cents a half ounce to two everywhere in the United States. This caused a change in 1884 of $3,000,000 from the credit to the debit side of the account, making a difference in revenues of more than $6,000,000 in one year. To offset this congress, in 1885, passed an act making the letter rate two cents an ounce, or fraction thereof, and in that year the expenditures exceeded the revenues by over $7,000,000. The deficit in 1897 was nearly $12,000,000.

THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW.

No Use For the Water.

"They tell a good many jokes about Kentucky colonels and their natural aversion to water," said a fat drummer in the hotel corridor the other night, "but the richest thing in that line I ever knew to come off in real life happened over in Alabama when old man Briggs was trying to sell his summer hotel. Briggs had a pretty piece of property in the Alabama highlands, and its star feature was a magnificent big spring that welled into a sort of basin and was as cold as ice all the year round. He had good prospects of making a popular resort out of the place, but he got the California fever and offered it at a sacrifice to a race horse man from Kentucky who had an idea that he was cut out for a landlord.

"The race horse man was a typical Kentucky colonel of the old school and a mighty fine fellow. He came down to look over the ground in person, and Briggs started out with him to point out the principal attractions. At last they came to the famous spring. 'This, colonel,' said Briggs, stopping at the edge of the basin and swelling with pride, 'is a wonderful natural reservoir of crystal pure water, inexhaustible in volume and ice cold in temperature. It is undoubtedly the finest spring in the south.'

"'Hum-m-m,' grunted the colonel, sizing up the bubbling pool. 'I reckon I'll have to have this hole filled up if we close our deal, Mr. Briggs.'

"'Filled up!' exclaimed Briggs in horror.

"'Yes, sah,' replied the colonel calmly. 'You see, I'm not a-calculatin on keeping any stock on the place.'"—

SHOT DEAD.

Jeff Davis, a negro boy about 16 years, shot and killed another negro boy, Lee Cook, at Ehrman's Mill, near Clanton last Saturday morning about 7 o'clock. It seems there had been bad feeling between them for some time and the night before they had a difficulty. Saturday morning Jeff borrowed a single-barreled breech-loading shot gun and waited for Lee to come to work. Just before the 7 o'clock whistle blew both boys were in the store near the stove, when a wordy controversy took place, and before Mr. Dunlap could get from behind the counter to make them get out, Jeff fired the fatal shot right into his enemie's face, the load taking effect in the right side of the face near the corner of the mouth, carrying away the lower jaw and killing Cook instantly.

After the shooting, Jeff threw down his gun and ran off. Saturday evening about 4 o'clock, Henry Larkin, the railroad porter, while putting up his switch lights, found the boy in the swamp just south of town, and captured him. He is now in jail.

Stanton, Dec. 11, 1900

Editor BANNER—I see notice in the Banner from different parts of the county advocating stock- law, and will say I don't think that the parties that want it have any idea what it is. Let us take a glance at it. It will keep the lazy man from splitting rails and build- ing fence. Is that all? No, that is not all! It will keep the little children of a good many poor men from having milk and butter to eat with their bread. In the name of the most Holy One what will be- come of the poor renter who has no land, and the poor widow women? There are widow ladies in this community that have not got any one to help them, and with the aid of cows and pigs they make a nice and honest living. Is there any other evils in it? Yes, it makes vile enemies of good friends; It makes communities that are at pence, and that speak well of each other, speak evil of each other. Let us reason it. I say it is to my advantage and to the hurt of my neighbors. Is it not a wrong prin- ciple in me to want something that is ruinous to my neighbors? Now, to citizens of Chilton, let us get a petition in each beat against it. I am like the Jemison man that sign- ed his name "One of the boys." I will take beat 8 and guarantee ten to one against it. Some will say, O, yes, he is talking about some- thing he knows nothing about. It means simply no stock to the poor man. W. A. WEAVER.

It was appropriate that Mark Twain should have returned home on the Minne-ha-ha.

Lockjaw is a fatal disease, but on the other hand nothing will kill a mule. Therefore when a Patterson mule contracted lockjaw the doctors considered that "an irresistible force had attacked an immovable body," and the mule recovered.

A New York minister recently took occasion to deplore the tendency toward popular amusements. "Why," he asked, "must we amuse our young people so much? Life is a place to work. We have all eternity to play in." Just how the reverend gentleman has assured himself on this point is a mystery. His ideal of eternity and its possibilities is a distinctly juvenile one.

Train robberies have become so frequent in the west that one railroad regards an investment in bloodhounds advisable. A litter of puppies has been distributed among the agents along the line, with instructions to rear them for the sole purpose of man-catching. The dogs are said to be of the best breed. They came from the Idaho penitentiary, where their parents have been employed for years in hunting convicts. It is believed by the railroad officials that knowledge of the fact that the company has the dogs will deter train-robbers through the fear of certain capture.

The teaching of agriculture in the country schools is receiving attention. It is believed that if the children of farmers are taught regarding some things done on farms, and especially where mistakes are made, they will have a desire to learn more and will take more interest in literature relating to farming. The study of agriculture in the schools will not greatly interfere with other courses and can be made more interesting if lectures are given and practical demonstrations made in botany, also showing the texture of soils, and the growing of crops, etc. It is possible that some method of instruction may be devised that will induce the young men to take more interest in farming.

Statistics seem to vindicate the educational preference of the college woman. Professor Mary Smith of Stanford university has been gathering information about her career and has made a report. The college woman marries at 26, two years later than her sister who did not go to college, but she marries better. She has good health but no better than other women. She is twice as apt to earn her living before marriage as other women are. Once married she has about as many children as other women do, but whereas 47 per cent. of the children of other women are boys, the percentage of boys among the children of college women is stated to be 55 per cent. That seems odd, muses Life, but it will hardly keep women out of college, for mothers as a rule like boys and don't object to a rather liberal allowance of them.

The selection of Melbourne as the capital of the new Australian confederation establishes another world center, which is to figure in the history of the future. The great island colony has heretofore been split up into half a dozen governments, all working in different directions. The people, realizing the ultimate destiny of Australia, have moved for confederation, which gives us an English-speaking nation in the south seas which will rival the English-speaking nation already on the American continent. Another government is yet to spring up in New Zealand, so that in time new people, speaking from new centers will control the destinies of the earth. There will be between all these governments a union of principle and of interest, born out of kindred conditions. The capitals of the old worlds will recede, and those of the new ones will come into full prominence.

Strange Species of Grasshopper.

Species of grasshopper, hitherto unknown in the island, has made its appearance in St. Croix, D. W. I., and the planters complain of the damage done to the canes. This insect is from one to one and one-half inches long; of a light brown color, and, contrary to the habits of the known species, it is able to fly. It is feared it is similar to that which made its appearance some time ago in Cuba and was supposed to have been brought over in hay imported from the United States.

NEW ARMY BILL PASSED IN HOUSE

Party Lines Were Clearly Shown in the Summing Up of Vote.

ELIMINATES THE CANTEEN

Democratic Plan For Postponement Was Not Favored.

A Washington special says: The house of representatives Thursday passed the army reorganization bill by a vote of 166 to 133. Three Democrats—Messrs. Hall, of Pennsylvania, and Underhill and Clayton of New York—voted with the Republicans for the bill, and Mr. McCall, Republican, of Massachusetts, with the Democrats against it.

The proposition which some of the Democrats attempted to commit their side to in caucus, an extension of the present temporary army until July 1, 1903, which was voted upon indirectly on a motion to recommit, commanded the votes of only about half the opposition and two Republicans—Mr. McCall and Mr. Mann, of Illinois. Many of the Democrats, however, voted against the motion because they were not only opposed to the reorganization, but also to continuing the temporary army at its present strength.

Quite a number of amendments were placed upon the table before it was passed. The liveliest fight was made upon a substitute offered by Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, for the canteen section. The substitute absolutely prohibited the sale of intoxicants at military posts. It was supported by Littlefield, Grosvenor, Republican, of Ohio; Dick, Republican, of Ohio, and Hay, Democrat of Virginia, and opposed by Slayden, Democrat, of Texas; Fitzgerald, Democrat, of Massachusetts; Pearce, Republican, of Missouri; Parker, Republican, of New Jersey, and Bartholdt, Republican, of Missouri.

Large delegations from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which is in session in the city, watched the fight from the galleries. When the vote was taken the prohibition amendment was carried by an overwhelming majority—159 to 51. Mr. Bartholdt attempted to secure a record vote in the house, but the peculiar parliamentary status shut him out. The sections designed to retire General Shafter as a major general and Generals Fitzhugh Lee and James H. Wilson as brigadier generals were stricken out.

Among the amendments adopted were those providing for fifty volunteer surgeons and 150 assistant surgeons for service in the Philippines, for thirty dental surgeons and for a veterinary corps with actual rank. The officers of the pay corps were increased eleven and of the signal corps twenty-three. The age limit was removed from volunteer officers eligible to appointment as first and second lieutenants and the provision for retiring officers who served in the civil war as of the next higher grade was stricken out.

The Hepburn amendment to provide that vacancies in the quartermaster's department could be filled from civil life or from volunteer officers commissioned since April 19, 1898, which was pending when the house adjourned Wednesday, was voted down without division.

Mr. McClellan, of New York, gave notice that at the proper time he should offer a substitute for the whole bill to continue in force the present law for a provisional army.

EIGHT DROWNED.

Ore Barge On Lake Erie Goes to the Bottom In Fierce Gale.

In the midst of one of the most bitter gales that ever swept Lake Erie, the iron ore barge Charles Foster, in tow of the Iron Duke, went to the bottom at 4 o'clock Sunday morning, ten miles off Erie, Pa., and eight persons were drowned, as follows:

Captain John Bridge, of Cleveland; first mate, name unknown; second mate, name unknown; Seaman Robert Wood, of Port Austin, Mich.; Seaman, William Kelly, of Port Austin, Mich.; Cook Mrs. May, of Detroit; two unknown deck hands.

The Charles Foster was one of the fleet of James Corrigan, of Cleveland, and for two months has been running from Duluth to Erie with iron ore. Her cargo consisted of 1,500 tons of ore.

Captain Ashley, of the Iron Duke, made Erie in safety. When asked for an opinion as to the cause of the sinking of the Foster, Captain Ashley said that he could not tell.

"Apparently everything was all right aboard her," he said, "until she took that fatal dip. There had not been a single signal of distress from her up to that time."

There is from 80 to 100 feet of water where she went down, and there is little hope of ever being able to locate the place. The Foster was valued at $19,000, but there was no insurance, as it elapsed December 1st. The cargo was not insured. The life saving crew took a trip out Sunday, but could find no traces of wreckage.

A detachment of 26 men from Co. A, 29th United States infantry, composed almost exclusively of Atlanta, Ga., boys, have had a brush with Filipinos in the vicinity of Boac, Marinduque Island, P. I., while commanded by First Sergeant James T. Ellis.

In addition to the loss of Corporals Jacob Spere and Clarence A. Felts, who were captured by the enemy, several men were wounded, among them being Sergeant Ellis, whose right arm was penetrated by a bullet and the bone fractured. Corporal Jefferson A. Upshaw was shot in the right side of the chest, but the wound is not serious.

Milder Terms For China Brought About By Uncle Sam.

A St. Petersburg paper, in an article evidently inspired, referring to the recent dispatch from Dr. Morrison, in Pekin, to The London Times, saying that all the credit for securing softened terms is given by the Chinese to the Russians, remarks:

"The credit for the existing entente really belongs to America. England begrudges President McKinley his just prestige because he has emphasized America's friendship for Russia."

The Russian journal regards the alterations which America has procured in the peace preliminaries as of the greatest importance.

NEGRO HANGED FROM A TRESTLE

Mob Metes Out a Horrible Vengeance On Ravisher.

BODY RIDDLED WITH LEAD

The Victim, Mrs. White, Received Fearful and Fatal Injuries.

As a result of the fearful assault on Mrs. Joe White at Early, Ga., Thursday afternoon afternoon Bud Rufus, colored, was lynched Friday night between 11 and 12 o'clock by a determined band of men.

The negro was swung from a high trestle about half a mile from Early on the Rome and Decatur railroad. The rope was tied around his neck and he was asked if he had anything to say. Rufus replied:

"Nothing, 'cept to tell you gentlemen goodby, and to ask that you tell my folks farewell."

He made no reference to the crime and said nothing as to his guilt or innocence.

Rufus was then shoved from the bridge, but the rope proved too weak and broke, the body plunging into the ravine below. The crowd then began firing upon the prostrate body. One shot struck Rufus squarely in the center of the forehead and plowed its way through his brain. His chest was almost in a pulp and one hand hung by a tendon. There is no way of telling how many shots were fired, but Rufus' body was struck fully a hundred times.

The remains were carried up the embankment and laid near the railroad track. On his breast was a placard bearing this notice:

"This is a warning to both black and white not to meddle or you will suffer the same fate.

"WE ARE THE PEOPLE."

Friday morning the body was viewed by hundreds of curious people who traveled scores of miles in buggies, wagons, horseback and walking to witness the grewsome sight.

The full and awful details of the assault on Mrs. White are as follows:

Mrs. White was picking cotton near home Thursday afternoon when the assault was made. The miscreant evidently slipped up behind her and dealt a fearful blow over the head with the limb of a tree as large as a man's leg.

He then dragged her unconscious form to the river bank and seized another large stick and beat the woman about the head and body until he thought life extinct. Mrs. White was then flung into a canebreak on the river bank. The stick he tried to throw into the water, but it was found next day in some vines. It was clotted with blood.

When Mrs. White failed to return at dusk the search began. It was over an hour before she was found, and then by a low gurgling groan coming from the canes.

Her skull was crushed in, jawbones broken and face and head cut and beaten almost beyond recognition. She never gained full consciousness, but lay in a stupor.

Bud Rufus, who was suspected of perpetrating the crime was arrested on the place of Mr. Appleton, near Early, and carried before the dying woman. She could not speak, but when asked if the negro was her assailant, nodded her head. The negro was then given a hearing before 'Squire Early and remanded to jail.

The officers hoped to get him into Rome, twelve miles distant, on a local freight train which passed that point at 6:25 o'clock, but an armed cordon of men stood grimly about the train and the effort was abandoned.

Bailiff Poole then carried the prisoner to an old out of the way house, thinking to thus throw the crowd off the track and spirit the negro to some jail.

The hope was futile, for about 10 o'clock the lynchers broke into the house and overpowered the bailiff. Rufus was carried to the trestle and met death as described.

A dispatch received in London from Johannesburg says the town has been fenced round with barbed wire to prevent the inhabitants getting food to the Boers.

MODERATE IN DEMANDS.

Both Nicaragua and Costa Rica Will Show Great Liberality.

A special to The Chicago Record from Washington says:

"Nicaragua and Costa Rica have announced their willingness to grant a lease to the United States for a period of 200 years of the territory necessary for the construction of the projected Nicaragua canal. It is understood that Nicaragua and Costa Rica will accept bonds, the value of those to be accepted by the former government to be less than $6,000,000 and by the latter to be less than $1,500,000."

WANT RIVER IMPROVED.

A Delegation From South Calls On Committee In Washington.

A Washington special says: A large delegation of Tennessee and Alabama citizens appeared before the rivers and harbors committee Friday to urge the improvement of the Tennessee river in Alabama and Tennessee. The delegation was headed by General John T. Wilder, of Knoxville, and J. C. Harris, of Huntsville.

KRUGER "AT HOME."

His Arrival at The Hague Made the Occasion of Demonstration and Addresses of Welcome.

At the opening of the second chamber at The Hague, Thursday, the president, J. C. Gleichman, said:

"President Kruger arrives here today. He will take up his residence here. I take the occasion to propose that the chamber authorize me to welcome in its name the president to our country, and offer him an expression of our cordial sympathy."

The proposal was adopted amid cheers and bravos.

Mr. Kruger arrived during the day and was greeted at the station by the burgomaster and counsellors. A choir of 600 men and girls chanted Psalm 72, verses 6, 7 and 11. The former president and his suite then repaired to the royal waiting room, where the burgomaster warmly welcomed them in a brief speech.

Then followed Dr. Spink, the president of the local South African association, in a long welcoming address, assuring Mr. Kruger of the deep sympathy of the entire Dutch nation, "who had," he said, "so greatly though vainly hoped that the great powers who had recently assembled at the peace conference would not have permitted that in South Africa that the right of nations, the right of war and civil war should be trampled under foot, or a little nation be sacrificed in an unequal combat in defence of its existence."

The address, after a long eulogy of the heroism of the Boers, proceeded to liken Mr. Kruger to William the Silent, who sacrificed everything for the welfare of his people, and concluded:

"May your reliance on the Almighty, similar to that of the Prince of Orange, support you, Mr. President, in the arduous fight for right and liberty, and may the liberty of your nation crown your courage. Then will Great Britain have learned of how dangerous it is to attempt to throttle the independence of a free nation."

WANT NAVAL RECRUITS

A recruiting office for the navy was opened at Savannah, Ga., Thursday. This is the first time naval recruits have been sought in Savannah in some years. The office in the custom house is in charge of Lieutenant Commander J. B. Collins, who is accompanied by Surgeon D. H. Morgan.

The officers say they want specially men with trades, and are looking for all the electricians they can get. They expect to get a good number of Georgians for service on Uncle Sam's warships.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE

To Be Put on Between Norfolk and Mexico By Guano Trust.

The guano trust, known as the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company, is to operate a line of steamships between Norfolk and Tampico, Mexico. The company has recently acquired in Mexico a large amount of mining property, some 200,000 acres of land which contain rich and extensive deposits of sulphur in quantities that cannot be found at all in the states. These deposits will be worked by the company and the mines developed.

DEWET IN A BAD BOX.

Intrepid Boer Leader Surrounded and Is at a Standstill.

Advices from Cape Colony state that General Dewet appears to be in a most dangerous position and to need all his strategy to extricate his force. With strong British columns on three sides and two swollen rivers barring his front, the British commanders begin to be hopeful that the great chase by four columns which has been one of the most exciting operations of the war, will result in the capture of Dewet.

Three Killed In Wreck.

A wreck occurred at 10:30 o'clock Saturday night on the Southern railway three miles south of Sanford, Tenn., resulting in the death of Conductor David I. Glover and two unknown tramps.

PARSON ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE

Close of Sensational Criminal Trial at Bamberg, S. C.

DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT

Immediately After Verdict He Preaches to His Congregation.

Rev. William E. Johnson preached to a large congregation in the Baptist church in Bamberg, S. C., at 11 o'clock Sunday. At 5:30 Saturday morning the jury that had been hearing the evidence in his case for four days rendered a verdict acquitting him of the murder of William T. Peeples, court stenographer of the second circuit. Johnson went from the court room to his home, and after spending a few hours there repaired to his church, where he was greeted by a large congregation.

There were a few in the congregation when the jury announced their agreement. Johnson appeared, and in his calm demeanor none would have suspected he was a man who was about to be told whether he was to suffer the penalty for a terrible crime or be given freedom and return to his family. Quietly he stood, without showing the least emotion, while the clerk read the papers and read not guilty.

The trial throughout attracted widespread interest. The closing testimony for the defense, however, was the most important. It was known that the defendant would take the stand and the courthouse was packed.

The defendant was the last witness for his side. He was the pastor of three Baptist churches—at Bamberg, Denmark and Hunter's chapel. In June, 1899, he was called on by Mr. Brown to perform a marriage ceremony between him and Miss Bellinger. Saturday following Mrs. Bellinger came to his house and abused him to his wife. Willie Bellinger, who came for his mother, said to Mrs. Johnson: "Shut up; I've heard enough of that," when she remonstrated for the abuse of her husband.

The witness did not see Bellinger again until the day before the shooting, when he found him sitting on the line fence between the parsonage and the Bellinger's. Mrs. Bellinger was present. A negro painter was in the parsonage yard painting a fence. Johnson ordered him out. Bellinger ordered him to remain. The negro said he was afraid. "Afraid of what?" exclaimed Bellinger. "That long-legged —," with several other epithets.

"I told Bellinger he could not go out in the road and say that. He jumped down and went out of his gate. I went out of mine and saw he had a pistol in his hand. I exclaimed, 'You are armed, eh?' Bellinger repeated his abusive language. I turned and walked back. Soon after Colonel Counts came to my house, and I told him of the difficulty. He went off and returned with Mr. Sanders, bringing a gun, which I used in shooting Mr. Bellinger. It was loaded. I expected to use it to protect myself, my family and my home.

"The next morning I went with Mr. Brown to the postoffice. I was armed with a pistol, because I thought I was in danger of being shot. After returning to my home, Brown drove up to the gate, and I started out to meet him. I saw Willie Bellinger coming across the campus, which is in front of my house, and I picked up my shotgun to defend myself against any possible danger.

"When I got to where Brown was Bellinger had approached to within ten or fifteen steps of us, and he opened fire on us with a pistol. Mr. Bellinger shot at me twice. Then I shot. I was standing in the road. Without reference to any telegraph pole, there was nothing between us that I saw. I shot him to save my life."

On cross examination by the attorney general, Johnson said he was standing by Brown's horse in front, when Bellinger came up. After firing the first shot he brought his gun to the position of "ready" so he could use the other barrel, if necessary. After the shooting he quieted his wife and drove to the jail. He had wanted to fight Bellinger with his fists, not with a pistol.

A Washington special says: Thursday Brigadier General C. P. Eagan, commissary general, was restored to duty by the president and at once placed on the retired list.

The order issued by the president remitted the unexpired portion of his sentence and restored him to "a status of duty with station in this city."

This order was immediately followed by one issued by General Miles announcing that General Eagan had been placed on the retired list on his own application after thirty years service.

A Small Story.

Eight small children for busy Bess
Eight to feed and wash and dress
Four small girls and four small boys
In one small house make no small noise.
And so to have them out of the way

"Don't quarrel and tease and fret," her mother

But come back home when the sun is down
And it's now she chuckles and smiles
Don't these stories of hers beat all?
For how could she be so glad and gay
And I know how that is myself," said she

House of Delight for Children.

Fairmount park, Philadelphia, has a children's play house which has been open for 15 months. One thousand children have been entertained there in a single day, but 7,000 is the average number. Boys over ten are barred. All other children are welcome. The house is filled with swings, see-saws, wagons and tracks for the older ones, and hammocks, baby jumpers, rocking horses and building blocks for the younger ones. For the little ones who are too young to walk a big creeping pad is provided. In the sand pavillion are twelve tons of white sand. For those who meet with injury a trained nurse is in attendance to administer consolation and necessary treatment.

The institution was bequeathed by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith.

A Surprised Cat.

Several days ago five or six sparrows were pecking away in the gutter immediately in front of an engine house when a cat crept across the street and pounced upon one of them. Instantly the victim's companions sent up a war cry, which was as instantly answered. From the housetop and tree the sparrows flocked to the scene. With whirring, hissing cries of noisy rage, they fearlessly attacked the offender. For about 30 seconds the dazed cat endured the blows from perhaps a hundred beaks and twice as many beating wings. Then, still holding her prey, she struggled away from the infuriated birds, and ran into the engine house. The plucky little fellows followed her inside, but soon gave up the chase, leaving her with her dearly bought dinner, a sadder but a wiser cat.

England's First Parliament.

January 20 is memorable in English history as the date of the first meeting of the first parliament, an assembly which corresponds to the national congress of the United States. This great English reform took place in the year 1265, in Westminster hall, which still is in existence. This first of British national legislative bodies in which the common people were represented consisted of two knights, or noblemen, from each county and two citizens from each borough or township. The election and service of the citizens representing the common people (as distinguished from the nobles) in this parliament was the first clear admission by the government that the citizens had a right to take part in making the laws and managing the affairs of the country. Thus we see that hundreds of years before the birth of the United States the principles on which our republic was founded were recognized and put into partial operation in Great Britain.

Strange Discoveries in Africa.

The problem of how the apple got into the dumpling sinks into insignificance beside that of the jellyfish, the crustaceans and Lake Tanganyika, but J. E. S. Moore, who recently returned from Central Africa, believes he has discovered how the fish from the sea got into the lake in the middle of the continent.

Mr. Moore is one of the young men at the Royal College of Science, South Kensington. He was leader of an expedition largely subsidized by the Royal Geographical society, and after a year's march of over 2,000 miles, from the Zambesi to Uganda, he has come back with hundreds of specimens and several important additions to the knowledge of Central Africa.

He has encountered cannibals, volcanoes and glaciers and scaled an ice-clad peak called "Stanley" in the Ruwenzori mountains, or Mountains of the Moon, at a height of about 16,000 feet. The mountain took ten days to climb. The peaks of the range are covered with ice to a depth of hundreds of feet, for the snow melts in the day and freezes at night.

Mr. Moore and the 20 Ujiji boys who accompanied him lived on goats during the ascent and descent, driving the goats and killing them when food was wanted. The Ujiji boys were so struck with the phenomenon of ice that they tried to carry bits down to Ujiji. The tropical sun nearly boiled the ice on the way.

Between Tanganyika and Lake Albert Edward is a lake called Kivu. The best atlas published gives it as about one-tenth the size of Albert Edward. Mr. Moore, who was accompanied by Malcom Fergusson, geologist and geographer, found that Kivu is larger than Albert Edward. The north end of Tanganyika was found to be 50 miles westward of its ascribed position.

It was between this lake and Kivu that the cannibals were met. They are tall, light-colored men, more like Arabs than negroes, and are born thieves. They gave much trouble and killed two or three bearers, but Mr. Moore never had to fight them outright.

The primary object of the expedition was to dredge and sound the lakes with reference to the marine forms which Mr. Moore found there four years ago. The question was whether the jellyfish and crustaceans originally got into Tanganyika by way of the Nile or the Congo. Having determined that these marine species are to be found in none of the lakes north of Tanganyika, Mr. Moore believes that Tanganyika was once joined to the sea by way of a great basin in the Congo State.

When Tanganyika was left high, if not dry, in the center of Africa, the jellyfish and crustaceans of the sea remained behind and their descendants are flourishing today. They have been there many thousands of years, for fossils they resemble are to be found below the chalk level.

Insects in Winter.

A little boy once asked his father if the house flies went South for the winter, like the birds; and then his father told him a long story about different insects and what became of them during the cold months.

He told the boy that when autumn comes the death knell of millions of flies has sounded. They do not prepare for winter as many other insects do. The majority die, and their little bodies are blown away by the passing breeze. A few hardy flies will linger in cracks in the walls, creep under the door frames or into crevices in the woodwork, and some naturalists believe that these few lingering flies are the parents of the multitude that appear in the warm days of June, for they lay thousands of eggs.

Katydids, grasshoppers, crickets and beetles are killed by the frost, and the eggs which they hide in the ground or conceal in the bark of trees furnish the supply for the next year. These hatch out in the warm days of spring.

Beetles exhibit a wonderful instinct in caring for their eggs during winter. Among some species the eggs are rolled in balls of material suitable for food, and then the balls are packed away in a nest until the infant beetle wakes up and eats its way out.

Then there are the "sexton" beetles, which deposit their eggs in the bodies of dead birds or field mice, after which they set to work and perform the proper rites of burial, heaping the earth upon the body of the dead. The young beetle, when hatched from the egg, finds a store of food awaiting its arrival in the world.

It is said that the spiders store away no food supply in winter quarters. Quantities of eggs are laid and carefully sheltered in velvety cobweb sacks that defy the weather. These sacks may be found swinging by silken ropes from the goldenrod and milkweed, and hidden away in crevices and corners of board fences and stone walls. The little spiders creep from their cosey sleeping bags which the wise mother has provided for them, and if they escape their cannibal brothers and sisters they enter at once on a career of trapping and hunting.

Bees and wasps lay up stores for the winter, the wasps not as carefully as the bees, but in the centre of the cone shaped nest of the paper making wasps may be found goodly stores of honey.

The thrifty ant deserves much sympathy, in that it is a dainty morsel for spiders, beetles, crickets and other insect hunters. A few ants may survive and feed on accumulated stores during the winter, but it is chiefly the eggs and cocoons hidden away in the secure underground chambers of the ant hill that furnish the ant population of the following summer.

The ant's care of its young, the management of its slaves, and the tiny insect cows which they capture and from which the honeydew is milked, all would furnish a tale as interesting as the customs of any wandering tribe of the desert or any lost nation of darkest Africa.—New York Tribune.

Curiosities in London.

Country things which flourish in London have been receiving a good deal of attention of late. At the present time there may be seen a number of fine bunches of fast-ripening black grapes on the south wall of the Hospital for Incurable Children, at Chelsea. No doubt the poor mites within will be enjoying them before long.

In a garden at the King's road end of Flood street, Chelsea, there is a mulberry tree which has this year borne a fine crop of fruit. It was picked during the present month. Mulberries are not always to be obtained in London, and they are expensive. This, by the way, has been a good year for mulberries in various parts of the country. They have been allowed to fall from the trees and rot on the ground in some places.

The reed harvest is a small matter, but not one to be altogether overlooked in districts where this tall, handsome plant flourishes. The mowers are now among the reeds, which go down before the old fashioned scythe. They are bound up in sheaves like the corn, and when dry stacked and used as they are required for thatching purposes.—London Express.

In the remote parts of Scotland the old Covenanters' love for long services on the bare hillsides still lingers. At Dingwall a recent communion service in the open air lasted from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m.

RESURRECTION OF THE SHAWL.

As a Dainty Article It is a Welcome Gift —The Various Styles.

The shawl is an article of wearing apparel of which not much has been heard for a good many years, but which is gradually asserting its right to popularity. This is not as a street wrap, but for a general range of purposes for which nothing else will take its place. For a time after the shawl was given up by the average woman as an out-door garment it sank into oblivion. Some of the largest and finest shops had no shawl department at all, but within the last two years this has been changed. More and more shawls are being sold and to the richer and better classes of customers. The shawl is not an actual necessity, but it is a great comfort and convenience. There are two seasons when the shawl is worn, and they are the summer and winter. The styles of shawl for the two seasons vary but little if any. For the summer the lighter and prettier kinds are used for piazza wraps, for young girls for a light wrap after dancing and the heavier varieties are for traveling. For winter the demand is much the same. For the young people for dancing, for the older people and invalids for bedroom and house wraps, or for the sun parlors, for use in the South for traveling. There is an infinite variety of pretty, light and warm shawls, which, being something of a luxury, and many of them expensive, they make greatly appreciated holiday gifts.

There is a wide variety of pretty little silk shawls which are the daintiest and most convenient of little wraps for young girls. There is a special charm about them which no woman of any age can resist. They are also comparatively inexpensive. One of the simplest is a fine silk crepe with a long, soft fringe. Nothing is prettier than an ivory white shawl of this kind a yard and a quarter square. There are the pretty little embroidered China silk shawls a yard and an eighth square, the whole surface covered with a pattern of hand embroidery and a handsome knotted fringe. These pretty things in crepe and silk range in price from $4 and $5 to about $10.

Pretty little woven or knitted silk shawls are to be found in attractive designs at about the same prices, running a little lower and a little higher, perhaps, according to the quality. The Algerian shawls have the daintiness of fine, white wool, and there is nothing more charming. They are shawls that are a delight to the invalid, for children, for anything for which a pretty, soft, warm wrap can be used. The broad bands of the white wool are divided by soft satin stripes in white or delicate shades, pink, blue, or lavender, while other varieties show less of the wool and have tiny insertions of Valenciennes lace.

There is an increasing demand for the traveling shawls. There is no cape or traveling wrap which will quite take the place of the shawl. Of these the Himalayas are the softest and warmest. A single shawl of this kind is as warm as a big double shawl of the smoother, more serge-like materials. These Himalaya shawls are used much in country homes. They come in all the various tartans, they are attractive golf wraps, and they are always at hand in any emergency for the hostess or her guests. The other shawls also come in the different tartans. The beaver shawl is heavier and less expensive, and will range in price from perhaps $5 to $15. It is to be found in the solid colors, browns, grays and tans. These shawls answer a variety of purposes. They are warm for driving and are sometimes placed in the bottom of the carriage to keep out the wind.

The little handkerchief shawl, which is always in demand, is a revelation to many people. It reveals the fact that in these days of eternal youth there are still dear old ladies, for whose cold shoulders there is nothing so satisfactory as these little square shawls. They are plain, little old-fashioned woolen shawls, a yard square, with fringe, and coming in all varieties of shepherd plaids and Scotch tartans. There are the soft woolen Himalaya shawls among these, and they all have a wonderfully homelike expression. There are also pretty woven or knit shawls of the handkerchief size, which come in the plain colors, grays and blacks and browns.

The honeycomb shawls are pretty, warm and practical for house and room wear, and come in white, mixed grays and delicate shades. The pretty little Saxony shawls of silk and Shetland wool, with a woven border and fringe, are charming.—New York Times.

Mrs. McKinley's Favorite Color.

It is well known that Mrs. McKinley's favorite color is blue. The walls of her bedchamber, the hangings thereof, and all her personal belongings, as far as it is possible, are of the same heavenly blue. But every one does not know that the mistress of the White House has a tiny garden where only blue flowers are cultivated and watched with most tender care.

This garden occupies a sunny nook of the private corridor during inclement weather. One of the great southern windows of the Executive mansion lights this pleasant retreat during the months when the northern blasts overcome the genial sun. During the balmy days of spring, summer and autumn these flowers are transplanted to the gallery in front of the great bow window which opens on the spreading lawns and fountains stretching down toward the Washington Monument. Fragrant heliotropes and rich, dark violets are the favorites. Another modest posy which basks in the smiles of her favor is the blue clover blossom.

Mrs. McKinley dislikes yellow as cordially as she admires the heavenly tints. Once upon a time, the beds below the dining-room were gorgeous with heavy-headed Marechal Niel roses and double marigolds. Now these languorous beauties are banished to more distant fields, and tiny violets, modest heliotropes and waving bluebells queen it without rivalry in the little garaden which Mrs. McKinley waters and cares for unfailingly each day.—Success.

A Woman Architect.

At Bistritz, in Siebenburgen, the building of a large residence for the official forest commissioners has been confided by the Austrian Government to a lady. Fraulein Erika Paulas, who is thus honored, obtained last winter her diploma as architect, and has been chosen from many candidates for this important work. She commenced at seventeen the study of architectural drawing, then passed the masons' examination with success at Klausenburg, and gained her diploma as architect last winter at Budapest. She has encountered much opposition and persecution in her profession. A deputation connected with the building trade actually petitioned the Minister for Public Works to prohibit Fraulein Paulas from entering herself for the examination. This petition remained unnoticed and she passed with unusual brilliancy. Twenty buildings have already been intrusted to her, and she has in every case afforded satisfaction to her employers. On the completion of the Bistritz Government house, it is the intention of Fraulein Paulas to enlarge her experience by traveling in the interests of her profession in foreign countries.

White Party Frocks.

White muslin frocks, which will be worn all winter for parties, are very elaborately made, with much lace insertion and trimming, and should be worn over a silk lining. The most economical way in the end is to have the lining separate from the white material. With a fitted petticoat and waist, the muslin can then be put over it, and of course two or three different frocks may be worn over the same lining. A further advantage is in the matter of renovation, for made this way they may easily be pressed, and, if necessary, washed or cleaned. The latter process, by-the-way, is generally wisest with a muslin frock that is at all elaborate. The fancy ribbons that are so fashionable this year are seen on some of the muslin frocks, but plain colors in peau de sole or satin are considered more youthful.—Harper's Bazar.

Sleeves are a trifle larger than they were last season.

Scarlet gaiters for golfing are shown, but find few wearers.

Machine stitching is even more in evidence than it was last season.

French batiste in black and trimmed with lace makes a fashionable corset.

Pretty little fancy jackets with sleeves of all kinds of heavy laces in cream or in dull colors.

Dame Fashion demands trimmed sleeves. But the trimming should be be allowed to increase the size of the sleeve.

The newest sleeve for a house reception gown reaches barely to the elbow, and it is not relieved by a ruffle, but is finished by a slight drapery or a band.

Tailor gowns of black-faced cloth with bright-colored cloth boleros, braided so closely with black that the color back of the arabesques in soutache is only just visible, are very popular this season, and red is one of the favored shades used for the jacket.

East Indian silk handkerchiefs are being utilized by fashionable women as shirt waists, and are exceedingly bright and effective. They are made with narrow vest and collar of solid color, frequently black, or it may be of the tint predominating in the handkerchief.

Gold, at least, a touch of it, is a feature of the smartest models. Narrow gold braid frames tucked waistcoats of mousseline de sole. Again, wide belts of cloth encircle slender waists, and gold buttons and buckles enrich blouses. Satins are seen embroidered with gold knots and woven with gold dots.

As many cloth jackets and jacket bodices are made without collars as with them. Sometimes the neck is shaped in a short point at the centre back, and then is open a little way down the front to show the vest or waistcoat. In some cloth jackets the edges are bound in Persian lamb, with perhaps a fine thread of gold at the edge of the binding.

The Folly of a Fool.

A woodpecker pecked on a hickory limb,
And a chuckle-head worm hurried out
For a strange curiosity whispered to him:
"Go 'n' see what that fool bird's about."

Alas, for the folly that takes for a fool
Every creature it don't comprehend,
For it brings in this world, I am told, as a rule,
A full peck of woe in the end.

Alabama Improvement Appropriations---Judge Greene Nominated.

JEFFERSON COUNTY DEFICIT

The Constitutional Bill—House Passes Girls' School Appropriation Bill—Items.

Judge D. A. Greene.

A joint Democratic caucus was held in the House chamber at 1 o'clock Saturday, for the purpose of nominating an associate judge for the Jefferson County Criminal Court. D. A. Greene was nominated for the position without opposition, and was elected to the position Monday.

Girls' School Appropriation.

Age-Herald Bureau, Hotel Clancey, Montgomery, December 8.—(Special.)—The lower House of the General Assembly made quick work in the passage of the bill appropriating $65,000 to the Girls' Industrial School at Montevallo to complete and equip the building now being erected. The bill was unanimously adopted and passed by a vote of 63 to 16. The Senate concurred.

An Appropriate Bill.

The House passed an appropriation bill last Saturday practically without debate or opposition. The bill carries an appropriation of $20,000 for the improvement of the quarantine plant of Lower Mobile Bay. Mr. Clarke, of Mobile, author of the bill, briefly explained the need for improvement of the plant because of the great increase in vessels now coming into the bay. He said last year that 200 vessels came in from April 1 to November 1. For the same period this year 518 vessels were reported. The State did not contribute one cent for the maintenance of this plant, while the county and city of Mobile paid annually $10,000 to operate the plant, while the entire State was receiving equal benefit. Mr Pettus of Limestone was the only member voting against the bill.

Jefferson's Deficit.

Jefferson county is face to face with a deficit of $50,000, and what to do in the emergency is a problem which the board of revenue seeks assistance in solving. The board has addressed a letter to the Senators and Representatives asking that they advise as to what should be done. This letter is as follows:

"Birmingham, December 6, 1900.

Dear Sir: We think it very proper to advise you that the 'General Fund' of Jefferson county is overdrawn about $30,000. Estimating our expense for the future, based upon the expenditures heretofore, without any provisions of law to aid us to pay the deficit, we think it will be impossible for us to pay it, assuming that we make a levy of 5 cents to pay interest on sewer bonds. It is our intention to request our senators and all our representatives to meet with us during the recess to advise with us and help us to devise ways and means to pay off the present deficit and maintain the financial reputation of our great county. Respectfully,

"A. J. Tarrent,
"H. W. Crook,
"W. H. Wilson.
"Hugh McGeaver,
"J. K. P. Laird."

The present tax rate of Jefferson county is only 5 cents below the constitutional limit and in order to pay interest on the sanitary sewer funds it will be necessary to increase the rate to the full limit. As is shown in in the letter, this leaves no way in which to raise $50,000 to pay off the deficit, and the problem which confronts the board is quite a serious one.

University of Alabama.

The fall term at the University of Alabama, will close December 21st, with examinations covering the work passed over. With the new year the next term will begin. That will be an opportune time for new students to enter, as new subjects are taken up in many of the departments.—Tuscaloosa Gazette.

COTTON GROWERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the members of the Cotton Growers' Protective Association of Chilton county is hereby called to meet at Clanton on Wednesday, December 19, 1900, at 11 a.m, for the purpose of conridering what action shall be taken in the movement Every beat is requested to send delegates, and everyone interested is invited to participate in the proceedings.

W H CONWAY, President
FRANK CRICHTON, Secretary.

SENATOR Oliver has introduced a bill to authorize the sale of liquor in Chilton county.

REPRESENTATIVE L. B. Ponnds has introduced a bill to incorporate the city of Thorsby, and to create a separate school district within the limits of said city.

THE people of Chilton have now before them the full text of the proposed road law, and it deserves careful consideration. Mr. Pounds desires to know the will of the people in this matter before he introduces the bill, and whether for or against all should speak out.

THE government report of over 10,000,000 bales for this seasons cotton crop, together with the continued heavy receipts has caused a sharp fall in the market, and it will probably be some time before cotton again reaches ten cents. But there is a possibility it may get there later on.

THE call meeting of the Cotton Grower's Protective Association of Chilton county next Wednesday at Clanton it is to be hoped will be fully attended. The importance of this movement has not recived the attention it merits from our people. The fair price for cotton which our people have been getting this season has been another retarding factor. But there are other seasons to follow, and the present drop in cotton should cause our people to take steps to prepare themselves for the future We hope to see a large attendanc next Wednesday.

MARRIED

On the 6th inst., at Lowndesboro, Rev. D. F. Ellisor, pastor of the M. E. church at Clanton, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Fridelia Mitchell, daughter of Rev. A. Hood, the father of the bride officiating. Messrs. N. A. Kicker, P. D. Wilson and Dr. and Mrs. Matthews, Misses Mary Duke, Mollie Vines and Minnie Muse went down to participate on the happy occasion. We heartily welcome the fair bride to her new home in Clanton, and join with all who know them in wishing the happy couple a long, useful and prosperous life together.

We believe that the readers of a newspaper are entitled to the news, regardless of what the opinions of the newspaper may be. Any other rule would be a practical fraud upon the reading public. People in this age take newspapers for news, primarily, and for their opinions, incidentally. The time has long since gone by when a public journal can, with impudity, color its new to suit its editorial policy. The people in this generation are too intelligent for that.—N. Y. IN THE HOLY LAND.

Cairo, September 11, 1900

Just after writing my last letter from Joppa, the hotel keeper handed me a letter from my wife announcing to me the death of her brother, Thomas Dullose. It is no comfortable feeling to be far away in a strange land all alone, and distant from all who love you or have any care for your soul, but on top of that to hear that in the home far away across the wide intervening waters some of them who do care for you, are passing into the beyond. To realize that you unwittingly shook hands at the very banks of the "Jordan" ere you left your far away home with your brother, and the return greetings of the loving and loved will lack one face, one hand-shake and one smile of welcome, overcomes my heart and makes me sad indeed. I sorrow too, for the lonely wife, the bright, young daughters that he so suddenly left to battle with the world without a father's and husband's protective affection.

We took steamer same evening for Port Said, Egypt. At 7 a.m. Next day, I looked out of my port and was asked in good English in the oldest land under the sun, "Do you wish a boat to land?" The thing pleased me, that the oldest land, spoke the tongue (to some extent) of the youngest (the giant land) across the sea. We were soon on board the cars for Ismalia, the railway runs along the banks of the Suez canal all the way to Ismalia on the west side. We therefore saw the canal without going through it. The English have run a canal of fresh water from the Nile to Port Said that taps the Nile above Cairo. Look at your map and see what sort of a job this is, so as to furnish Port Said with water, and so as to water the trees along the route that these people have planted on both sides of the railway through the desert. We soon reach Ismalia, change cars there for Cairo. Pass through Tel-el-kebir, where Wooley "licked" the Arabs. Next Zagazig is reached in the heart of the rich land of Goshen, that Pharaoh set apart for the people of Israel. Here we enter the highly irrigated and cultivated country; miles of old fashioned corn and cotton and I almost feel at home again. Here again we see the muzzled ox treading out grain; here they are still making mud sun dried brick, but they use straw now, since they have the Jews no longer to make them. Here we get an ox rings on nose and toes, bracelets on ankle and arm and beads on neck. They are all cheap painted glass. I called a maiden to the window at Zagazig and bought some to see. It looks so strange to see boat sails scattered about all through the fields, but you can see them and can't see the canal (off a little distance)—as the banks hide the canal We are still ELECTRICAL EXHIBITS.

Wonderful Collection and Grand Display of Electric Lighting.

It is the plan of the management to make the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year the greatest electrical Exposition ever held. In view of the wonderful advance in the electrical science since the World's fair there will probably not be a single duplication of an exhibit seen at Chicago in 1893. Nearly everything in the electrical line then exhibited has been superseded in the market by new machinery and appliances constructed upon a better understanding of the wonderful forces. The discovery of the Roentgen rays, the invention of wireless telegraphy and the development of the electromobile are among the well known new and useful applications of electricity unknown at the time of the Columbian Exposition. Electricity is to be extensively used in making attractive displays at night. For this purpose a steel tower 375 feet high has been planned which will face the Court of the Fountains. Upon this great tower and in this broad and beautiful court there will be seen at night fantastic and beautiful displays in electrical illumination. More than 200,000 electric lamps are to be used for this purpose. It being the intention of electricians to have all the large buildings surrounding this court outlined with a fringe of brilliant electric lamps. These wonderful electrical displays are made possible by the nearness of Niagara Falls, from which nearly all the power used for the Exposition will be drawn.

NIAGARA FALLS.

WEST VIRGINIA ALERT.

Governor Will Urge Appropriation to Have State Represented.

Governor Atkinson of West Virginia announces that he will embody in his next message to the legislature a recommendation for an appropriation to pay the expenses of the state commission having in charge the state exhibit for the Pan-American Exposition. West Virginia is one of the many states that are inviting capital and labor to come in and help develop their natural resources. With her 15,000 square miles of coal lands, her thousands of acres of hard wood forests, her wonderful stores of petroleum, her iron ore deposits and her great acreage of lands suitable for farming, stock raising and wool growing, she has much to offer in the way of exhibits and much to gain by bringing her resources properly before the world. It is expected that an exhibit will be made showing by maps and specimens, statistics and information of a general character what a newcomer to the state may be able to do in the way of advancing the fortunes of himself and those who depend upon him. The millions of visitors to Buffalo next year will be interested in knowing what the possibilities are in all parts of the western hemisphere. The West Virginia commission is composed of Stuart W. Walker of Martinsburg, president; J. C. Morrison of Charleston, secretary; R. B. Battelle of Wheeling, treasurer; James M. Potter, Jr., of New Cumberland and E. B. Smith of Parkersburg.

CITY STREETS AND COUNTRY ROADS.

The green road, the clean road; it is so broad and high;
It stretches from the happy sea to touch the happy sky.
Oh! I laughed once to forsake it, but I'm longing now to take it—
The green road, the clean road, that is so broad and high.

The gray street, the gay street; how solemnly it shines!
The sun imprints his pleasures, but there's pain between the lines.
Oh, I smiled at first to see it, but I'm eager now to flee it—
The gray street, the gay street, how solemnly it shines!

The pure love, the sure love, comes over me like rain;
The tinsel of my heartless love is turning poor and plain.
It's my life I have been giving just to make a decent living,
It's my all I have been losing just to get a little gain.

The nest song, the best song, is crying swift and sweet;
The tune's within my bosom, but the time's not in my feet.
Ah! they only sing for pity, do the voices in the city.
Did you ever hear a homely song sound happy in the street?

The gray street, the gay street, for me it holds no rest,
Not even when the summer sun is sailing down the West;
And I cannot find my pleasure in a road my sight can measure,
From the little room I dwell in with a memory for my guest.

The green road, the clean road, it is so broad and high,
It stretches from the happy sea to touch the happy sky.
Oh, to rise and part with sadness! oh, to move and meet with gladness,
On the green road, the clean road, that is so broad and high.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE

By Mary C. Preston.

THE arrival of the new minister in Locust Hollow, as the pretty village was called, was regarded as quite an event by the congregation. A new minister is always an object of interest to his people for a month or two, then the interest flags, and finally he is accepted as a matter of course, and—generally to his delight—is no longer fussed over.

But this particular divine seemed likely to keep speculation going for a longer period than the customary nine days, and, being a somewhat humorous fellow, he thoroughly enjoyed it.

For the Reverend Jerome Grant was unmarried—warranted by the gossips to have no lady love—young, handsome and possessed of a private income, which made salary a secondary consideration. Perhaps that was as well, for the Locust Hollow flock were not any too prompt about paying ministers' salaries, and, if one might judge by such things as yearly reduction of the same, were willing, as one young fellow said on a certain occasion, that the particular clergyman who had the leading of that particular people, should be allowed to "live entirely by the grace of God."

Now, in Locust Hollow, there were a number of very plump and pretty girls, with a few slim, graceful damsels; but the plump ones outnumbered the slim, as always is the case in country villages, with fresh air, healthy diet, regular hours, and no heavier dissipations than a picnic or two yearly, in some grove in the village, with swings among the trees, a light lunch spread on a cloth laid over the grass, and perchance a dance on the green, performed by the merry young people, with less grace than zest, is it wonderful that cheeks remain round and eyes brilliant in such places as Locust Hollow?

Among the very plumpest of the village maidens was Gussie Elliston; and Miss Gussie's blue eyes and radiant red-and-white complexion seemed to have found favor in the eyes of Mr. Grant, for he speedily placed himself on familiar footing at the long, low farm-house, where he met with very warm greetings from the farmer and his wife, and dimpling smiles and shy blushes from their daughter.

Among the very slimmest and palest of those who listened to the young minister Sunday after Sunday was Louise Vennevale, the daughter of a helpless widow, who lived a little out of the village, and who had therefore escaped the knowledge of Jerome for some time.

Perhaps Louise's cheeks would have had more color in them and her eyes less of that wistful tenderness, did not the burden of her own and her invalid mother's support fall on her slight young shoulders.

But day after day—on cold, dark days, when winds swept weirdly by the little cottage—on warm, wooing days, when her pulses throbbed with longing to be out among the violets—she sat quietly at the little window, her brown head bent over the sewing in her hands, the garments to be worn by more fortunate ones than herself, which she with deft fingers fashioned.

Jerome had noticed the girl's sweet, patient face, and wondered why he only saw it on Sunday—wondered how it was he had never seen it in the many homes that had been open for him to enter at, a welcome guest.

But Gussie's blue eyes had been enough like violets to make him speedily forget the wistful brown ones, and it was not until he had been installed at Locust Hollow for three months, and had begun to think that Gussie Elliston would make a very sweet minister's wife, that accident brought him to the door of the cottage which the Widow Vennevale and her daughter occupied.

It was warm; the young man was too, and tired, from a long ramble; he was thirsty, as well; and so, after hesitating a few moments, he knocked lightly on the open door, intending to ask for a glass of water.

His knock had not been heard, evidently, for nobody replied to it; and while he waited, a low, murmuring voice reached him from a room within, just hidden from him by a tiny box of a hall.

"I did my best, mother," girlish tones answered, wearily; "and I thought it very nice. I often wonder how people can say such harsh and cruel words to me, when I try so hard to please them. Mother—my poor mother—it is very hard to be poor; to be a woman, and poor—there's nothing harder in this whole wide world!"

The sweet voice had taken more than weariness on its music. It became passionate and bitter, and ended in a burst of sobs.

The young man was profoundly touched, but he lifted his hand once more and knocked more loudly.

This time he was heard, and a light but languid step crossed toward the door. In a moment Louise Vennevale, with undried tears on her long lashes, was looking at him with wondering eyes, brown as hazelnuts. He held out his shapely hand.

"You are one of my people, are you not?" he questioned, with a smile. "I have not called before, but you will pardon that, and bid me enter now, will you not?"

"Certainly."

And she led him into the tiny room, where Mrs. Vennevale lay on a sofa, frail and helpless.

"Mamma," she said, quietly, "this is Mr. Grant. He has come to see you."

And, greatly to the young man's disappointment, after placing a chair for him beside the sofa, she glided out.

He remained almost an hour conversing with the invalid. He heard the pitiful story—too sadly frequent for men to mind it much to-day, in their busy, selfish lives; the struggles to purchase a little home for wife and child by the stalwart young farmer, who had only his strong hands and honest heart to rely on; then the long, lingering illness of the woman, during which the first mortgage had fallen on the farm; then the sudden death, by sunstroke, of the man, and the helpless widow's efforts to educate her only child, before allowing the girl to take up the weary burden that now had been borne for four years with gentlest and tenderest patience.

"It breaks my heart to see her work at her sewing from morning till night, and often half the night," Mrs. Vennevale said, in conclusion, her eyes dim with tears. "And sometimes she has to take such insolence, too. That is very hard to bear. To-day Miss Gussie Elliston came for a dress she had left for Louise to make, and she found so much fault, and said such cruelly unkind things, that my heart ached for my daughter. Did you notice that Louise had been weeping when you came in?"

"I noticed that she looked very pale and weary," he answered, wondering if he had mistaken the character of Miss Gussie so completely, when he thought she would be so sweet a minister's wife, so truly a helpmeet to one who had chosen that most arduous of all positions—to be the spiritual adviser of a village full of people.

It was with a pang at his heart that he began to think the blue eyes and fair face of the girl who had smiled so shyly at his coming might but be a mask for a cold and selfish heart.

"There is a picnic in the birch grove on Monday," Mrs. Vennevale went on, "and it was for that Miss Gussie wanted this particular dress. My poor child cannot go, or, rather, she will not, for she never leaves me, urge her as I may. She was just saying how hard it is to be a woman and poor when you came, Mr. Grant.

Yes, he had heard her say the words, but did not say so. Instead, he stood up and took the weak hand of the woman.

"I do not think I will join the merry-makers on Monday, either," he said, pleasantly. "My dear madam, you and I have been strangers too long. Let me come here on Monday and become better acquainted with you.

So, when Gussie Elliston, arrayed in the pretty, dainty muslin, which was really very well made and well fitting, and set off her blue eyes and fair complexion to advantage—was watching for one face vainly in the grove of birch, that masculine face was turned toward a window in the little cottage of the Vennevales, as which a girl sat sewing, with her bent brown head and eyes alight.

Gussie met him next after the morning service on the following Sunday, when they encountered each other at the door of the church.

She chided him playfully for his absence from the picnic, but he only smiled, and, after a few pleasant words, passed on and joined Miss Louise Vennevale, with whom he walked through the whole village, leaving her at the cottage gate.

It was only three months later that a pretty gothic dwelling shot up rapidly beside the church, not at all mindful, apparently, of the deluge of conjecture and remark it brought to Locust Hollow.

And when it was completed, Jerome Grant took his bride and her mother to it one golden day in late autumn, and Louise Vennevale, the snubbed and slighted dressmaker, was that bride.

Strange to say, Gussie was one of the first to call, as she whispered to her intimates, "out of pure curiosity."

Of course, as the minister's wife, Louise had to be civil to her, laying aside the past.—Saturday Night.

CONSCRIPTS OF FRANCE

MILITARY SYSTEM IS STRICT AND NO MAN ESCAPES.

A Youth Is No Sooner Born Than the Army Officials Have Their Eyes on Him —"Drawing His Number" Is an Interesting Occasion—His Feuille de Route.

The French boy is no sooner born than the military authorities have their eyes on him, says a writer in the Pall Mall Gazette. Within three days after his entry into the world his parents are bound under severe penalties to register his birth at the local mairie, or town hall. This formality accomplished the youngster at once receives the visit of the doctor attached to the register office. The medecin de l'etat civil, as this functionary is termed, verifies the declaration made by the parents and satisfies himself that the infant is indeed a man in miniature. This precaution is necessary as the father and mother, were they left entirely to their own devices, might be tempted to palm off their boy as a girl, with a view to enabling him to escape his military service.

The existence of the youngster having thus been duly placed on record, he is allowed to run loose for a score of years. If he chooses to, he can shorten this period of liberty by voluntarily enlisting before his time, providing, of course, his physique passes muster. The marine infantry, a corps that sees a good deal of actual fighting in the colonies, recruits a number of adventurous spirits in this way, and not a few of the young men who propose to adopt the army as their career improve their prospects by making an early start. As soon as his twentieth birthday is passed he begins to have a keen eye on the official posters displayed on the walls of the town hall, the schools and other public buildings. These posters are white, like all other official posters in France, but they are of exceptional size, while, that there may be no possibility of their escaping notice among their many miscellaneous fellows, they compel attention by a most apparent distinctive sign, consisting of two tricolor flags placed crossways above the reading matter and printed in colors. One of these military posters details the arrangements for the departure of the class, or annual contingent, and from it the conscript learns the date of his incorporation and other items of information.

In the course of his twentieth year he should give his address to the nearest recruiting office, and see that the mayor of his district has put down his name among the conscripts of the coming class. The mayor, however, is bound to see that his name is on the list, whether he concerns himself with his inscription or not.

It should be said that the conscript draws his number in the January that follows the completion of his twentieth year. In consequence, a conscript born in December has only just turned 20 when the army claims him, whereas, a conscript whose birth is in January is 21 at the time of the tirage au sort. The only use at present of the drawing or numbers is that when there is a deficiency of men for the marine infantry the vacancies are filled up from among the conscripts who have drawn the numbers one, two or three.

For the next six months or so the conscript is left to himself, but toward the middle of the year he makes acquaintance in earnest with the military authorities. The occasion is the sitting of the councils of revision, the bodies that definitely decide the fate of the conscripts. The council of revision is composed of two civil functionaries, of a superior officer and of an army doctor, and it has the assistance of a member of the recruiting staff and of several gendarmes. A council sits in the chief town of every canton. The mayors of the different localities comprised in the district are allowed to be present at its operations, with a view to safeguarding the interests of the sons of their electors. The conscript is expected to present himself before the council, but should he abstain from putting in an appearance he does not incur a penalty. He loses the right, however, should he remain away, to benefit by certain dispensations which will shortly be explained, and he is purely and simply taken as a soldier without more ado—he is taken d'office, it is technically said. In the case of the conscripts who come up before it—and they are the vast majority—the council decides their military service, and pronounces on the admissibility of the claims they may put in to be dispensed from the full term of service, to serve one year instead of three. The question of physical fitness is settled, of course, by a medical examination.

The privilege of only serving one year is accorded in the first place to certain classes of young men whose family circumstances are exceptional. Thus the oldest son or only son of a widow, the eldest son of a family of orphans, the eldest son of a family of seven or more children, and the elder of two brothers who happen to be conscripts in the same year are entitled to a dispensation. The dispensation is also granted to young men whose earnings are proved to be indispensable to the support of the family, and to the brothers of soldiers who have died or been definitely invalided while on active service. By far the largest class, however, of single year soldiers is furnished by the learned professions. The young men who are studying to be barristers, doctors, professors and engineers, or for certain other careers, have to serve but one year. This concession is conditional on their passing their examinations; should they fail in them they must return to the army and complete their three years. The number of dispensee from all causes is very considerable, some 70,000 out of the 250,000 or so conscripts who form the annual contingent.

The council of revision takes note of the conscript's trade, occupation, or profession, this matter and, so far as his physique allows, his own wishes being taken into consideration in assigning him to this or that branch of the service." The labors of the council over, the results are sifted and classified at the war office and the destination of each conscript settled. He learns his fate by the receipt of his feuille de route, or marching orders, an official intimation commanding him to join the corps to which he has been attached on a given day. If he is penniless, his third-class railway fare is given him by the mayor of his district; should he be able to meet this expense, the sum is refunded him on his joining his regiment. Failure to comply with the instructions contained in this feuille de route is accounted an act of insubordination and exposes the insoumis to severe penalties. The incorporation of the classes takes place, as a rule, in November. The conscript has become a bleu, and is entitled to the munificent pay of a cent per day.

DYKE MAKING IN HOLLAND.

Where a Half Inch of Water Is Between the Country and Destruction.

Few people have any definite understanding of the constant wrestling and struggling that is carried on in Holland with the waters of the sea and rivers. These are the common enemy of the people, who are in hourly peril of their lives and property in consequence.

How serious is the position of Holland is fully demonstrated by the popular saying that the safety of the country may be jeopardized by only half an inch of water. The truth of the saying is accepted by all, and we cannot help admiring the people, who, notwithstanding the gravity of the situation, go about their daily occupations with perfect coolness.

Nature, as though conscious that she had acted unkindly by placing so much of the country below the water level, endeavors to assist the inhabitants to keep out the waters. The first work of dyke making is often performed by her; layers of sand and clay are thrown up on the banks and the people take advantage of these embryo embankments. They assist the formation by putting mats of willow on the deposits to strengthen them and bind the earth substances, and later they drive piles at the back, and so in time form the high dykes which prevent overflows.

For something like 500 years the people have been fighting the waters and reclaiming the land; but even when they have snatched a tract of territory from the water the fight is not done. The work of draining these polders or lowlands must go on incessantly or the efforts of the past would be quickly nullified.

The greatest work of the kind was the draining of the Haarlemer meer, or Haarlem lake, the result of which was an addition of 41,675 acres to Holland. A canal was dug encircling the Haarlem lake and a dyke was built on the inner side; then engines were planted to pump the water out of the lake. It took four years to complete the work; 80,000,000 tons of water were pumped out and the cost was $20,000,000. The ground was then intersected by canals for drainage purposes and in two years the land was being cultivated.

But the people in Holland have in view an undertaking which puts that of the Haarlem lake entirely in the shade. This is nothing less than the draining of the Zuyder Zee, which has an area of 1365 square miles. The initial stage of this undertaking would be the construction of an embankment from mainland to mainland; it would be 35 miles long and 216 feet wide. It would take 10 years to build this embankment, which would serve as a road for railway and general traffic. The work of draining and reclaiming the land would take 40 years and the total cost of the undertaking would be $750,000,000.

Cruelty of the Deaf.

Deaf children as a class are generally believed to be especially cruel to their mates and to the lower animals. Professor G. Stantley Hall suggests in a recent article that this apparent cruelty may be in part accounted for by the fact that they cannot hear the cries of pain, and hence do not really understand the amount of suffering which they are causing. He points out that Aristotle in his Rhetoric develops the theory that the sight and sound of others in pain call to mind or to the imagination a copy of the sufferings the spectator would experience under similar circumstances.

So that our idea of suffering in a given case may be said to be gauged by the amount of pain that would make us look and cry out as the sufferer does. The deaf individual's sensitiveness to suffering, in other words, his pity, would be thus naturally much curtailed by the entire absence of the important senses in producing this emotion.—New York Times.

The Increase of City Population.

REV. DR. TALMAGE

DISCOURSE BY THE EMINENT DIVINE LAST SUNDAY

Subject: Lack of Patience—Faith, Hope and Charity Bloom in Many Hearts Where the Grace of Patience is Wanting—Pity Rather Than Condemn the Erring.

[Copyright 1898.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—This discourse of Dr. Talmage is a full length portrait of a virtue which all admire, and the lessons taught are very helpful; text, Hebrews x, 36, "Ye have need of patience."

Yes, we are in awful need of it. Some of us have a little of it, and some of us have none at all. There is less of this grace in the world than of almost any other. Faith, hope and charity are all abloom in hundreds of souls where you find one specimen of patience. Paul, the author of the text, on a conspicuous occasion lost his patience with a coworker, and from the way he urges this virtue upon the Hebrews, upon the Corinthians, upon the Thessalonians, upon the Colossians, upon the young theological student, Timothy, I conclude he was speaking out of his own need of more of this excellence. And I only wonder that Paul had any nerves left. Imprisonment, flagellation, Mediterranean cyclone, arrest for treason and conspiracy, the wear and tear of preaching to angry mobs, those at the door of a theatre and those on the rocks of Mars hill, left him emaciated and invalid and with a broken voice and sore eyes and nerves a-jangle. He gives us a snap shot of himself when he describes his appearance and his sermonic delivery by saying, "In bodily presence weak and in speech contemptible," and refers to his inflamed eyelids when, speaking of the ardent friendship of the Galatians, he says, "If it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes and have given them to me."

We all admire most that which we have least of. Those of us with unimpressive visage most admire beauty; those of us with discordant voice most extol musical cadence; those of us with stammering speech most wonder at eloquence; those of us who get provoked at trifles and are naturally irascible appreciate in others the equipoise and the calm endurance of patience. So Paul, with hands tremulous with the agitations of a lifetime, writes of the "God of patience" and of "ministers of God in much patience" and of "patience of hope" and tells them to "follow after patience," and wants them to "run with patience," and speaks of those "strengthened with all might to all patience," and looks us all full in the face as he makes the startling charge, "Ye have need of patience."

The recording angel, making a pen out of some plume of a bird of paradise, is not getting ready to write opposite your name anything applaudatory. All your sublime equilibrium of temperament is the result of worldly success. But suppose things mightily change with you, as they sometimes do change. You begin to go down hill, and it is amazing how many there are to help you down when you begin to go in that direction. A great investment fails. The Colorado silver mine ceases to yield. You get land poor; your mills, that yielded marvels of wealth, are eclipsed by mills with newly invented machinery; you get under the feet of the bears of Wall street. For the first time in your life you need to borrow money, and no one is willing to lend. Under the harrowing worriment you get a distressful feeling at the base of your brain. Insomnia and nervous dyspepsia lay hold of you. Your health goes down with your fortune; your circle of acquaintances narrows, and where once you were oppressed by the fact that you had not time enough to return one-half of the social calls made upon you now the card basket in your hallway is empty, and your chief callers are your creditors and the family physician, who comes to learn the effect of the last prescription. Now you understand how people can become pessimistic and cynical and despairful. You have reached that stage yourself. Now you need something that you have not. But I know of a re-enforcement that you can have if you will accept it. Yonder comes up the road or the sidewalk a messenger of God. Her attire is unpretending. She has no wings, for she is not an angel, but there is something in her countenance that implies rescue and deliverance. She comes up the steps that once were populous with the affluent and into the hallway where the tapestry is getting faded and frayed, the place now all empty of worldly admirers. I will tell you her name if you would like to know it. Paul baptized her and gave her the right name. She is not brilliant, but strong. There is a deep quiethood in her manner and a firmness in her tread, and in her hand is a scroll revealing her mission. She comes from heaven. She was born in the throne room of the King. This is Patience. "Ye have need of patience."

First, patience with the faults of others. No one keeps the Ten Commandments equally well. One's temperament decides which commandments he shall come nearest to keeping. If we break some of the commandments ourselves, why be so hard on those who break others of the ten? If you and I run against one verse of the twentieth chapter of Exodus, why should we so severely excoriate those who run against another verse of the same chapter? Until we are perfect ourselves we ought to be lenient with our neighbor's imperfections. Yet it is often the case that the man most vulnerable is the most hypercritical. Perhaps he is profane and yet has no tolerance for theft, when profanity is worse than theft, for, while the latter is robbery of a man, the former is robbery of God. Perhaps he is given to defamation and detraction and yet feels himself better than some one who is guilty of manslaughter, not realizing that the assassination of character is the worst kind of assassination. The laver for washing in the ancient tabernacle was at its side burnished like a looking glass, so that those that approached that laver might see their need of washing, and if by the gospel looking glass we discovered our own need of moral cleansing we would be more economic of denunciation. The most of those who go wrong are the victims of circumstances, and if you and I had been rocked in the same iniquitous cradle, and been all our lives surrounded by the same baleful influences we would probably have done just as badly, perhaps worse.

We also have need of patience with slow results of Christian work. We want to see our attempts to do good immediately successful. The world is improving, but improving at so deliberate a rate; why not more rapidity and momentum? Other wheels turn so swiftly; why not the gospel chariot take electric speed? I do not know. I only know that it is God's way. We whose cradle and grave are so near together have to hurry up, but God, who manages this world and the universe, is from everlasting to everlasting. He takes 500 years to do that which He could do in five minutes. His clock strikes once in a thousand years. While God took only a week to fit up the world for human residence, geology reveals that the foundations of the world were eons in being laid, and God watched the glaciers, and the fire, and the earthquakes, and the volcances as through centuries and millenniums they were shaping the world before that last week that put on the arborescence. A few days ago my friend was talking with a geologist. As they stood near a pile of rocks my friend said to the scientist, "I suppose these rocks were hundreds of thousands of years in construction?" And the geologist replied, "Yes, and say millions of years, for so [illegible] but the Lord, and He won't tell.

If it took so long to make this [illegible] the start, be not surprised if it [illegible] long while to make it over again [illegible] it has been ruined.

The Architect has promised to [illegible] struct it, and the plans are all [illegible] at just the right time it will be [illegible] plete that it will be fit for [illegible] in, if, according to the belief of [illegible] my friends, this world [illegible] eternal abode of the [illegible]

The wall of that [illegible] my only anxiety is [illegible] that I am trying [illegible] turn out to be the [illegible] on all sides, so that [illegible] not reject it, or have [illegible] trowel to get it [illegible] sible for only that [illegible] may be responsible [illegible] or a carved pillar [illegible]

So we are God's [illegible] have to do is to [illegible] or ax or trowel [illegible] which no man can [illegible] work is all complete [illegible] to say rejoicingly [illegible] privileged to help in the [illegible] temple! I had a [illegible] world's redemption.

Again, we have need of patience with wrong inflicted and [illegible] some form? It comes in all [illegible] fessional life in the [illegible] derstood. Because of [illegible] ple fly to newspapers [illegible] You see their card [illegible] name declaring that [illegible] did not do that [illegible] not realizing that [illegible] taken for what he is worth, and not, by any newspaper puff, be [illegible] more than you are worth [illegible] paper depreciation be put down [illegible] is a spirit of fairness abroad in [illegible] and if you are a public man you [illegible] fied among the friends or foes [illegible] If you are a friend of a party, you [illegible] plenty of adherents, and if you [illegible] foe of society you cannot escape [illegible] sion. Paul, you were right when [illegible] not more to the Hebrews than [illegible] have need of patience." I adopt [illegible] years ago which has been of great [illegible] to me, and it may be of some [illegible] you: Cheerfully consent to be [illegible] stood. God knows whether we [illegible] or wrong, whether we are trying [illegible] Him or damage His cause. Why [illegible] cheerfully consent to be misunderstood, many of the annoyances and worries of [illegible] life will quit your heart, and you will [illegible] into calmer seas than you have been on. The most misunderstood man that ever trod the earth was the glorious [illegible] The world misunderstood His motives, concluded that one so [illegible] never be of much importance, [illegible] charged Him with [illegible] Him a winebibber. The sanhedrim misunderstood Him, and when it came to the vote whether He was guilty of treason He got but one vote, while others voted "Aye, aye." They misunderstood His cross and crucifixion. He had divine power He would not use for His own rescue. They misunderstood His grave, and declared that His body had been stolen by unknown resurrectionists. He so fully consented to be misunderstood that He bared and slapped His breast, merged with scorn. He answered not a word. You cannot come up to the standard you can imitate in some small way the patience of Christ.

There are enough present troubles in the world without the perpetual exhumation of past miseries. If you have a quarrel at home or your church, do not allow the [illegible] tunes in long meter. Far better that your patience augmented by the consideration that the misfortunes of this life will soon terminate.

This last summer I stood on a Sparrow hill, four miles from Moscow, the identical place where Napoleon stood when he looked down upon the city which he was about to capture. His army had been in long and awful fights and fearful cold weather, and when they came to Sparrow hill a mighty shout went up from tens of thousands of hoarse voices, "Moscow, Moscow!" I did not wonder at the transport. A river of gold sweeps round the city. A river of gold [illegible] cles it with brilliance. It is a picture that you place in your memorial gallery of three or four most beautiful things on the earth. Napoleon's army [illegible] it in four divisions four overwhelming [illegible] rents of valor and pomp, down the hill and through the beautiful [illegible] across the bridges and into the city which surrendered without [illegible] resistance because the avalanche was irresistible. There is the [illegible] which Napoleon slept, and [illegible] which must have been very [illegible] oh, how short the stay! Fire [illegible] all parts of the city simultaneously, and out that army into the snows of Russia, which 95,000 men perished. [illegible] triumphal march turn into humiliation!

To-day while I speak we come to Calvary hill, a glorious hill of Christian salvation. These hosts of God have had their march and fearful battles and [illegible] again and again mingled with [illegible] ies, but to-day we come in [illegible] great city, the capital of the [illegible] residence of the King and [illegible] those who are to reign with Him for [illegible] and ever. Look at the towers and [illegible] them ring with eternal jubilee.

Look at the house of mourning [illegible] where many of our loved ones [illegible] hold the streets of burnished gold, [illegible] hear the rumble of the chariots [illegible] who are more than conquerors [illegible] from being driven back, as the [illegible] gates are wide open for our entrance [illegible] are marching on and marching [illegible] every step brings us nearer the [illegible]

At what hour we shall enter [illegible] power to foretell, but once [illegible] the blood washed host on Mount Zion. It may be in the bright [illegible] the dark midnight. It may be [illegible] air is laden with springtime [illegible] chilled with falling snows. [illegible] must and enter we will through [illegible] offered us as the chief of sinners [illegible] hills than any I have spoken of [illegible] that city. More radiant [illegible] saw in the Russian valley with [illegible] that great metropolis. No [illegible] gration shall drive us forth. [illegible] fires kindled in that city [illegible] of a splendor that shall [illegible] never die. Reaching that [illegible] there will be a parting, but [illegible] parting. There will be an [illegible] but no sadness in the [illegible] and there we will part with [illegible] best friends we ever had [illegible] her in heaven, for she never [illegible] While love and joy and other [illegible] heaven, she will stay out [illegible] tiful Patience, long suffering [illegible] at that gate say "Good-bye" [illegible] in the battle of life, but now [illegible] gained the triumph you need [illegible] I bound up your wounds, [illegible] are all healed. I soothed [illegible] ments, but you pass now [illegible] ions of heaven. I can do no [illegible] and there is nothing for me [illegible] where there are no burdens [illegible] Good-bye. I go back into the [illegible] which you came up to rescue [illegible] among the hospitals and [illegible] bereft households and [illegible] cery of the world's sorrow [illegible] and I must descend. Up [illegible] poor suffering world I [illegible] and comfort and [illegible] itself expires and on all [illegible] in all its valleys and on all [illegible] is not one soul left that [illegible] tience."

THE MUSKRAT AT HOME.

How He Builds and Lives and Masquerades as Terrapin.

The muskrats have begun to build their winter houses and put on their winter coats. Among the waving flags thousands of coneshaped muskrat houses are in course of construction. The family habitation is made of dry, coarse flags and grasses, small pieces of water-soaked wood and small stones, all cemented together by a peculiar mortar which only the muskrat knows how to prepare by chewing clay and mud into a fine preparation. The old negro hunter declares that the cementing is done with evenness and precision by the industrious little worker by means of its paws. Two or three holes or "leads" allow the rats to pass out or enter below the ice. The houses are rough on the outside and are built from three to five feet high. Old hunters and close observers of the habits of the muskrat say that the little marsh dwellers know in advance how high the spring tides will rise. As verification of this claim it is observed that all beds in a given marsh are of the same height.

The houses below the water line are bare, mud inside, with a floor of sticks and grasses a few feet above the water. Upon this scaffold-like floor the rats are said to lie with their heads toward the "lead," ready at a moment's notice to dash out and appear at the surface 200 yards away in deep water. The law passed by the last Legislature gives added protection to these, the most popular fur producers on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Delaware, which are caught by the hundred thousand each winter. The little animals are in many cases caught in steel traps secured by strong chains. As soon as the rat is trapped it plunges into the water weighed down by the trap, and is drowned. A muskrat authority gives the interesting bit of information that, while a muskrat is compelled to breathe under water, it can travel for miles under the ice by a scientific air-producing process which enables it to remain under the icy covering for hours. In order to do this it must stop as often as once in twenty minutes and eject its breath into the water. This air rises to the surface, forming a big pale bubble. After it has been exposed to the water for a few minutes the bubble becomes oxygenated, when the rat inhales the globule and resumes its journey.

Muskrats when served by the Eastern Shore cook as "mock terrapin" will challenge the epicure to distinguish it from the real Chesapeake diamond back. When properly skinned the musky taste and odor entirely disappear and when properly cooked the almost black flesh is juicy, tender and sweet. The food of the rat is the roots of marsh grasses and shrubs which grow on the shores and no morsel of food is touched until it has been thoroughly washed.—Chestertown (Md.) Correspondence in the Baltimore Sun.

CURIOUS FACTS.

The report comes from Damascus that the remains of a valuable library that escaped destruction when Tamerlane sacked the city in 1401 have been discovered by one of the city officials.

The Journal L'Apiculteur records a curious observation of a specialist, namely, that nightingales devour the drones of a hive and leave workers unmolested. As an experiment, twelve of the former and six of the latter were killed and placed by the hive; the twelve were eaten, the six not touched.

The remains of an ancient gallery were recently found six feet below the surface at Tottenham marshes during the excavations for the new reservoirs of the East London Water Company. It is supposed to have belonged to the Danes, who were defeated in Lea Valley by King Alfred in 894 A. D.

One of the skyscrapers in New York City has a daily population of 3100, and the mail sent out from it averages 18,000 pieces a day. Every forty-five minutes a mail wagon from the Post-office carries away from this building about seventy-five pounds of outgoing mail. Another New York office building sends out 35,000 pieces of mail every week day.

A remarkable case of the death of a little girl from the bite of a fly comes from St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. The child complained that a fly had bitten her on the nose. Her face soon began to swell, it was not long before she was delirious, and in spite of every effort she died. The hospital autopsy developed the fact that blood-poisoning had resulted probably from poisonous microbes introduced into the system by the fly. Such cases are not without precedent, but are rare.

The village of Neodesha, Kan., was recently visited by a tornado, and at the end of the excitement a farmer living in the vicinity stuck his head out of his cyclone cellar and found that his choicest field was occupied by a strange house of small dimensions. He could not identify the building as belonging to any of his acquaintances, and up to date all his efforts to do so have been unavailing.

School Teachers Have Their Worries.

The Pamunky Indian school is again without a teacher because the braves of the village insist on proposing marriage to the school ma'ams. The last teacher left after enduring the attentions as long as she could. The State board of education is in a quandry over the matter.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

KEEP YOUR FIGURE.

Woman Advised to Exercise to Attain This End.

Advice to the woman of 30: "Keep your figure." How many women are lolling up and down the verandas of our summer hotels who are sights to look at! They have neither form nor shape and are only a little past middle age. If you watch them you will notice that their arms are almost helpless, like those of deformed people, yet they are in correct proportion with their bodies, but useless for want of exercise. Now, it is the arms that must act as propellers to reduce the size of the figure. If they had been used to slap the hands together over the head every day for a year the abdomen would have been reduced, the rollse of unsightly flesh scattered and a good walk, instead of a waddle, would have been the result. There is absolutely no need for a thickness of waist or cushions of fat because of advancing years. These are the result of lethargy in the beginning of the increase. Use dumb bells, practice lying on your face, then support the body by gradual lifting on the palm of the hands, rising slowly to full height. Join a physical culture class and have your weight recorded every day. Work until you are bathed in perspiration—it will be a decreasing bath—and keep up the effort until you have made a return to your normal weight and condition. Keep your figure.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. MINISTER SAVED

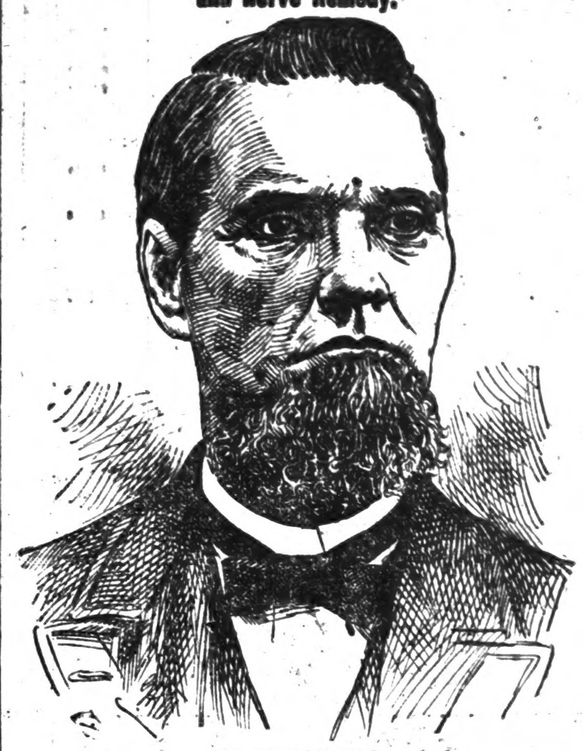
Rev. Henry Langford entirely cured of Nervous Prostration by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.



REV. HENRY LANGFORD.

Rev. Henry Langford, the eminent Baptist divine of Weston, W. Va., has just escaped utter nervous and physical prostration. He is pastor of four churches. "For ten years," he said, "I have been nervous and growing worse all these years. During the last four or five years I became so nervous I could scarcely sign my name so it could be read. I was so nervous that I could not read my own sermon notes after they had been laid aside awhile.

"I was unable to hold my head steady in the pulpit, nor could I hold or handle my books and papers without embarrassment, owing to the trembling and weakness of my hands and arms. I was so nervous that I could scarcely feed myself. In fact, my nervous system was wrecked.

"I tried many remedies recommended by physicians, but found no permanent relief.

"One day I was in the store of R. S. Ogden, at Sarvis, W. Va., and he said to me: 'You take two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and if you say it don't help you, you need not pay for it.'

"I took two bottles of this medicine and found so much relief that I bought two more bottles, and now I am wonderfully improved in health and in strength. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick. Too much cannot be said in praise of this splendid medicine. I say this for the good of other sufferers from nervous and prostrating diseases who can be cured by this remedy. For myself, I am thankful to God that I found Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and for what it has done for me."

Champion Them a Pennorel.

In a certain North Dakota town there are two physicians, one with a long record of cures and the other popularly rated as "no good."

The favored doctor found his services in great request, but as payment was not always forthcoming he made a rule that a certain class of his patients should pay in advance.

One winter's night he was roused by two farmers from a hamlet ten miles away, the wife of one of whom was seriously ill. He told them to go to the other doctor, but they refused, saying they would prefer his services. "Very well," replied the medico. "In that case my fee is $10, the money to be paid now."

The men remonstrated, but the doctor was obdurate and shut down his window. He waited, however, to hear what they would say. "Well, what will we do now?" asked the farmer whose wife was ill. And the reply that was given must have been as gratifying as it was amusing to the departing doctor. It was: "I think you would better give it. The funeral would cost you more."

The minstrel was infirm old.

"O may we all feel the same wen death catches hold of us."

Clanton, Dec 20 1900

Editor Banner. Please allow me space to express my opinion about stock law. I bitterly oppose it. We do not need it at all. What we need is something for the betterment of the majority of our people, especially the laboring class, and not for a few speculators, and those who are too lazy to build fences. While it would be of great benefit (in the way of speculation) to those who own large plantations, there are numbers and numbers of people who are not able to own lands, that would either have to dispose of their stock or rent pastures. This is the point they are driving at. They want to force this poor class of people to rent their pastures and thus speculate upon their honest labor. There is no justice in such, and we must not have it. Let every one come to the front and not be imposed upon by something that is destructive to our honest, laboring class of people, those who are not afraid of work. Unless the laboring people will unite and contend for their rights, speculation will ever long rule our county.

Randolph, Dec. 15, 1900

Editor Banner. I see the stock law is now being agitated again. I am deeply impressed with the idea that Chilton needs anything else but such a law; there it neither reason or need of such a law. I find that there is one once and a while that it would help, but there are five that it would hurt to one that it would help. There are a few men that live in little towns, and some that have large bodies of land that want such a law because they can fence in a large pasture and rent it to those not blessed as they are, and rent to them and make money at same Now, those gentlemen are out of a Christian spirit in offering to enslave the people in any such a way. I want any of those to give a reason for the act. Such men certainly are not after any good to their fellowman, but are at enmity for self greed. Talk about trusts and slavery and speculation, and nothing else can beat a stock law for this country. Now, if those men want to put up their stock and feed them they can do so without making the rest of us put ours up. We have good room and plenty of it for our stock, and we can have as much of it as we want. That law would say in itself not much of anything else but trouble and enemies. Now Mr. Editor I have two neighbors come from a county that had stock law in it, they said they left it, and if it comes here they will move again. Now I don't want to say anything hard about those parties wanting a stock law, but I don't thank no man to treat me nor my neighbors no such way, and if it does come I will always blame them for it, but I hope the men that is to make laws for us, will not make such a sad mistake as stock law in Chilton county. Now just think of it, put up what little you can feed and kill or sell the rest. No, stop the devilish scheme. Best wishes to the Editor and readers.

S. E. WALDRUP.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years to our knowledge, not a single one, has resulted in pneumonia. Those Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash avenue, Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by CLANTON DRUG CO., and D. I. DERAMUS, Verbena.

Calera, Dec. 10, 1900

Editor Banner. If you will allow me a little space in the columns of your paper, I want to say a few words to the people of Chilton about this abominable stock law which is being agitated by some people who certainly don't know what they want. I can speak for beat 2, we don't want it, for many reasons; we have a vast quantity of lands which are hardly fit for nothing except pasturage, and it is by the increase of our stock we are able to make a living on our poor lands. Our adjoining county here has a few beats under the stock law Now, I have been through that stock law country this past summer. A most horrid thing it is you see. Here and there a poor old cow, a few hogs standing in what was called a pasture, but the ground [illegible] as clear of vegetation as the [illegible] of Clanton. On the outside [illegible] other vegetation all over [illegible]s and roadside until we [illegible]ely walk for it. Occasionally could see some poor child with a cow roped [illegible] her out to graze, with [illegible] barking and upon them Let those that are not already convinced on this important matter visit the stock law regions and see for themselves, and ask some old farmer how he likes the stock law before you get the curse on you. I said it was an abominable thing. God in his allwise creation of things caused the grass to grow, the forest to spring to the herbs and green foliage for the brute creation, and for a people to legislate against it, it's a wonder God don't pour out His wrath upon them. Let the people in Chilton put this down while it is in its bud. I have more fence it seems like than I can keep up, but give me no stock law. Don't let them tell you, you would have less stock and better stock, you soon would have no stock at all. We cannot make enough feed to feed stock twelve months in the year. The voters of beat 2 will never give the stock law a majority if left to a vote, which I suppose the legislature has, or will grant before it is made a law.

Now, a good deal is said about a better system of road laws. Yes our roads are too bad. But with due respect to those in charge the law we have had has not been put in force in our community.

Thorsby, Dec. 17, 1900

Editor Banner. This past week has seen a petition circulated in this vicinity, asking for the appointment of another postmaster for this town. There is no complaint made against the present postmaster, Mr. D. N. Riggins, but they simply want the office. I have had occasion to visit a number of towns in Chilton and Shelby counties while canvassing for the "Farmers Mutual Insurance Association," and I say that Thorsby postoffice is managed "as good as the best, and better than the most." The office is open from early morn till late at night, and never a mail that comes to-day is carried over till the next day for distribution. What other postoffice can say as much?

Yours for good officials.

How to Cure Croup.

Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia Dutches county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the bese medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of Cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by CLANTON DRUG CO., and D. I. DERAMUS, Verbena.

Verbena, Dec. 18, 1900

Editor Banner. We hear a good deal of the bad condition of the public roads, and much of the defects of the present road law; many remedies suggested, and at the same time very little work is being done on the roads to make them passable.

Our grand juries generally say, rather reluctantly, that the roads can pass, but suggest that they be improved, etc.

Coopers, with several men subject to road duty is protected against road work by virtue of a charter incorporating the place, and say they will keep up the roads a certain distance each way; you cant find where much has been done on the roads there. But Coopers is not alone. Hardly a road in this section would pass an inspection under the present law. We all want good roads, but want the other fellow to work

It begins to look as if bank examiners took a great deal for granted under ordinary circumstances.

When Londoners hear the sounding boom of a loud voiced gong ringing down the street they must now keep the way clear. The new voice belongs to the fire engines, and supersedes the old "Hi! Hi!" the warning cry of the firemen.

A feature of the postal system in the United Kingdom, which has not yet been made a part of the United States is the telegraph. This is a branch of the service that has made great strides, being about on a par as regards the rapidity of its growth with the postal-card branch. The number of messages increased from 39,146,283 in 1886 to 90,415,123 in 1900, an increase of about 130 per cent. in the decade and a half. It is only about thirty years since the transfer of the telegraphs to the postal system, but in that period the number of messages has increased over ninefold, the messages sent in 1870-71 numbering only 9,850,177.

Sims, Reeves, the English lyric tenor singer, whose death at an advanced age, the other day, was almost a British institution so intimately was he connected with whatever progress in musical art had been made in England during half a century past. Poets and composers gladly laid the treasures of their brain coinage at the feet of this autocrat of the concert stage, and the public showered upon him one fortune after another as their gifts slipped through his fingers. Within his chosen sphere of balad and oratorio singing he was supreme, and many years may elapse before another such tone magician shall arise in England to give perfect utterance to the nation's favorite music.

Some acquaintance with the expectations and the despair of science is necessary in order to appreciate the full beneficence of the Zeppelin airship. Whatever may happen hereafter it is a fact that in the present century of science and invention Count Zeppelin ascended in his machine a thousand feet from the earth's surface, traveled a distance of sixty-eight miles, made a detour and came down at the starting point, and that he subsequently ascended five-eighths of a mile and executed various manoeuvres. The airship may get beyond control and sail away, as so many lost balloons have done, but no twentieth century boaster can deny that the dirigible airship is the invention of our own time.

Ballooning across Europe is not an unexciting sport, aside from the dangers which naturaly attend upon such ventures. Ont of the balloons in the recent race from Paris to Russia was the St. Louis, which lost because it was filled with ordinary gas instead of with hydro-gas, like the winning Centaure. When they crossed the German-Russian frontier the guards on both sides of the line took pot shots at them, and they could hear the bullets whizzing about their heads in a most annoying fashion. When they alighted in Russia they were promptly arrested for being in the country without passports, and they had considerable trouble in convincing their captors that they were not spies, but simply enthusiastic followers of "le sport." They finally got back to France, with their ballons in safety.

With the beginning of the present school term, the teaching of stenography, bookkeeping, typewriting and other branches usually taught in business schools has been introduced in the public schools in many cities. Chicago is among the number, and there the innovation is the subject of much comment, generally in opposition. This last development, it is argued, does not stand on a like footing with manual training. The latter is not a teaching of trades, but of the principles of trades; it is a training of the senses and a development of latent ability. The other, on the contrary, is the fitting of persons, at public expense, for well-defined occupations. It is a serious blow at private schools, established to train people to be stenographers and bookkeepers, and it is likely to work to the detriment of those now employed in such capacities, by supplying more labor of this kind than is needed. As the Chicago objectors say, this departure in school methods can only be justified as the first step in the development of the public-school system into the fitting of pupils for work in all walks of life.

The coming century will have twenty-four leap years, the greatest number possible. This opportunity afforded women will certainly give them numerous leap year privileges. It is possible, however, that before the twentieth century is many years old women will have assumed men's rights, offering marriage among them.

A TEXTILE SHOW

Is Assured For Atlanta In 1902 At Largely Attended Citizens' Meeting.

The city of Atlanta, Ga., the citizens, business houses and railroads entering the city will be asked to contribute $100,000 toward a preliminary fund for the purpose of the International Textile exposition.

This definite decision was reached at an enthusiastic meeting of the general textile exposition committee and the board of directors of the Interstate Fair Association, held Monday afternoon in the rooms of the Business Men's League.

That a big exposition should be held in 1902 was positively decided, and plans were formulated and set in motion looking to the acquisition of immediate control and ownership of the buildings now at Piedmont park. Incidently a resolution was adopted recommending that a fair be held as usual next fall. If the present plans of the exposition committee are carried out an interstate fair is guaranteed every year for the next ten years.

A central executive committee was appointed with plenary power to formulate the scope and a detailed plan of organization, and engineering the general movement for a great textile exhibition in 1902. The adoption of the above resolution was the most important and definite step accomplished at the meeting. They were offered by Colonel W. A. Hemphill.

NO HARM MEANT.

Atlanta Dentist Is Exonerated of Alleged Kissing Assault.

An Atlanta dispatch says: The proceedings against Dr. John S. Thompson, who was arrested on a charge of assault on Miss Ida Hollingsworth, were stopped in court, the warrant withdrawn and the dentist exonorated.

The story of the arrest together with the charges of improper conduct toward Miss Hollingsworth, who had gone to his office to have some dental work done, caused a sensation owing to the high standing of the dentist.

The attorneys on both sides and the parties interested reached a mutual agreement and there will be no further proceedings.

M'KINLEY TO COME SOUTH.

He Will Traverse This Section On His Way to San Francisco.

President McKinley will pass through the south some time next May. The date is not yet fixed, but it will probably be about the middle of the month. He will then be on his way to San Francisco, his route being over the Southern railway, the Atlanta and West Point and the Louisville and Nashville to New Orleans, and from there to San Francisco by the Southern Pacific.

The Pacific coast people have for a long time been endeavoring to get the president to go out there and witness the launching of thebattleship Ohio at the Union Iron works, and this furnishes a special reason for his visit at that time.

SENSATIONAL BUBBLE BURSTS.

Preacher Appears Before Atlanta Police Board and "Explains" Things.

Dr. L. G. Broughton appeared before the Atlanta, Ga., police board Monday night for the purpose of explaining his remarks in a recent sermon about the mayor and policemen drinking and gambling at the races.

The doctor took the position that he spoke of the mayor and the police conjunctively, and that the word "drinking" referred to the mayor, and the word "gambling" referred to the police. He stated he had proved that the police were betting on horse races, and that that was gambling. The outcome of the meeting was satisfactory to all concerned, and the matter was promptly dropped.

VOTING TIME FIXED.

Nation's Solons to Act On the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty.

A Washington special says: Just before adjourning late Monday afternoon the senate gave its consent to the fixing of a definite time to vote upon the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Senators Money and Mason had occupied the time of the executive session in making speeches upon the treaty, and when Mr. Mason, who was the last speaker, concluded, Senator Lodge renewed his request to take a vote next Thursday. No voice was raised in opposition and the unanimous agreement was recorded.

THE QUEST OF THE POLE

Many Arctic Expeditions Are Being Prepared For 1901.

AN EXCITING RACE PROMISED

An American, a Russian, a Canadian, an Italian, a Norwegian, and a German Will Vie With One Another to Be the First to Plant His Country's Flag Upon the Earth's Most Northern Point

London (By Cable).—Evelyn B. Baldwin, of the United States Weather Bureau, who is preparing an expedition in search of the North Pole, has arrived here to consult with scientists and to inspect ships. Mr. Baldwin said he had decided to adopt the Franz Josef Land route, the Greenland route being well covered by Peary and Sverdrup, and that he hoped to get away next summer.

The famous Russian ice crusher Ermack, which is to attempt to reach the North Pole in 1901, under the command of Vice-Admiral Makaroff, of the Imperial Russian Navy, is being fitted out at Newcastle for the expedition, and Captain Bernier, the Canadian explorer, is busy in London fitting out the Scottish King. He shortly will appear before the Royal Geographical Society and outline his plans.

Dr. Fridtjof Hansen, the Norwegian explorer, and the Duke of Abruzzi, a nephew of the late King of Italy, and a cousin of the present King, who recently returned from an Arctic expedition, have united to form a joint expedition north.

THE RACE OF NATIONS FOR THE NORTH POLE.

This is a map of the polar regions, the circumscribed line being the Arctic Circle. The curved lines pointing to the pole represent the routes of the expeditions that are getting ready to start in 1901. In the great international race Lieutenant Peary has a long lead, being now more than half way from the borders of the Arctic to the goal.

The Russian expedition under Vice-Admiral Makaroff, which is to go on board the ice-breaking steamer Ermack, promises to be interesting. The sides of the Ermack are fifteen times as strong as those of the usual commercial steel ship, and she can run astern as easily as she can go ahead. She has cut her way through solid ice fourteen feet in thickness and through heaped-up, or "hummocky" ice of more that twice that thickness. She is 302 feet long, and has three propellers aft and one forward.

The plans of Admiral Makaroff for reaching the Pole are based upon his experience in navigating the Arctic regions. He will enter the region of perpetual ice a little to the eastward of Franz Josef Land, and will avoid the Spitzbergen region. He hopes he may be able to steam to the Pole. If not, she will get as near as possible, and then an expedition in dog sleds will push forward.

With these expeditions and the German expedition, the year 1901 promises to be eventful in the history of searchers for the North Pole.

The expedition to be commanded by Evelyn B. Baldwin is being fitted out under the auspices of William Ziegler, the Brooklyn millionaire, who is ambitious to have the American flag placed at the North Pole before any other ensign gets there. This expedition will use two steamers and balloons.

WAR TAX BILL PASSED.

Pension Bill Carrying $145,145,230 Goes Through Without Debate.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—The House passed the War Revenue Reduction bill, and sent it to the Senate without a single change in the schedules as reported by the Ways and Means Committee. The bill carried a reduction of $40,000,000.

The amendment placed in the bill to tax express receipts was defeated on a yea-and-nay vote, 125 to 139.

The Pension Appropriation bill, carrying $145,145,230, was passed in exactly thirteen minutes.

Sporting Brevities.

There will be an active indoor athletic season this winter in New Jersey.

James J. Corbett, the pugilist, hopes to open a boxing club in Cincinnati next month.

Fred Mossom, the widely known trainer, died at Washington, of typhoid pneumonia. He was about forty-one years old and leaves a widow and one child.

Margaret Gast recently broke the record of the cycling world for continuous century riding by making 2000 miles in twelve days, eight hours and fifty-five minutes.

BRITISH LOST HUNDREDS

Disaster at Magalies Berg One of the Worst of the War.

Four Companies of Fusiliers Captured After Ammunition Gave Out—Joubert's Son Among Boer Killed.

London (By Cable).—The following report from General Kitchener was received at the War Office.

"Pretoria.—Clements brought in his force to Commando Nek, unopposed. The casualties were, I regret to say, heavy; killed, five officers and nine of other ranks; missing, eighteen officers and 555 of other ranks. These latter were four companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers, who were stationed on the hill, and some yeomanry and other details sent up to support them. The Boers suffered severely."

Later General Kitchener sent the following:

"Clements says the four companies of the Northumberlands held out on the hill as long as their ammunition lasted. The Boer force attacking the hill was 2000 strong, while another force of 1000 attacked Clements's camp. By 6.20 a. m. the hill was carried. Reinforcements of one company of the Yorkshires failed to reach the top. Clements's retirement was carried out with regularity. All the ammunition not taken away was destroyed. He reports that all behaved very well.

"A flag of truce which has come into Commando Nek from the Boers says Joubert's son was killed, and further reports their losses very heavy."

The Boers later released five officers and 316 men, who were captured in their assault upon General Clements's camp.

This reverse in the Magalies Berg range west of Pretoria came as a shock to those optimists who have believed that the war was over and that the recent minor reverses were merely small pieces of ill-luck unavoidable in guerilla warfare.

A party of Brabant's Horse, consisting mainly of raw recruits, engaged a superior force of Boers, near Zastron, Orange River Colony, losing four killed, sixteen wounded, and 120 taken prisoners.

General Kitchener is reported to have sent a fresh and urgent request to the Government to send out every available mounted man.

Dispatches from Lorenzo Marques assert that all the Boer forces are plentifully supplied with ammunition but terribly in want of food and clothing.

AFRAID OF THE BELGIAN HARE.

Fruit Interests of Western States Taking Restrictive Measures.

Washington, D. C. (Special). — The Department of Agriculture has heard from California and other Western States that the Belgian hare has become not only a nuisance, but a serious menace to the fruit and other growing industries. The "fad" demand for it has ceased, and fanciers who cannot give away their animals are turning them loose to multiply at large.

The County Commissioners in San Diego, Cal., have taken action toward prohibiting the importation of hares, and restricting the terms under which they may be kept. The State of Washington is contemplating similar legislative action. The people of California are seriously alarmed lest the Belgian hare become as much of a pest as the little brown rabbit in Australia.

Fear of Hydrophobia Caused Death.

Skeletons of Dinosauri Found.

Skeletons of two gigantic dinosauri have been discovered on the military reservation at Fort Meade, S. The second specimen was discovered later. It is in perfect preservation and is part of an animal fully forty feet long.

BOARD LOOKS INTO DEATH OF CADET

The Family of Booz Presents Their Testimony.

ALLEGATIONS ARE SENSATIONAL

Unfortunate Matter Will Be Fully Investigatd For the Benefit of Congress.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: The taking of testimony in the case of Oscar L. Booz, the West Point cadet who died some two weeks ago from injuries which his parents alleged were inflicted at the West Point Military Academy, was begun Monday by the board of inquiry appointed by the secretary of war. Two sessions were held at Bristol, the home of the Booz family, and another in Philadelphia in the late afternoon. The members of the board are Generals Brooke, Clous and Bates, accompanied by Captain Dean, of the Fifth artillery, who acted as recorder.

The court sat in the study of the church which adjoins the Booz homestead. The witnesses were William H. Booz, father; Mrs. Sarah Booz, mother; Nellie Booz, sister of the young man; Rev. Dr. Alison, Dr. Weaver, a Bristol physician who attended Oscar Booz, and several others. The board left for New York Monday night and from thence to West Point to continue the investigation.

Mr. Booz, the father, testified that his son had written home on several occasions that he had been hazed. He entered the academy in June, 1898, and in August he wrote home that he had been in a fight and had received a pair of black eyes and that he had been knocked out by a blow over the heart. Mr. Booz said he went to West Point to see his son and told him he must stand it. Oscar told his father he expected to be hazed, but he did not want to be treated brutally. The father said Oscar did not want his mother to know how he was treated.

Mr. Booz then told how Oscar had informed him that tabasco sauce had been forced down his throat. Oscar said the cadets would pull the blankets from him and pour hot wax from a candle on his body. Mr. Booz thought the officers at the academy could stop the brutality, but he would not say they condoned it. He could not understand why they treated his son in such a brutal manner. Oscar spent all of last year at home in an endeavor to build up his health. He never would reveal the identity of his persecutors.

Mrs. Booz testified that her son had written her that West Point was unfit for a young man who wanted to do right and that parents should not send their sons there.

Nellie Booz, a sister of the deceased young man, testified that in a letter received by the family on August 7th Oscar told of the fight he had with another cadet and that he fought until he was winded. The cadets called him a coward and a disgrace to the corps. If he did not go into the fight, he said, the "fellows would make life unbearable for him." He asked his father for permission to resign. Oscar described many little indignities which were practiced on him. If he had not swallowed the tabasco sauce he would have strangled. They were holding him down and he could do nothing else.

Dr. J. Solis Cohen, a throat specialist, testified that Oscar had tuberculosis of the larynx and that when he came to Philadelphia for treatment his case was hopeless. He thought if tabasco sauce had been forced down Booz's throat it may have made him more susceptible to tuberculosis.

Sigmund S. Albert, a classmate of Oscar Booz, said that Boez was not hazed more than any other cadet. He was one of Booz's tent mates while in camp. He and Booz and other fourth year men, he said, were made to do "ridiculous stunts," such as making the upper classmen's beds and "other unmanly and disgraceful" things. What he meant by the latter, he said, was none of the public's business. One night some fourth year men were forced to open their mouths and shut their eyes, when some one squirted into their mouths what he believed to be tobasco sauce.

BRITONS ARE STUBBORN.

They Block Rapid Consummation of Peace Plans In China.

Such reports as the state department has had from Mr. Conger up to the present fail to develop a satisfactory reason for the insistance of the British government in amending the Pekin agreement on the one hand and for the hesitation of the foreign ministers to sign the agreement on the other.

A close perusal of the British suggestion still fails to show that it is in any sense material. As stated already it appears on its face to be nothing more than the elimination of an explanatory phase, which in no degree affects the action proposed in the section of the agreement to which amendment applies is left to stand by itself without a statement of reason which would not even qualify or limit the taxation, which in this case relates to the punishment of the boxer leaders.

Consequently it is believed in Washington that this disagreement will be merely temporary and the most serious consequences that can ensue is an annoying delay at a moment when the worst phase of the negotiation seems to have safely passed.

BEFORE SUPREME COURT.

Question of Constitution Following the Flag Will Soon Be Settled.

Monday the supreme court of the United States began hearing argument with the view of determining whether the Philippines, Porto Rico, Guam and the Island of Jolo are American territory, governed and protected by the constitution.

Several cases involving the question of whether the constitution follows the flag are before the court, and the learned judges will soon determine the relations that actually exist between the new possessions and the nation.

Attorney General Griggs appears for the government and former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle for the people of the islands, as represented by the petitioners.

MAYOR'S RESIGNATION IN.

Atlanta City Council Has Knotty Problem To Tackle Again.

The resignation of Mayor James G. Woodward, of Atlanta, was presented to the city council Monday afternoon and was laid upon the table until Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

This was done after a lengthy discussion by members of council as to the best disposition to make of the resignation. Some members were in favor of accepting it, others wanted to refuse to accept it, while others favored deferring action until another day. It was the latter class that won when the vote was taken.

A LITTLE WOMAN OF BUSINESS

HOW SHE EARNED HER CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Mrs. Nagle remembered that Christ- was coming and gave consent.

"Eight bushels!" said the man, laughing when he saw how young the applicant was, "you'll never stick to

"YOU'LL NEVER FINISH THEM."

'em till they're done. I've got to have 'em in ten days exactly."

"Yes, I will," replied Nora firmly. "My father says that to 'look before you leap,' is a sound business principle, so I've considered a good deal. I'll have them all picked over in ten days sure."

Consequently nearly every spare minute before and after school Nora picked over beans. The first bushel was "just fun," the second not quite so funny, the third not comical at all, the fourth needed this mental reminder from Nora to encourage herself: "This is business; I've undertaken it and I must finish."

Various were her expedients to rest her wrists during the movements of sorting; in her dreams she was constantly engaged in picking out the damaged and discolored beans that tumbled low would get back into the culled quantity, and when the seventh bushel was begun Nora's sister, hearing some one fall in the kitchen, went out and discovered Nora, her head within the basket of beans in a dead faint.

Then Mrs. Nagle thought it time to interfere. She sent the girl outdoors for her customary exercise and fresh air, saying firmly:

"No more beans, my dear."

But big Brother Tom, impressed by the quivering lips of the little sister, whispered: "Never mind, sis, we'll have a family party to-night and rope 'em all in to help."

So invitations were given out and in the evening father, mother, two sisters and big brother Tom and little brother Ben and Nora gathered in the kitchen and made short work of the remaining beans. Then they had some of the company peanut wafers and guessed conundrums and in conclusion Nora gave them a grateful kiss all around. And that, her father said, was very good pay.

"You're a clipper to pick beans, ain't you?" said the man when he came for them. "Now, you watch the postoffice here, little woman, and I shouldn't wonder if you got a nice dollar bill."

Nora did watch the postoffice, but no dollar came. Not that evening nor the next day nor ever. The bean man proved to be a swindler who had disposed of his sorted product immediately and left for parts unknown without paying any of the bean pickers.

Did Nora cry? Not a bit, although she felt very much like it.

"Would it have been better, father, to say I must have my pay when he hauled the beans away? Would that be the way to do business with a stranger?"

Mr. Nagle nodded, very proud to have his little daughter draw this helpful conclusion instead of merely bemoaning the fact of being victimized. He also felt indignant enough to pay her from his own pocket, but waited, wishing to see what she would do.

Sure now after that Nora had many chances to earn pennies. When she did errands for different members of the family to her surprise they insisted upon dropping payment into the little [illegible] she had made ready for her bea

Nora caught at the opportunity eagerly and every fine day promenaded the village streets with somebody's baby.

At last the dollar was earned and Nora firmly refused to test further the kindness of her friends.

"Mother says 'enough is enough.' That sounds right, and I'm going to do errands after this for 'commodation's sake," she insisted.

That night Nora told her plans to her pillow. "No one will ever know," she whispered. "How can they if I never tell. Let's see. Two pairs of stockings will cost fifty cents; I know where I can get a fascinator for nineteen cents—the blue is the prettier, but I think I better get red; it won't show soil so quickly—that's six-

If I did she'd either thank me to death, and that would make me feel so shamed, or else her father would think I might give her something all the time, and my father wouldn't like that, and I guess my father knows what's best. Now, let's see—two pairs of stockings, a red fascinator, a pair of mittens—red, with long wrists—a hair-ribbon and a one-cent pencil. That just makes the dollar. And I shan't wait for Christmas, either. I'll slip off to-morrow morning before I go to [illegible] and buy 'em and hide 'em till [illegible]hen open Myra's door just [illegible] slip the bundle in; then

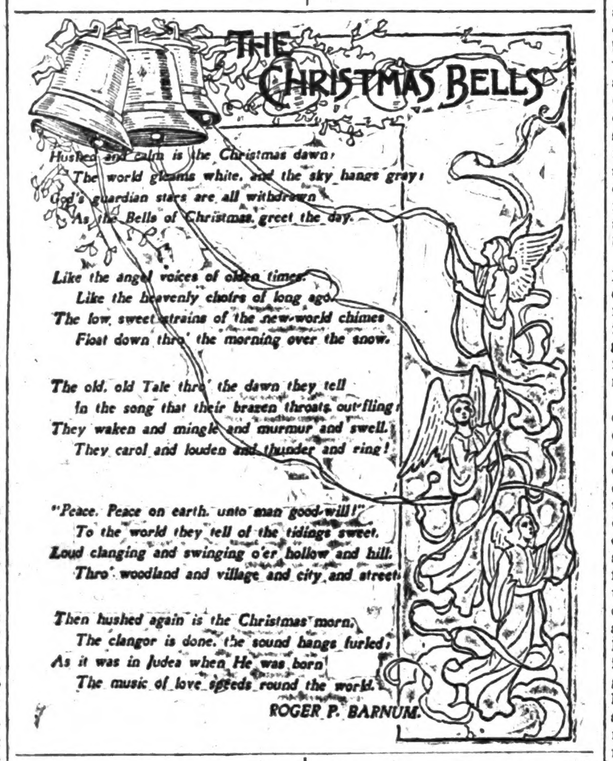
Scarcely a week had passed before the Nagles had conjectured the whole truth. Little brother Ben came home from school and told his mother that "Myra Pell, that skinny girl that lived in the alley, had a lot of new toggery and Nora acted just as if she owned her."



So the older members of the family could guess where the dollar went to, but they respected the little business woman's wishes. It is rumored, however, that Santa Claus is going to find the bean man and that Nora will find a dollar bill in her Christmas stocking.—Denio Stuart, in the Chicago Record.

Christmas Surprises.

"Let me see," said Mr. Flickerson, "what is it you are to get me for a Christmas present?"

"Why, those new curtains for the dining-room, you know," his wife answered.

"Oh, yes. And what is it I am to surprise you with?"

"Henry, I don't believe you really take the enthusiastic interest one should in these things at this glorious time of the year. You are to get me a new carpet for the hall."

Then he started for the office, full of the sublime significance of the merry Yuletide.

Oyster Canapes—Cut ten thin slices of bread, cut in rounds, toast and butter and place in oven to keep hot. Wash and drain one quart of oysters. Throw the oysters into a hot pan, shake quickly, and add one tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. When they reach the boiling point dish on the rounds of toast, garnish with a thin slice of lemon for each one, and serve at once.

Fruit Punch—Put one pint of water and one pound of sugar and the chopped yellow rind of a lemon on to boil. Boil five minutes; strain, and while hot slice into it two bananas; add one pint of grated pineapple (canned) and a quarter of a pound of candied cherries. When ready to serve add the juice of six lemons. Put in the centre of your punch bowl a square block of ice; pour over it two quarts of mineral water; add the fruit mixture and at the last minute two shredded oranges; mix all together. Serve in thin tumblers.

Roast Beef—The roast beef of old England still enters conspicuously into our Christmas fare. It may be new to many to learn that the object of serving it at this season was really to remind our forefathers of the bulls sacrificed by the Druids when the sacred mistletoe was cut.

Christmas Pudding—Mix together one pint of stale bread crumbs, three-quarters of a pound of stoned raisins, one-quarter of a pound of sifted flour, one-half a pound of cleaned currants, one-half a pound of shredded suet, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, one-half a pound of shredded citron, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half a teaspoonful each of nutmeg and allspice. Beat together four eggs, add one-half of a cupful of molasses (light) and one-half a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in one-half wineglass of hot water; stir this into the other ingredients add the grated rind and strained juice of a lemon; turn into a greased mold and steam, or boil, five hours. (The Christmas pudding is supposed to be emblematical of the rich offerings made by the three kings to the Infant in the stable at Bethlehem).

The President's Christmas.

Wagon loads of gifts are received at the White House at Christmas time. They come from all parts of the country, the majority of them from persons unknown to the President and his wife. These miscellaneous articles are the private property of the recipients, and the numerous parcels are placed in one of the family rooms for examination. They generally contain the names of the donors, and to all these notes of thanks are sent. On Christmas Eve all the employes of the house—the clerical staff, the ushers and domestic servants—are given, through the established munificence of the President, a fine fat turkey. Fifty fowls, selected from the best in the market, are purchased for this event, so that everybody about the famous mansion has reason for rejoicing.—Mary Nimmo Balentine, in the Woman's Home Companion.

The Children's Christmas.

Beneath the cedar and the pine,
And gleaming Christmas holly,
Our happy thoughts a wreath entwine,
Our silvern notes are jolly.
For in the home are charm and mirth,
And here were sadness, folly?

Beneath the Christmas holly.

A vicomte who married an American girl dropped his title on the eve of the wedding. It is strange to find a man getting rid of his assets in this fashion.

The Salisbury Government has already spent over $500,000,000 in fighting the Boers, and its current military and naval budget is the largest in British history.

The deepest mining shaft in the world will be the No. 5, at the Tamarack, at Houghton, Mich. This shaft was begun in August, 1895, and will be bottomed some time in January, 1901. When complete it will be a full mile in depth.

Emperor William of Germany has escaped one of the "risks of his trade." A woman threw a cleaver at him, which, missing him, struck the carriage. She was arrested, and adjudged insane. But her insanity ran in the direction of the manias of those who are not insane.

The Shah of Persia is said to have been the best customer the paste jewelry manufacturers of Paris have had in a long series of years. He bought a large quantity of genuine gems for the princesses—his daughters—and their mothers, but the imitations were considered good enough for the lesser lights in his harem.

The newest international exposition scheme is being worked up in Birmingham, Ala. It is proposed to hold in that city, between now and 1905, an immense "metallic" exposition. It is proposed to give especial attention to metals and minerals and their manufactures, though, of course, other features would be embodied.

A peculiar law case comes from Newport News, Va. A man was charged with forging a bank check. The case was clear, but the man was released by the court, it being shown that there was no internal revenue stamp on the check and, therefore, under a strict construction of the law, the alleged check was not legally a check and could not be admitted in evidence.

In the last year or two a number of American horses and jockeys have been carrying off the palm at the big English races. Lately there have been many complaints among English turfmen that English racing is becoming too Americanized, and rules have now been adopted that will shut out American turfmen. In recognition of this anti-American feeling, the Prince of Wales has discharged an American jockey whom he had engaged.

The moving sidewalk, which proved such a successful and attractive feature of the Paris Exposition, had a disastrous effect on the business of the storekeepers in the immediate vicinity—at least, so they say—besides upsetting their nervous systems by its constant rumbling. So the "Trottoir Roulant" will be taken into court and its proprietors made to show cause why they should not reimburse the worthy merchants for the injuries they claim to have sustained.

The penny-in-the-slot system of distributing gas through the poorer districts of London has proved so successful that attempts are now being made to supply electric light in the same way. The vestry of Battersea has erected a large generator station and laid the necessary cables. The fixtures are installed in each house free of cost to the customer, who simply pays for the amount of electricity he consumes. The profit derived from this method of distribution is said to be sufficient to enable the authorities to recoup themselves for the initial cost of the installation of fittings in the houses.

Believing that the judges who award prizes at animal shows look wiser than they are, a New York practical joker named Hughes entered at a Madison Square Garden cat show, a few years ago, a cat which he had caught in an alley. The entry card gave the feline a remarkable pedigree and a value of $3,000. The animal won a first prize. The same joker recently scored another victory at the great horse show in New York City. His "Puldeka Orphan" did not win a prize, but the judges found her qualified to compete with the costly thoroughbreds. Nobody seemed to have discovered that her name, if pronounced slowly, sounds like "pulled a car often." Even the entry, "by Metropolitan, dam Electricity," did not open the eyes of the judges. The mare was a broken-down car horse, for which Hughes had paid $11.50. She had been brushed up and trimmed for the horse show, and her stall was lined with velvet and decorated with costly flowers.

BIGGEST SALVAGE ON RECORD.

The Story of the St. Paul Aground With $1,250,000 of Gold.

When the big American line steamship St. Paul ran aground in a dense fog on the Jersey beach near the lower end of Long Branch, before daylight on January 25, 1896, Captain Clark, Lloyd's agent in New York, got word of it at 4 o'clock in the morning. He cabled instantly to London, and Lloyds was in possession of the news at 8:30 A. M. The St. Paul had been indulging in a spurt of speed with the swift Cunarder Campania, which in moderate weather is nearly a knot faster than the American ship; she got far out of her course, missing the Fire Island light, and drove up on the sands of the Jersey coast. She was held in the embrace of the shelving beach for ten days. The Campania was also reported to have touched bottom by an observant life saver patrolling the beach. Her commander and her agents declared that this was not so, but she undoubtedly came within view of folks along the shore. In the cargo of the St. Paul were one and a quarter millions in gold consigned to a firm in New York. Arrangements were made with the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company to have the stranded liner hauled off. She and her cargo, including the gold, were heavily insured. After it was found that it was going to be very difficult to float the big ship, the consignees of the gold, who needed it in their business, appealed to Captain Clark as Lloyd's agent to have it landed. It remained aboard the vessel three days; the fact of it being there rendered the underwriters liable for a heavier tax in the event of the vessel being floated. Naturally, the American line did not make any strenuous efforts to have the bullion discharged, and just as naturally Lloyd's were anxious to get it off as quickly as possible; for in the event of a storm arising and causing the destruction of the ship, the gold would have added so much more to the loss of the underwriters. Captain Clark chartered a steamer and offered to take charge of the gold and land it. Thereupon the captain obtained a promise that the gold would be landed immediately. Thus the underwriters were relieved of the further risk and expense of floating the stranded ship. The gold was transferred to the lighter Haggerty down a sagging shute suggestive stretch of canvas in bags, kegs and boxes. Twelve men armed with revolvers guarded the treasure as it was transferred from a pier to a truck and taken to a vault in Wall street. The award of $[illegible],000 for salvage service in the case of the St. Paul was the largest ever obtained in an Admiralty Court. The St. Paul was aground ten days. It was said that she had not a plate bent or a rivet started.—S. A. Ward in Ainslee's.

Some Old-Time Laws.

One hundred years ago pocket-picking was a capital offence, where anything worth more than a shilling was taken, for which the offender could be sentenced to death in this country. There were over 200 offences at that time for which death sentences could be passed. Sir Samuel Romilly, who devoted himself by pamphlet and Parliamentary agitation to the amelioration of the criminal law, succeeded after great difficulty in getting pocket-picking removed from the list. Very little more than 100 years ago a seaman was hanged for complaining of the quality of the provisions. Seventy men on board the Namen, in Portsmouth harbor, set out for London to lay their complaint as to the provisions before the Lords of the Admiralty. Fifteen of them procured an audience, but were ordered to be put in irons and carried back to Portsmouth to be tried by court-martial for mutiny. They were all sentenced to death, and one was actually hanged, the sentences on the other fourteen being remitted. In the sixteenth century death sentences could be passed for malicious tearing or defacing the garments of any person, breaking a bank of a fish pond, or cutting down a tree in an orchard.—Tit-Bits.

A New Barometer.

At the recent meeting of the British Association, A. S. Davis, of Leeds, showed a most interesting barometer. A glass tube ten inches long and an inch in diameter ends in a bulb below and reaches above into a mercury basin. The mercury flows down the tube, compressing the air. When not in use the barometer, with its stand, is kept upside down. It is inverted for use, and a reading quickly taken when the column has come to a standstill. When the ordinary barometer rises this one falls. The tube is water-jacketed, and a calcium chloride tube is inserted to dry the small quantity of air sucked in. The readings are said to be very accurate, though the range of each instrument is small.—Scientific American.

Curio Hunters Invade Rural England.

Nowadays there is scarcely a cottage too remote to be visited by the furniture collectors. Most districts are scoured by the agents of the large furniture firms in London, and the rural folk are beginning to understand the value of their old oak chairs and grandfather clocks and their beloved china, handed down from generation to generation. On genuine old willow pattern plates and dishes there is a great run nowadays, and many a cottage dresser has been shorn of its glory in consequence. Still, some of the poor people—all honor to them—cling to their old sticks and plates and refuse to be tempted by the offers of the old-curio hunters.—London Express.

CALL FOR COUNTY CONVENTION

A convention of the people of Chilton county is hereby called to meet at Clanton on Saturday, January 12, 1901, at 11 a.m., for the purpose of discussing the proposed Road Law, Stock Law, and Prohibition Law, and taking such action as may be deemed necessary.

Beat meetings should be held prior to that date and delegates elected to the county convention.

These three proposed Laws are alike of special interest to everyone, and consequently men of all parties are invited to express their views at this convention.

A merry and wise Christmas to you all.

In reply to a correspondent from Verbena, asking for information respecting the bill introduced by Mr. Oliver, we can only say we have not seen the bill, but feel satisfied it means the repeal of the prohibition law of this county. We refer our correspondent to the call for a convention to discuss this and other questions.

We heartily approve of the call for a county convention to discuss the three great measures now agitating this county, viz.: Road law, Stock law, and Prohibition law. We candidly confess we do not know what to advise in these questions. So far as we have been able to ascertain the opinions of the people seem to be about equally divided. There is no party politics in either of these measures, but Democrats, Populists and Republicans are all equally interested. A convention should be able to decide what the county wants.

Mass Meeting at Clanton

A mass meeting was held at the court house on Tuesday night to discuss the prohibition law. Rev. F. M. Woods was chairman and Leroy Watts secretary.

Judge Adams made a few opening remarks and he was followed by several others, who in the main favor prohibition law for Clanton.

A committee of nine was appointed with Dr. Stewart chairman to confer with the town officers and the Sheriff as to the best means to be taken to suppress the illicit sale of whiskey in the town and county.

A committee of five was appointed with Judge Adams chairman to look after the legislative part of the work.

Mrs. G. L. Phillips was appointed chairman of the temperance committee with power to name her own committee.

All three committees arranged to meet Wednesday afternoon, a petition against the repeal of the prohibition law was signed by most of those present, and the meeting adjourned until Friday night next, when the meeting will be resumed at the court house at 7 p.m.

Thorsby, Dec. 12, 1900

Editor Banner. I desire space in your paper to again call the attention of the people of Chilton county to the bill providing for a new road law for the county. I wish to say that the repeated demands for a better system of working and providing public roads and highways which always make the progress and improvement of any people. But allow me to say that under the old system of working the roads it is utterly impossible to provide such roads as are much needed, to provide such roads that can be traveled at all seasons of the year with safety and to better loads etc., besides the old system is very unfair in imposing the burdens of road duty on a class of citizens who generally have least use for roads, and every reasonable man will readily admit that good roads enhance the value of property, and it is fair and just that men with property should be willing to bear a part of the burden of keeping them in good condition. But realizing that this is a question in which all the people are interested, I have as their representative taken much time and pains to formulate a system which seems to my mind to equalize the burden, and at the same time provide a law that will carry sufficient strength to give us good roads, and will say futher I could have secured the passage of the bill before now, but I prefered to have it published so the people could read its provisions, and have a chance to express their opinions in regard to the matter before getting legislative action upon it.

So we call a road convention to meet at Clanton the second Saturday in January next to pass upon the question, either for or against. So that all are most earnestly invited to attend said convention, irrespective of party, and etc., but as common citizens to participate in the road meeting, to let us know your wishes, as we are not disposed to rush any law upon the people, against their expressed desire, notwithstanding we might think it ever so desirable. So I earnestly solicit all to attend the meeting.

Yours mots truly,
L. B. Pounds.

Jemison, Dec. 19, 1900.

Editor Banner—As I have so many enquiries about my contest case, I ask a short space in your paper to explain the situation. In the first place I feel like I have done my duty in making the contest and exposing the fraud. Now, I have according to law made out my case, duly delivered all papers to the Senate and they have been referred to a committee of Democrats, and I have repeatedly gone to the chairman and other members of the committee and asked them to hear the case, but the session is half over, and a man is filling the place of State Senator who was never elected. Not even a newspaper of the State has had little enough regard for the truth to claim that Mr. Oliver was elected. I ask the people to stop and reflect for a moment and see where we are drifting. See who endorses such counting of men out that have been duly elected.

Mark the prediction, that in only a few days if some organized Democrat will not be asking the people of Chilton to send him to Montgomery to help make a new consitution, and declaring that he was opposed to disfranchising a single white man. Tell me the difference in disfranchising a man and stealing his vote. Yes, I expect to fight such proceedings down to the last ditch, and when the Legislature meets again in January I expect to be there and push my case as I have done in the first session.

I hope the chairman of our committee will call the committee together with a mass meeting of the people to discuss the proposed road law for Chilton, and several others, and I hope if such call is made that everybody will come that can and let us discuss the interests of our county. Very respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds.

IN THE HOLY LAND

Cairo, September 11, 1900

We are in a modern city in this old land for Cairo has all things that any American city has. I see also that everlasting French tongue used here in hotel signs, railway regulations, etc. Instead of putting it down chicken on the bill of fare, they write it poulet-a-la-Francaise; I suppose it makes it finer to the taste to some folks; it does not to me.

Next morning we are off to the museum antonia's and see all the corpse of the "big folks" from Ramises the first. I did not know whether they looked natural or not, so I can't tell you my dear readers, but I tell you they did look powerful nasty. We see the lotus flower used in all shapes about these old dead kings showing continuously that these ancients believed in the resurrection, as that flower is yet used by these people as ornament of a future life. We were soon on to the pyramids. I, with the aid of three Arabs, got one half way up, and had enough. Three of the party went on to the top, 457 feet high is the highest.

We next "took in" the interior. I went, it seems to me, about one-quarter of a mile, crawling sometimes, slipping sometimes, and sweating all the time to the end of the narrow passage, and the Arab then showed me the well and asked me if I wanted to go down in it. I thanked him, I had enough, and then he wanted to show me the sun that was the next thing I wanted to see, after many slips and bumps, I finally reached the light of day again, wet with perspiration and exhausted and sore in every muscle.

We saw next the sphinx, the tomb of the kings, and drove back twelve miles to the hotel. This twelve miles is the most beautiful avenue drive in the world.

I forgot to say that in the coffins with these dead kings I saw all kinds of grain thousands of years old in good state of preservation. As none of my party would go with me, I had to take train that night for Luxor, so as to see those great temple ruins at Karnock, fourteen hours by express train up the Nile. This was an awful hard trip, as it involved the loss of two night's sleep consecutively and many hundred miles of travel in the awful dust of an Egyptian journey, but I was determined not to miss seeing the great temples of Luxor and Karnock. All the way the railway ran on an embankment, so as to raise it above the level of the country and so that it is above the water of the Nile during the annual inundation, this was now high water time, and though this embankment ran through seas of water miles and miles up the Nile, such is the fine dust of the silt, which makes the soil of Egypt so famous, that the motion of the train stirred up

That Cough Hangs On

You have used all sorts of cough remedies but it does not yield; it is too deep seated. It may wear itself out in time, but it is more liable to produce la grippe, pneumonia or a serious throat affection. You need something that will give you strength and build up the body.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

will do this when everything else fails. There is no doubt about it. It nourishes, strengthens, builds up and makes the body strong and healthy, not only to throw off this hard cough, but to fortify the system against further attacks. If you are run down or emaciated you should certainly take this nourishing food medicine.

CORRESPONDENCE

them; hence it may be, that our present road law if properly executed would be alright.

The county commissioners, in appointing apportioners, do not seem to consider their qualifications, and likewise the apportioners appoint the overseers. We have an apportioner in this beat that pays no attention to his roads, we have one overseer that sends a substitute to work his men. Now, these men are unsuited to the work and no doubt did not want the appointments. We should have as apportioners and overseers practical farmers or teamsters who know how to work a road and also know what a day's work would be.

May be a new law taxing the people and compelling them to keep good roads and allowing those who prefer to work out their time would be the best for us. As it is now the overseers call out their hands, rake out a few leaves, shovel up a little dirt out of the fence corners, away from the bed of the road, make a few "breaks," and back home to complain of so much road working; so let's satisfy these people.

Some people get so mad when one speaks of stock law, may be it would be well to try to get the law without discussion, but if the people would discuss the subject and investigate good humoredly that would be best. My observation is that the stock law is extremely personal, and all this hue and cry about the great injury to our neighbors has very little in it. We generally believe that a law that would benefit us would also benefit our neighbors, there may be exception to this.

Most people who are out of timber and are able to take care of there stock, both landlords and tenants are favorable to the law; those who have lots of timber and plenty of help to split rails as well, as a class, who have lots cattle and depend upon other people's land to pasture them, are opposed to it. There are many good reasons for the law for the whole people and good reasons against it, so let's have the substantial talk.

Mention might be made of the fences you see as you pass along in this discussion, they show that either stock law or fence building is needed. Let us hear from those that know something of this law, those that have lived in it, that will give us the best information.

Respectfully,
H. B. Oliver.

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. MR. REYNOLDS' PETITION TO THE SENATE

To the Honorable Senate of Alabama:

I, as contestant before your Honorable Body, for a seat from the 16th Senatorial District, respectfully invite your attention to the following facts:

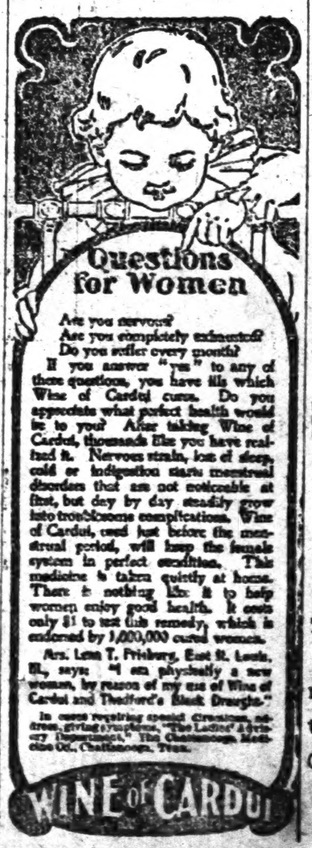
The returns of the Senatorial election, held August 6, 1900, for the counties of Shelby, Chilton, and Elmore, composing said Senatorial District, that we duly delivered to the Sheriffs of said counties by the respective precinct returning officers, show that I was elected to the position now held by my competitor by more than four hundred majority in said district. After the aforesaid election returns of Elmore county were duly delivered to the sheriff of that county, twelve of the precinct ballot-boxes were opened by parties unknown and the tally lists therein changed by erasing three hundred and seventy votes from my vote and adding the same number to the vote of my competitor—in this way making a difference of seven hundred and forty votes in his favor. Thus the certificate of election was fraudulently secured to him, as the County Board of Supervisors of election for Elmore county canvassed the returns of aforesaid election from the tally lists and not as reduired by law, from the certified statement of votes as signed and returned by the respective precinct inspectors of election. The said certified statement of votes, which are in your possession, were not altered and are now just as they were returnd to the sheriff of said county by the proper authorities.

I would respectfully invite the attention of each senator to said certified statement of votes, and to aforesaid tally-lists, which are also in possession of your honorable body, that each of you may see for himself the fraudulent changes that were clumsily made. I would also invite your attention to the sworn statement of the judge of probate of Elmore county, a member of aforesaid county board of inspectors of election, "that said board canvassed the returns from the talis-lists," in disregard of the law that requires that the canvass be made from the inspectors' certified statement of votes.

In view of these plain, admitted frauds, and in order to avoid unnecessary strife and scandal, I, through Hon. A. T. Goodwyn as my authorized representative, proposed to the Hon. Chairman of the Democratic State Executive Committee that he, if agreeable to my competitor, investigate the facts in this case and that we accept his report as conclusive, but he declined the proposition.

Recognizing that a right to a seat is a question of highest privilege in all legislative bodies, I have hopefully and repeatedly solicited the Honorable Chairman of your Election Committee to name a day for the hearing of this case but I have so far failed to receive any satisfactory reasons for delay. I deem it my duty to my constituents to address this petition to your honorable body, earnestly asking that you take such action as will assure prompt justice to all concerned. I plead not for mere personal consideration, but for the civilization of law against the barbarism of anarchy. Most respectfully,

LEWIS H. REYNOLDS.



"KRUMP'S KORNER."

The owner of this Korner has again returned to it, after wandering many days in foreign lands older, uglier and we trust a little wiser in some respects. He rejoices at his return, and would be glad to see all of the good and bad people of Chilton county. I only ask don't all of you come same day, as I have not got enough to go round for dinner. I have enough yarns however to make up shortness in grubb. Come to see me anyhow and we will talk it over, and no charge for the yarns. Please remember I keep all things the farmer needs, and I will sell him

A sewing machine, a wagon, or a buggy,
A suit, a hat, a pair shoes or a knife,

Subject: A Way Over Jordan — The Lord Will Send a Boat — From the Other Shore It Will Come to Transport the Faithful to Eternal Life.

[Copyrighted 1901.]

WASHINGTON, D.C.—From an unnoticed incident of olden time Dr. Talmage in this discourse draws some comforting and rapturous lessons. The text is II Samuel xix, 18, "And there went over a ferryboat to carry over the king's household."

Which of the crowd is the king? That short man, sunburnt and in fatigue dress. It is David, the exiled king. He has defeated his enemies and is now going home to resume his palace. Good! I always like to see David come out ahead. But between him and his home there is the celebrated River Jordan, which has to be passed. The king is accompanied to the bank of the river by an aristocratic old gentleman of eighty years, Barzillai by name, who owned a fine country seat at Rogelim. Besides that, David has his family with him. But how shall they get across the river? While they are standing there I see a ferryboat coming from the other side, and as it cuts through the water I see the faces of David and his household brighten up at the thought of so soon getting home. No sooner had the ferryboat struck the shore than David and his family and his old friend Barzillai, from Rogelim, get on board the boat. Either with splashing oars at the side or with one oar sculling at the stern of the boat they leave the eastern bank of the Jordan and start for the western bank.

That western bank is black with crowds of people, who are waving and shouting at the approach of the king and his family. The military are all out. Some of those who have been David's worst enemies now shout until they are hoarse at his return. No sooner had the boat struck the shore on the western side than the earth quakes and the heavens ring with cheers of welcome and congratulation. David and his family and Barzillai from Rogelim step ashore. King David asks his old friend to go with him and live at the palace, but Barzillai apologizes and intimates that he is infirm with age and too deaf to appreciate the music, and has a delicate appetite that would soon be cloyed with luxurious living, and so he begs that David would let him go back to his country seat.

I once heard the father of a President of the United States say that he had just been to Washington to see his son in the White House, and he told me of the wonderful things that occurred there, and of what Daniel Webster said to him, but he declared: "I was glad to get home. There was too much going on there for me." My father, an aged man, made his last visit at my house in Philadelphia, and after the church service was over and we went home some one in the house asked the aged man how he enjoyed the service. "Well, I enjoyed the service, but there were too many people there for me. It troubled my head very much." The fact is that old people do not like excitement. If King David had asked Barzillai thirty years before to go to the palace, the probability is that Barzillai would have gone, but not now. They kiss each other goodbye, a custom among men Oriental, but in vogue yet where two brothers part or an aged father and a son go away from each other never to meet again. No wonder that their lips met as King David and old Barzillai, at the prow of the ferryboat, parted forever.

This River Jordan, in all ages and among all languages, has been the symbol of the boundary line between earth and heaven, yet when, on a former occasion, I preached to you about the Jordanic passage I have no doubt that some of you despondingly said: "The Lord might have divided Jordan for Joshua, but not for poor me." Cheer up! I want to show you that there is a way over Jordan as well as through it. My text says, "And there went over a ferryboat to carry over the king's household."

All our cities are familiar with the ferryboat. It goes from San Francisco to Oakland, and from Liverpool to Birkenhead, and twice every secular day of the week multitudes are on the ferryboats of our great cities, so that you will not need to hunt up a classical dictionary to find out what I mean while I am speaking to you about the passage of David and his family across the River Jordan.

My subject, in the first place, impresses me with the fact that when we cross over from this world to the next the boat will have to come from the other side. The tribe of Judah, we are informed, sent this ferryboat across to get David and his household. I stand on the eastern side of the River Jordan, and I find no shipping at all, but while I am standing there I see a boat plowing through the river, and as I hear the swirl of the waters, and the boat comes to the eastern side of the Jordan, and David and his family and his old friend step on board that boat, I am mightily impressed with the fact that when we cross over from this world to the next the boat will have to come from the opposite shore.

Every day I find people trying to extemporize a way from earth to heaven. They gather up their good works and some sentimental theories, and they make a raft, and they go down. The fact is that skepticism and infidelity never yet helped one man to die. I invite all the ship carpenters of worldly philosophy to come and build one boat that can safely cross this river. I invite them all to unite their skill, and Bolingbroke shall lift the stanchions, and Tyndall shall shape the bowsprit, and Spinoza shall make the main topgallant braces, and Renan shall go to tacking and wearing and boxing the ship. All together in 10,000 years they will never be able to make a boat that can cross this Jordan. Why was it that Spinoza and Blount and Shaftesbury lost their souls? It was because they tried to cross the stream in a boat of their own construction. What miserable work they made of dying! Diodorus died of mortification because he could not guess a conundrum which had been proposed to him at a public dinner; Zeuxis, the philosopher, died of mirth, laughing at a caricature of an aged woman, a caricature made by his own hand; while another of their company and of their kind died saying: "Must I leave all these beautiful pictures?" and then asked that he might be bolstered up in the bed in his last moments and be shaved and painted and rouged. Of all the unbelievers of all ages not one died well. Some of them sneaked out of life, some blasphemed and raved and tore their bed covers to tatters. This is the way worldly philosophy helps a man to die.

A guide at Niagara Falls said to me, "Do you see that rock down in the rapids?" I said, "Yes." "Well," he said, "some years ago a man got into the rapids and floated down until he came to that rock, and he clutched that and held on. We sent five lifeboats at different times out to him, and they were all broken to splinters. After awhile we got him some food, but he could not eat it. He seemed to have no appetite. He wanted to get ashore, and the poor fellow held on and held on, and, with a shriek louder than the thunder of the cataract, he went over." When a man puts out from the shore of this world on the river of death in a boat of his own construction, he has worse disaster than that—shipwreck, eternal shipwreck.

Blessed be God, there is a boat coming from the other side! Transportation at last for our souls from the other shore; everything about this gospel from the other shore; pardon from the other shore; mercy from the other shore; pity from the other shore; ministry of angels from the other shore; power to work miracles from the other shore; Jesus Christ from the other shore. "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners," and from a foreign shore I see the ferryboat coming, and it rolls with the surges of a Saviour's suffering, but as it strikes the earth the mountains rock and the dead adjust their apparel so that they may be fit to come out. That boat touches the earth, and glorious Thomas Walsh gets into it in his expiring moment, saying: "He has come! He has come! My beloved is mine, and I am His." Good Sarah Wesley got into that boat, and as she shoved off from the shore she cried: "Open the gates!" I bless God that as the boat came from the other shore to take David and his men across so when we are about to die the boat will come from the same direction. God forbid that I should ever trust to anything that starts from this side.

Again, my subject suggests that when we cross over at the last the King will be on board the boat. Ship carpentry in Bible times was in its infancy. The boats were not skillfully made, and I can very easily imagine that the women and children of the king's household might have been nervous about going on that boat, afraid that the oarsman or the helmsman might give out and that the boat might be dashed on the rocks, as sometimes boats were dashed in the Jordan, and then I could have imagined the boat starting and rocking and they crying out, "Oh, we are going to be lost; we are going down!" Not so. The king was on board the boat, and those women and children and all the household of the king knew that every care was taken to have the king, the head of the empire, pass in safety.

Blessed be God that when we leave this world we are not to have a great and perilous enterprise of getting into heaven; not a dangerous Franklin expedition to find the northwest passage among icebergs; only a ferry. That accounts for something you have never been able to understand. You never supposed that very nervous and timid Christian people could be so unexcited and placid in the last hour. The fact is, they were clear down on the bank, and they saw there was nothing to be frightened about, such a short distance—only a ferry. With one ear they heard the funeral psalm in their memory, and with the other ear they heard the song of heavenly salutation. The willows on this side the Jordan and the Lebanon cedars on the other almost interlocked their branches—only a ferry.

My subject also suggests the fact that when we cross over at the last we shall find a solid landing. The ferryboat, as spoken of in my text, means a place to start from and a place to land. David and his people did not find the eastern shore of the Jordan any more solid than the western shore where he landed, and yet to a great many heaven is not a real place. To you heaven is a fog bank in the distance. After the resurrection has come you will have a resurrected foot and something to tread on and a resurrected eye and colors to see with it and a resurrected ear and music to regale it.

Smart men in this day are making a great deal of fun about St. John's materialistic descriptions of heaven. Well, now, my friends, if you will tell me what will be the use of a resurrected body in heaven with nothing to tread on and nothing to hear and nothing to handle and nothing to taste then I will laugh, too.

Are you going to float about in ether forever, swinging about your hands and feet through the air indiscriminately, one moment sweltering in the centre of the sun and the next moment shivering in the mountains of the moon?

That is not my heaven. Dissatisfied with John's materialistic heaven, theological tinkers are trying to patch up a heaven that will do for them at last. I never heard of any heaven I want to go to except St. John's heaven.

I believe I shall hear Mr. Toplady sing yet and Isaac Watts recite hymns and Mozart play. "Oh," you say, "where would you get the organ?" The Lord will provide the organ. Don't you bother about the organ. I believe I shall yet see David with a harp, and I will ask him to sing one of the songs of Zion.

I believe after the resurrection I shall see Massillon, the great French pulpit orator, and I shall hear from his own lips how he felt on that day when he preached the king's funeral sermon and flung his whole audience into a paroxysm of grief and solemnity.

And so you and I will be met at the landing. Our arrival will not be like stepping ashore at Antwerp or Constantinople among a crowd of strangers. It will be among friends, good friends, those who are warm hearted friends, and all their friends. We know people whom we have never seen by hearing somebody talk about them very much. We know them almost as well as if we had seen them.

And do you not suppose that our parents and brothers and sisters and children in heaven have been talking about us all these years and talking to their friends? So that, I suppose, when we cross the river at the last we shall not only be met by all those Christian friends whom we knew on earth, but by all their friends. They will come down to the landing to meet us. Your departed friends love you now more than they ever did.

You will be surprised at the last to find how they know about all the affairs of your life. Why, they are only across the ferry, and the boat is coming this way, and the boat is going that way. I do not know but they have already asked the Lord the day, the hour, the moment when you are coming across, and that they know now, but I do know that you will be met at the landing. The poet Southey said he thought he should know Bishop Heber in heaven by the portraits he had seen of him in London, and Dr. Randolph said he thought he would know William Cowper, the poet, in heaven from the pictures he had seen of him in England, but we will know our departed kindred by the portraits hung in the throne room of our hearts.

On starlight nights you look up—and I suppose it is so with any one who has friends in heaven—on starlight nights you look up, and you cannot help but think of those who have gone, and I suppose they look down and cannot help but think of us. But they have the advantage of us. We know not just where their world of joy is. They know where we are.

But there is a thought that comes over me like an electric shock. Do I belong to the King's household? Mark you, the text says, "And there went over a ferryboat to carry over the king's household," and none but the king's household. Then I ask, Do I belong to the household? Do you? If you do not, come to-day and be adopted into that household. "Oh," says some soul here, "I do not know whether the King wants me." He does; He does. Hear the voice from the throne, "I will be a father to them, and they shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." "Him that cometh unto Me," Christ says, "I will in nowise cast out." Come into the King's household. Sit down at the King's table. Come in and take your apparel from the King's wardrobe, even the wedding garment of Christ's righteousness. Come in and inherit the King's wealth. Come in and cross in the King's ferryboat.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

An Italian inventor has made a picture postal card with changing colors similar to the shot silks worn by ladies, which at different angles reflect different colors. Not only do these colored pictures change under varying conditions of the atmosphere, but their changing foreshadows a change of weather.

MM. Desgrez and Balthazard, of Paris, have been carrying out some elaborate experiments with the object of regenerating respirable air in a confined space, and have communicated the results of their researches to the Academy of Sciences. They have constructed a diving dress of aluminum which weighs in all about twenty-five pounds. Inside this dress they place a quantity of bioxide of sodium, and a diver wearing this apparatus can walk about for a considerable length of time under water, without coming to the surface to replenish his supply of air. It is claimed that the invention will be of inestimable value to persons engaged in mines, chemical industries, or to reach certain points surrounded by a poisonous atmosphere.

It is not an easy matter to obtain the temperature of very big living animals, especially when the animals in question are not domesticated, and so far it has been utterly impossible to get the exact temperature of a live whale. But something nearly as good has been done. It is known that the blood of a whale cools very quickly after death, and experiments have been made in Norway which have resulted in taking the temperature soon after death. Mr. Guldberg, who has made the experiments, says that, owing to the very thick coating of fat of the whale, there is in three days but a very slight cooling. Recently he took the temperature of a whale which had been lying dead for three days, and found it to be 34 degrees Centigrade. From whales of different species which had been only just killed he has gotten the following temperatures: Spermaceti whale, 40 degrees; Greenland whale, 38.8 degrees; porpoise, 37.8 degrees; dolphin, 35.6 degrees.

J. Hahn has recently conducted an investigation dealing with the relation between solar activity and the secular variation of the earth's elements. He thus sums up his conclusions in a recent article in Nature: (1) That the changes in the motion of the pole of rotation round the pole of figure are in intimate connection with the variations of the earth-magnetic forces; (2) inasmuch as the latter phenomena are in a close relation with the state of solar activity, the motion of the pole is also indirectly dependent on the dynamical changes taking place at the sun's surface; (3) the distance between the instantaneous and mean poles decreases with increasing intensity of earth-magnetic disturbance; (4) the length of the period of latitude variation increases with increasing intensity of earth-magnetic disturbance; (5) in strict analogy with the phenomena of aurorae and of the magnetic disturbance, the influence of the eleven years' period of sunspots, as well as of the "great" period, is clearly exhibited in the phenomenon of latitude variation, and the same deviations from the solar curve as are manifested by the aurorae are also evident in the motion of the pole; (6) the half-yearly period of the earth-magnetic phenomena influences the motion of the pole of rotation in such a way that its path, instead of being circular, assumes the form of an eclipse, having the mean pole at its centre; (7) the half-yearly period also explains the conspicuous fact of a rotation of the axes of the eclipse in a direction opposite to that of the motion of the pole.

A Question of Intent.

The most popular man in a Western town once got into a difficulty with a disreputable tough, who was the terror of the place, and did him up in a manner entirely satisfactory to the entire community. It was necessary, however, to vindicate the majesty of the law, and the offender was brought up for trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill. The jury took the case and were out about two minutes, when they returned.

"Well," said the Judge, in a familiar, offhand way, "what have the jury to say?"

"May it please the court," responded the foreman, "we, the jury, find that the prisoner is not guilty of hittin' with intent to kill, but simply to paralyze, and he done it."

The verdict was received with applause, and the prisoner given an ovation.—The Green Bag.

Harvest Home.

Like Hallowe'en and Hogmanay and other old-world festivals, the harvest home, which used to crown with joy and gladness the completion of the ingathering of the fruits of the earth in Scotland, bids fair to become a thing of the past.

It is said that the Emperor William of Germany has received a snub from his dear friend the Sultan of Turkey. The Sultan is, indeed, a dear friend—it costs a trifle too much to have close dealings with him. Anybody who would practice economy politically would better remain free from entangling alliances with the sublimely rid. Sous Porte.

We Spring From Mud.

A good deal of pleasure appears to have been elicited by the proofs which a German professor has made public to show that we are not descended from apes. It would seem that the apes branched off from the direct line of descent about the time that we did, and that they are, consequently, our cousins a good many times removed and not our remote grandfathers. Personally it is a matter of perfect indifference to me whether I descend from an ape or whether the ape is only my cousin. During the period that covers the life of a planet, or, I suppose, of a star, there is a comparatively brief period when the heat and the humidity produce vegetation, and the outcome of vegetation is animal life, if, indeed, there is any clear line of demarkation between animal and vegetable life. We and the apes alike descend from protoplasmic mud, one of the most recent discoveries being that all molecules are a self-contained electric battery.—London Truth.

DIVINING ROD MYSTERY.

Irish Professor's Explanation After Careful Inquiry.

A second installment of an elaborate report by Prof. W. F. Barrett on the so-called dividing rod has just made its appearance. Prof. Barrett is a member of the Royal Society, occupies the chair of experimental physics in the Royal College of Science for Ireland at Dublin and has taken an active part in the work of the Society for Psychical Research.

LIONS, TIGERS AND ELEPHANTS

What an Animal Trainer Says About Their Traits in Captivity.

"Personally I would rather undertake to train jungle-bred lions than lions that are born in captivity. To-day I win the regard of the first class, but the others are so accustomed to seeing everybody that they respect nobody. The idea that lions desire to eat up their trainers is preposterous. I feed these lions twelve and a half pounds of fine meat every day at 5 o'clock. If a lion was ravenously hungry the case might be different. When a beast gets mad and knocks you down with a blow from his paw, you must lie still. It would be useless to fight back, for if he should close his jaws no bone would stand the pressure. I do not fear the lion's jaw and teeth—the paws and claws are the things that have left their marks all over my body. Their claws are sharp as fishhooks and take hold in the same fashion.

"Yes, I have been nipped by lions a number of times, generally in the fleshy part of the hand and the leg; the teeth have gone clean through with a snap. Still, the claws are the things that make the life of the lion tamer an 'unpreferred risk' in life insurance writing.

"Tigers are much brighter than lions, and can be taught many tricks, but they can never be relied on, as treachery appears to be their disposition and inheritance. They are tremendous fighters, and if they cannot get up a row among themselves they are ready to help others. The closest call I ever had in my life was when a jaguar got over the partition in the big den into the cage occupied by a lion and undertook to take a bone away from the latter. I went in and undertook to drive the jaguar back into her own cage. The beast turned upon me and clawed me horribly, while the lion took a whack at my back. When I was finally dragged out of the cage the new suit of clothes that I wore was a mass of tatters, and I was scarred and bloody from head to heels. This famous fight occurred in Washington with the W. C. Coup show. I had a number of encounters with Wallace, who was set down on the bills as 'the man-eater.' He had chewed and clawed many men, but never eaten one, but he did occasionally feast on a horse. So many stories have been told about Wallace by trainers that never handled him it would be idle for me to repeat them, as I had him all the time he was in this country. That famous lion died two years ago in an express car while on his travels.

"Tigers have a fancy for sliding on their backs and getting you at a disadvantage, as they lie and claw upward. The moment you turn to leave a cage they are liable to slide its whole length and drag you down before you can raise your whip.

"But take my word for it, the most dangerous animal you can encounter in a menagerie is a 'bad elephant.' I've been with them for forty years, and I know."—Chicago Record.

A Matter of Taste.

The man with the sensitive appetite looked scornfully at his elbow neighbor in the night lunch parlor when he saw him scatter pepper plentifully over his ice cream.

"Well, of all the freakishness in tastes, that gets me," said the fastidious customer, when the other man, after eating his speckled ice cream with apparent gastronomic relish, had departed.

"That's nothing," responded the proprietor of the restaurant; "we have all sorts of odd customers who season their food in a most incongruous way. One man, whose choice desert is peach meringue, must have it fairly covered with catsup before he will eat it. Another regular customer spreads mustard thickly upon his doughnuts and custard pudding. I had a new one yesterday when a young man started to use the sugar shaker on his fried eggs. The sugar being damp it would not come out readily, and he asked me to fix the shaker for him. Thinking he had made a mistake I told him that was the sugar, and handed him the salt cellar.

"'I don't want salt,' he said; 'I want sugar, and I want you to fix that thing so that it will come out.'

"I gave him a sugar bowl and he dumped several spoonfuls over his fried eggs, which he seemed to enjoy immensely. Some people prefer sugar on lettuce, tomatoes and other vegetables; others turn up their noses at such a use of the saccharine substance, preferring salt and pepper. There is no accounting for taste in the matter of edibles."—Detroit Free Press.

GREAT KNIFE WORK.

Mexican's Experience with a Herd of Antelope.

A Mexican freighter whose route lies across the deserts of New Mexico and Arizona and who is known as Juan Riviera has many tales to tell of bloodcurdling adventures he has had during his trips across the sands. Although considered to be as truthful as the ordinary man by his acquaintances, some of his stories would indicate that he occasionally departs from the path of rectitude or else the road he travels must be a veritable paradise for hunters. One of his reminiscences is as follows: "While passing from Chihuahua to Tucson, some fifteen years ago, I encountered a great herd, probably a thousand, of antelope, and this accounts for the loss of my forefinger, which you see is lacking two joints. This herd was not far from a box canyon, having a very narrow entrance when I first saw it. By riding to and fro, I succeeded after an hour in getting them to enter the canyon, but as the entrance was narrow I could get them in only one at a time. After losing considerable time I got them all in. To keep them cooped up, I began to pile up stones at the opening, intending to leave the antelopes there and notify my friends of the catch. While at work the antelopes suddenly turned on me and began to rush out. There was not time enough to bar the opening, so I grabbed my knife and stabbed them as they came out. Antelope are much like sheep, and follow their leader, and came rushing through so rapidly that my arm was kept in motion like the crank shaft on a windmill. I wore out the knife, then the handle, and was so excited that I kept on jabbing with my forefinger until I had worn it down to one joint. It doesn't pay to get excited."

CRIMINAL VIRTUE.

Spain's Queer Law Prevents Rescue of Royalty from Peril.

There is a Spanish law that no subject shall touch the person of the king or queen. Alfonso XIII., king of Spain, nearly suffered a severe fall from this rule in his childhood. An aunt gave him a swing. When he used it for the first time the motion frightened him, and he began to cry, whereupon a lackey lifted him quietly out of it, and so, no doubt, prevented him from falling. The breach of etiquette, however, was flagrant and dreadful. The queen was obliged to punish it by dismissing the man from his post. At the same time she showed her real feelings on the subject by appointing him immediately to another and better place in the royal household. In another case a queen of Spain nearly lost her life in a dreadful way owing to this peculiar rule. She had been thrown when out riding, and, her foot catching in the stirrup, she was dragged. Her escort would not risk interference, and she would have been dashed to pieces but for the heroic interposition of a young man, who stopped the horse and released her from her dangerous position. As soon as they saw she was safe, her escort turned to arrest the traitor who had dared to touch the queen's foot, but he was not to be seen. Knowing well the penalty he had incurred, he made off at once—fled for his life—and did not stop until he had crossed the frontier.—Answers.

Li's Desertion by His Secretary.

The severest blow Li Hung Chang has received for many years is the desertion of J. W. Pethick, an American who had been his private secretary for twelve or fifteen years. Mr. Pethick was paid a large salary to act as advisor and instructor in modern languages and sciences, and had charge of all the viceroy's foreign affairs and much of his private business. Earl Li has money invested in all sorts of enterprises in Europe and Asia, and Mr. Pethick has looked after his financial business in foreign countries. He has also taught the Earl nearly everything he knows of foreign affairs, and has read aloud to Li Hung Chang more than 800 books in English, French and German, which he was able to translate into Chinese as he read them. Last spring for reasons not yet publicly explained, Mr. Pethick resigned his position with Li Hung Chang, and has since denounced him as untrustworthy and a traitor to the friends he pretends to serve.—Chicago Record.

Horse Is Stage Struck.

A hansom usually stands at the corner of Broadway and 29th street, where passengers wait for the crosstown cars. They always have to wait and so have time to make friends with an intelligent hansom horse, who feigns to be asleep until he is patted on the nose, when he comes back to earth apparently with a stagy start. The fact is that the theatrical neighborhood in which the cab has its stand has affected the horse and has taught him to dissimilate. He has become such a pet with waiting passengers that they carry sugar and apples in their pockets with which to feed him. He never refuses anything. He calmly consumes a $4 bunch of violets, finishing to the last inch of ribbon, and would doubtless eat the pin that has held the bunch if it were offered to him. He also eats cigarettes, artificial flowers, sandles, peanuts and theater programs.—New York Sun.

The man who would be a leader must never keep the procession waiting.

THEIR PITIFUL END.

When Indian Women Become Too Old to Work They Are Left to Die.

The attention of the United States government has just been called to a barbarous custom that it still being practiced among the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Indians in Oklahoma Territory. The Indians of these tribes, while living under the management of an Indian agent, are comparatively civilized and do not go on the warpath, but work for their living as farmers. But they have no love in their hearts for one of their own people after that person has passed his or her age of usefulness. An aged squaw, after she reaches the age of eighty years, is sent into the fields and left there to die, unless some sympathetic white person comes along and sends the poor old woman to the Indian agency, where she may be taken care of at the expense of the government. Travelers in the reservation may hear the distressing cries of some deserted woman at most any time they care to listen. The women are given a few days' rations, clothed in their best garments and taken into the fields amid the horses and cattle. There they are left alone. Not being strong enough to get away, they have to remain there and die. The plains of this Indian reservation are strewn with the bones of those who have been left to die because they were getting too old to work any more.

Varied Climate in China.

Extending from north to south, Indo-China covers fourteen degrees, necessarily including a wide variety of climate. In the southern provinces the year is divided into two seasons, wet and dry. In Tonkin and Anam the four western seasons prevail, with the difference that the heat attains an intensity unknown in Europe, and the climate is so debilitating as to unfit Europeans for manual labor.

Penny-in-the-Slot Bootblack.

Nearly fifty years ago the Shoeblack brigade was started in North London, and since then the small box with the footrest, the blacking and the brushes and the boy with or without uniform has become a recognised and almost indispensable institution in every large town. But now it seems that an automatic shoeblack has been invented, and a penny-in-the-slot will secure the desired result. You put your foot in a black hole supplied with brushes, and the coin sets the mechanism in motion, which brushes, blacks and polishes in an incredibly short space of time. The humble shoeblack, like so many other honest citizens, may have to go down before the advance of machinery.

LONG RANGE GUNS.

Quick Lessons Taught Other Nations by the Boer Artillerymen.

There is an effort being made in different countries to turn the lesson of the Anglo-Boer war to profit by constructing ordinance of increased range. The Boers got their greater range not by having superior guns, but by elevating the muzzle, as the English found out when the Boers turned captured English guns upon them. The English cannon fired as far as the Boer cannon when the muzzle was given equal elevation. But the point remains that the Boers taught the world that superior range, no matter how obtained, gives a decided practical advantage. In 1888 an English 9.2-inch gun made a record with a range of twelve miles. A Krupp 9.45-inch four years later made a new record of twelve and a half miles. Recently there has been talk of a German gun that ranges fifteen miles. But an American ordnance factory is preparing a 12-inch gun, it is said, which is to carry a shell nineteen miles. Its length is to be equal to forty calibers and the 1,050-pound shell is to have an initial velocity of 3,000 feet a second. The difficulty in obtaining extreme ranges lies largely with the gun carriage. Most gun carriages permit an elevation of the muzzle of but seventeen degrees, whereas the best possible range of any given gun requires an elevation of forty-four degrees. A larger arc of elegration is the lesson the Boer artillerists have enforced. The drawback of extreme ranges is the inaccuract of fire. The Boers produced a great moral effect upon the British by landing shells at distances the British batteries could not cover, but they seldom made hits. They were content to demoralize their foe by subjecting him to a fire he could not reply to. At Ladysmith, for example, there were a few good shots at extreme ranges, so that the loss of life caused by cannot fire from great distances was trifling. As the range increases the chance of missing likewise increases, a very small error in the aim being multiplied more and more the farther the shot goes. At nineteen miles it is hard to believe that one shot in a thousand would hit an object no bigger than a house.—Baltimore Sun.

Miss Braddon a Prolific Writer.

Miss Braddon has published over sixty novels since 1862. Previous to trying literature, however, Miss Braddon appeared on the stage. There is some doubt in the matter, but "An Old Player" writes that the future novelist made her debut at the Brighton Theater Royal in 1857, and that during the five following months she impersonated as many as fifty-eight distinct characters. Her stage name was Mary Leyton, and, though now known as Miss M. E. Braddon, she is really Mrs. Maxwell and a widow.

Grinnell's New President.

Prof. Frank K. Sanders, who has just been elected president of Grinnell College, Iowa, has been Woolsey professor of biblical literature in Yale for four years. Professor Sanders was born in India. His parents were missionaries, who died in the field after a heroic life struggle. He received his college education at Ripon College, Wisconsin, graduating there in 1882. He spent the next four years in India as instructor in Jaffna college, returning to Yale as a graduate student in 1886. In 1889 he was appointed to the Yale faculty as an instructor.

Mining and Miners.

There are 365,000 men employed in mining coal in the United States. Of these 135,000 are in the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania. No women have ever been employed in American mines, though they were so employed in France, England and Scotland until quite recently.

Holds Medals for Life-Saving.

Lieutenant Walter R. Gherardi, who is known as one of the bravest men in the navy and has three gold medals for saving lives, does not look much like his father, the retired rear admiral. The latter is about the average height, but is made to look much shorter by his great breadth. The son is 6 feet 2 inches tall and built in symmetrical proportion.

He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself.—Herbert.

the Hair

Have you ever thought why your hair is falling out? It is because you are starving your hair. If this starvation continues, your hair will continue to fall.

There is one good hair food. It is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It goes right to the roots of the hair and gives them just the food they need. The hair stops falling, becomes healthy, and grows thick and long.

Ayer's Hair Vigor does another thing, also: it always restores color to faded or gray hair.

Cheaper Than a Funeral.

In a certain North Dakota town there are two physicians, one with a long record of cures and the other popularly known as "no good."

The favored doctor found his services in demand at most request, but as payment was no always forthcoming he made a rule that for certain class of his patients should pay in advance.

One winter's night he was roused by two farmers from a hamlet ten miles away, the wife of one of whom was seriously ill. He told them to go to the other doctor, but they refused, saying they would prefer his services. "Very well," replied the medico. "In that case my fee is $10, the money to be paid now."

The men remonstrated, but the doctor was obdurate and shut down his window. He waited, however, to hear what they would say. "Well, what will we do now?" asked the farmer whose wife was ill. And the reply that was given must have been as gratifying as it was amusing to the listening doctor. It was: "I think you would better give it. The funeral would cost you more."

An Amateur Critic.

Here is a schoolboy's criticism of Sir Walter Scott in an examination paper which the New York Commercial Advertiser vouches for: "Walter Scott was a great poet. When he was dying, he felt it coming on, so he wrote some touching lines which he ment for himself:

"The way was long the wind was cold
The minstrel was infirm old.

"O may we all feel the same when death catches hold of us."

He was a great favorite with Mrs. Dolly Madison, the president's wife, for he was a splendid specimen of Indian and Scotch manhood and was smart and well educated. Mrs. Madison gave him a pair of peafowls and he brought them home and from that pair every peafowl in Mississippi has descended. This pair was many years afterwards given to Colonel Gordon's uncle, Josiah Walton, and by him to his sister, Mrs. Doggett, and the male bird lived to be seventy-two years old. A pair of this same stock has been recently presented to the city of Memphis for their zoo. I had no idea that peafowls lived to such great age, but I do know that we have been breeding them for over twenty years and have given away a great many and I never knew one to die a natural death.

The United States Consul at Madgeburg, Germany, describes an electrical farm operated in Germany in which the power for generating the electric current was derived from a stream whose waters were dammed up to secure the necessary fall to turn a large turbine wheel. Nearly all the farm machinery, including pumps, harvesters, feed cutters, thrashing machines, churns and plows, were operated by the electricity thus generated, which was conducted to all parts of the farm on overhead wires.

There has recently been opened on one of the lower slopes of Mount Lebanon, Syria, near the road from Beirut to Damascus, a newly built hospital for the insane. Its founder is Mr. Theophilus Waldmeier, a veteran missionary in Abyssinia and Syria. A considerable area of land and gardens for the growth of wheat, olives and other fruit surrounds the buildings. It is the first organized lunatic asylum in Syria, where the need for such institutions is said to be great. It will probably be dependent upon support from Europe for a good many years.

Benefits of Dear Coal.

An observing engineer, traveling through some of the Swiss manufacturing centers noticed that, generally, Swiss steam engines were of a higher economical type than those in England, while Swiss electrical generators and motors were distinctly inferior to those of English standard practice. By a process of deduction from local circumstances he was able to attribute these two circumstances to the high cost of fuel in Switzerland on the one hand, and the great plenty and consequent cheapness of natural waterpowers in the country on the other.

The highest results in any branch of industry require an artificial stimulus. At no time within recent memory has the trade in economical appliances for the production of steam energy been as active as it is now. Economization in manufacturing processes simply means the suppression of waste and in that view the existing exorbitant cost of fuel is not without its compensations. It must also be remembered that the present high price of coal is most likely transitory, but that the economical improvements to which it may give rise must be permanent, for, however slow advance in manufacturing practice may be, there is no stepping back.—London Express.

Respected His Memory.

She entered the office of the tombstone company, and the clerks immediately became sad of countenance.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" asked the chief mourner.

"Yes; my husband, John T. Abernathy, has died, and I would like to secure some suitably engraved headstone—something with an appropriate inscription, if you please."

"Certainly, madame, right this way. Now, here is a very pretty thing in the stone line. Right over this cross we would carve: 'Here lies John T. Abernathy,' and——"

"Ah, sir," interrupted the widow, "you must think me cruel. I would not say 'Here lies.' That was one of his faults in life, and I will not follow him with the accusation now that he is gone."—Denver Times.

Began Anew at Sixty-six and Succeeded.

An American came to this country at sixty-six with a wife and four children and $14 in his pocket, having lost a fortune in another country by speculation. This man was "game." He started in doing odd jobs of surveying down in the hot country, raised vegetables on a small tract of land he hired, gradually acquired some upland country where everybody said coffee could not be grown, and made a success of his plantation. He added more land as time went on, and now takes in $30,000 a year gold from his place. He is eighty-six now, and says that, were he again to lose his property, he has the grit to begin life over again.—Mexican Herald.

Fifty Thousand Postcards Destroyed.

It is said in Holland that a firm of picture postcard makers in The Hague was so confident that Queen Wilhelmina would marry Duke Adolf of Mecklenburg-Schwerin that they printed his picture on 50,000 cards, in readiness for the announcement. ...On ..., 20, ...ation." ...of our coun-...God for the un-bestowed upon us. ...us to international ... Wha... on all the plan-... of late had such e...rgement of commercial opportunity as is now opening before this nation? Cuba and Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands brought into close contact with us, and through steamship subsidy and Nicaragua canal, which will surely be afforded by Congress, all the republics of South America will be brought into most active trade with the United States. "On the south three gates." While our next-door neighbors, the southern republics and neighboring colonies, imported from European countries 3000 miles away $675,000,000 worth of goods in a year, only $126,000,000 worth went from the United States—$126,000,000 out of $675,000,000, only one-fifth of the trade ours, European nations taking the four fingers and leaving us the poor thumb. Now all this is to be changed. There is nothing but a comparative ferry between the islands which have recently come under our protection, and only a ferry between us and Bolivia, Peru, Paraguay, Uruguay, Venezuela, Salvador, Nicaragua, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador and Brazil, while there are raging seas and long voyages between them and Europe. By the mandate of the United States all that will be changed through new facilities of transportation. The Hispano-American congress, just closed at Madrid, will fail in its attempt to divert all the trade of South America from us to Europe.

In anticipation of what is sure to come I nail on the front door of this nation an advertisement:

Wanted—One hundred thousand men to build railroads through South America and the islands of the sea under our protection.

Wanted—A thousand telegraph operators.

Wanted—One hundred million dollars worth of dry goods from the great cities of the United States.

Wanted—All the clocks you can make at New Haven, and all the brains you can spare from Boston, and all the bells you can mold at Troy, and all the McCormick reapers you fashion at Chicago, and all the hams you can turn out at Cincinnati, and all the railroad iron you can send from Pittsburg, and all the statesmen that you can spare from Washington.

Wanted — Right away, wanted by new and swifter steamers, wanted by rail train, lawyers to plead our causes.

Wanted—Doctors to cure our sick.

Wanted—Ministers to evangelize our population.

Wanted — Professors to establish our universities.

"On the three south gates!" Yea, a thousand gates! South America and all the islands of the sea approximate are rightfully our commercial domain, and the Congress of the United States will see to it that we get what belongs to us.

And then tides of travel will be somewhat diverted from Europe to our islands at the south and to the land of the Aztecs. Much of the $125,000,000 yearly expended by Americans in Europe will be expended in southern exploration, in looking at some of the ruins of the forty-seven cities which Stephens found only a little way apart, and in walking through the great doorways and over the miracles of mosaic and along by the monumental glories of another civilization, and ancient America will with cold lips of stone kiss the warm lips of modern America, and to have seen the Andes and Popocatepetl will be deemed as important as to have seen the Alpine and Balkan ranges. And there will be fewer people spoiled by foreign travel and in our midst less of the poor and nauseating imitation of the French shrug and the intentional hesitancy of a brainless foreign swell. The fact is that many are made vain by European travel, and, though sensible when they embarked, they return with a collar and a cravat and a shoe and a coat and a pronunciation and a contempt for American institutions and the bend of the elbow that make one believe in evolution backward from man to ape. Of the many thousands who now cross the sea annually thousands will on pleasure and business visit southern lands, and so tourists and merchants and scientists and capitalists will all help in this national development. "On the south three gates." And what other nation has such openings for commercial enlargement as ours?

Again, in this international comparison notice the happy condition of our country as compared with most countries. Russia under the shadow of the dreadful illness of her great and good emperor, who now more than any man in all the world represents "peace on earth, good will to men," and whose empress, near the most solemn hour that ever comes to a woman's soul, is anxious for him to whom she has given hand and heart, not for political reasons, but through old-fashioned love such as blesses our humbler dwellings; India, under the agonies of a famine which though somewhat lifted has filled hundreds of thousands of graves and thrown millions into orphanage; Austria only waiting for her genial Francis Joseph to die so as to let Hungary rise in rebellion and make the palace of Vienna quake with insurrection; Spain in Carlist revolution and pauperized as seldom any nation has been pauperized; Italy under the horrors of her king's assassination; China shuddering with a fear of dismemberment, her capital in possession of foreign nations. After a review of the conditions in other lands can you find a more appropriate utterance in regard to our country than the exclamation of the text, "He hath not dealt so with any nation?"

Compare the autumnal report of harvests in America this year and the harvests abroad. Last summer I crossed the continent of Europe twice, and I saw no such harvests as are spoken of in this statement. Hear it, all you men and women who want everybody to have enough to eat and wear. I have to tell you that the corn crop of our country this year is one of the four largest crops on record, 2,105,000,000 bushels. The cotton crop, though smaller than at some times, will on that account bring bigger prices, and so cotton planters of the South are prosperous. The wheat fields have provided bread enough and to spare. The potato crop one of the five largest crops on record, 211,000,000 bushels. Twenty-two million two hundred thousand swine slain, and yet so many hogs left!

But now I give you the comparative exports and imports, which tell the story of national prosperity as nothing else can. Excess of exports over imports, $544,400,000. Now, let all pessimists hide themselves in the dens and caves of the earth, while all grateful souls fill the churches with doxology. Notice also that while other countries are at their wits' ends as

...s all this, not a disturbance from ...awrence River to Key West or from ...ghlands of New Jersey to Golden Horn of the Pacific. Sectional controversies ended. The North and South brought into complete accord by the Spanish war, which put the Lees and the Grants on the same side, Vermonters and Georgians in the same brigade. And since our Civil War we are all mixed up. Southern men have married Northern wives, and Northern men have married Southern wives, and your children are half Mississippian and half New Englander, and to make another division between the North and the South possible you would have to do with your child as Solomon proposed with the child brought before him for judgment—divide it with the sword, giving half to the North and half to the South. No; there is nothing so hard to split as a cradle. In other lands there is some bright marriage of royal families, some princess compelled to marry some disagreeable foreign dignitary in order to keep the balance of political power in Europe, the ill-matched pair fighting out on a small scale that which would have been an international contest, sometimes the husband having the balance of power and sometimes the wife.

If there is anything that stirs my admiration it is a man without any education himself sending his sons to college, and without any opportunity for luxury himself resolved that though he shall have it hard all the days of his life his children shall have a good start.

And I tell you that though some of our people may have great commercial struggles there is going to be a great opening for their sons and daughters as they come on to take their places in the world.

Continuing this international comparison I have to say to you that we have a better climate than is to be found in any other nation. We do not suffer from anything like the Scotch mists or the English fogs or the Russian ice blasts or the typhus of Southern Europe or the Asiatic cholera. Epidemics in America are exceptional, very exceptional. Plenty of wood and coal to make a roaring fire midwinter. Easy access to seabeach or mountain top when the ardors of summer come down, Michigan wheat for the bread, Long Island corn for the meal, Carolina rice for the queen of puddings, Louisiana sugar to sweeten our beverages, Georgia cotton to keep us warm, in our hand all products and all climates. Are your nerves weak? Go north. Is your throat delicate? Go south. Do you feel crowded and want more room? Go west.

It was one of those buildings which seize you with enchantment as you enter and all the rest of your life holds you with a charm. I happened to see the first glow of the fire which on that cold day looked out from the windows of the costly pile. I saw the angry elements roar and rave. The shout of affrighted workman and the assault of fire engines only seemed to madden the rage of the monsters that rose up to devour all that came within reach of their chain.

Up along the walls and through the doors were pushed hands that snatched down all they could reach and hurled it into the abyss of flame beneath. The windows of the tower would light up for a minute with a wild glare and then darken, as though fiends with streaming locks of fire had come out to gaze on in laughing mockery of all human attempts and then sunk again into their native darkness.

The roofs began here and there to blossom in wreaths and vines of flame. Up and down the pillars ran serpents of fire. Out from the windows great arms and fingers of flames were extended, as though destroyed spirits were begging for deliverance. The tower put on a coronet of flame and staggered and fell, the sparks flying, the firemen escaping, the terror accumulating.

Books, maps, rare correspondence, autographs of kings, costly diagrams burned to cinder or scattered for many a rood upon the wild wind to be picked up by the excited multitude. Oh, it seemed like some great funeral pile in which the wealth and glory of our land had leaped to burn with its consuming treasures. The heavens were blackened with whirlwinds of smoke, through which shot the long red shafts of calamity.

Destruction waved its fiery banner from the remaining towers, and in the thunder of falling beams and in the roaring surge of billowing fire I heard the spirits of ruin and desolation and woe clapping their hands and shouting, "Aha! aha!"

I turned and looked upon the white dome of yonder capitol, which rose through the frosty air as imposing as though all the white marble of the earth had come to resurrection and stood before us, reminding one of the great white throne of heaven. There it stood, unmoved by the terrors which that day had been kindled before it. No tremor in its majestic columns, no flush of excitement in its veins of marble. Column and capital and dome built to endure until the world itself shatters in the convulsions of the last earthquake. Oh, what a contrast between the smoking ruins on the one hand and that gorgeous white dream of architecture on the other! Well, the day speeds on when the grandest achievement of man will be consumed and the world will blaze. Down will go galleries of art and thrones of royalty and the hurricane of God's power will scatter even the ashes of consumed greatness and glory. Not one tower left, not one city unconsumed, not one scene of grandeur to relieve the desolation. Forests dismasted, seas licked up, continents sunk, hemispheres annihilated. Telegraphers' Grip.

"I have lost my grip."

This phrase is applied by men to all kinds of failure. One of the technical usages of losing one's grip is in the case of telegraph operators.

Many of the most skilled operators suffer at times from a loss of the "grip" and are compelled to give way temporarily to a substitute. This "grip" is the hold on the key, and the moment the operator begins to lose the control of this "grip" he realizes a rest, although for only a brief time, is due him.

Another but unpleasant term applied to this loss of "grip" is "telegraphers' paralysis." It shows itself in many curious ways, all showing that the muscles brought into play in working the key are badly worn.

One of the most skillful operators in Louisville, who is subject to these attacks, cannot send "P." The Morse manual calls for five dots for this letter. The operator in question has by some hook or crook lost the power to stop at the fifth dot, and it is a common thing for him to warn the taker to look out for his "P's."

Recently he asked a fellow operator to watch him send "P's" and to stop him at the end of the fifth dot. It resulted that, although he would be warned at the fourth dot, the fingers, no longer mastered by the brain, would continue dotting beyond the fifth.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Quick-Witted.

"It was simply an exhibition of nerve and quick wit," said the old banker who was dining at his club with a number of friends. "No one but the paying teller knew what was happening at the time, and what might have been a tragedy was turned into a comedy by his quick wit.

"During the noon hour one day an old man approached the paying teller and presented a check for $1,000,000. With it was a badly written letter to the effect that if the immediate payment of the check was not forthcoming the teller would have his head blown off. He was nothing but a crank, but he had come armed for business, and if the wit of the paying teller had failed him for an instant there might have been a tragedy. But the paying teller coolly took up the check, glanced at it and then handed it back with the remark that the crank had neglected to put a stamp upon it. In an instant the crank was full of apologies at his oversight and departed to get a stamp. It took but a moment to notify the police, and the crank was put where there is no danger of his demanding the payment of any more $1,000,000 checks at the point of a gun."—Detroit Free

Better prices obtained for farm products, the producers being brought into daily touch with the state of the markets, and thus being enabled to take advantage of information heretofore unattainable.

In the communities where it has been tried free delivery is considered the greatest boon that the Government ever has conferred on them. One Missouri farmer has calculated that in the last fifteen years he has driven 12,000 miles going to and from the postoffice to get his mail—all travel that is saved to him by the free delivery system.

In the last report of the First Assistant Postmaster-General there are some striking illustrations.

riding in a specially constructed postal wagon, he as often as not mounts a bucking bronco, or drives him to a buckboard, with only an umbrella for shade. the carrier can probably sleep as comfortably in his saddle as anywhere se.

The hardships sometimes encount ered by the rural carriers are shown in the photograph of a rural carrier in Northern Ohio returning from a trip when the thermometer was forty degrees below zero. Yet, though the First Assistant Postmaster-General reports that there are several girls acting as bonded rural carriers, few instances are recorded of their failing to make their daily trips, either in the coldest storms of winter or the blazing heat of summer.

One question which has received grave consideration by the Department is the insecurity and improper character of the mail boxes put up. ...d this subject the First Assistant Postmaster-General says:

In the early days of the service, when neither Congress nor the Postoffice Department, as then organized, held out any hope that rural free delivery would prove more than a transitory experiment, extreme carelessness was manifested as to the kind of receptacles put up as rural free delivery boxes. Tomato cans, cigar boxes, drainage pipes up ended, soap boxes and even sections of discarded stove pipes were used as mail boxes, and were frequently placed in hedge rows or other inconvenient spots out of reach of the carrier.

The Department has entered upon a systematic effort to correct this condition of things, and a recommendation is made that the Government provide uniform boxes and maintain them, charging a moderate rental.

The Weather Calendar.

One of the best calendars of the season is the "Cardui Weather Chart and Calendar for 1900", published by the Chattanooga Medicine Company, the manufacturers of McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught. The Banner office has just received one from the publishers, which consists of twelve sheets of paper, 13 x 20 inches in size, all fastened together with a gilt tin strip and a brass loop hanger. Each sheet contains the calendar for one month in large figures that can be read across any room. Under the signals patent weather signals indicating Prof. DeVoe's Weather Forecasts for every day in the year appear. The moon's changes and legal holiday's are also shown. We understand a few copies of it can be secured by sending 10 one-cent postage stamps to the Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

And Good For Clanton, Too

In urging the building of a cotton mill at Enterprise, the Weekly Enterprise says: The writer was in Eutaula two weeks ago. We were requested to interview Captain Jno. W. Tullis, who is president of the big cotton mill of that city. We asked him pointedly if there was money in the cotton mil business. We gained from him, in substance, the following information: "Yes" said he, "there is money in it for the men who hold the stock; money in it for the idle people of a community; money in it for the merchants of the town, and money in it for the country surrounding the mill. Money? Why, yes. We have earned $67,000 net after all expenses were paid, and will clear $10,000 for the next quarter."

"How many, if any, advantages do we have over northern and eastern towns?"

"You have many. First, you have your own labor which you get from the farm. You teach this labor to become skilled, after which it is the best in the world. It is 100 per cent better than any foreign labor which the eastern mills possess. Again, you are situated in a fine country, where you have easy access to thousands of cords of fine wood for steam purposes. This affords a market for farmers to sell their wastage at a fair paice. A well conducted cotton mill at Enterprise will pay even more than one in a larger town, because of thes and other advantages which it possesses.

Why Do We Eat?

First, we must build up the tissues in the growing body and reconstruct those worn out by use; second, we must supply nervous, muscular and digestive force to the different parts of the body. Scott's Emulsion plays a very important part as regards both objects. All delicate and rapidly growing children need it.

Mrs. S. E. Allen, Waycooche, Ala, writes: Have taken Dr. M. A. Simmons Liver Medicine 12 years. I had a Bad Cough; thought I had consumption; could not do any housework. After using it awhile I got well and strong and can do my work with perfect ease. I would not give one package of it for half-dozen Black Draught. For sale by Clanton Drug Co.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

Potato with Cheese—Put two cups of one-fourth-inch slices of pared boiled potatoes in a deep baking dish with a teaspoonful of pepper and salt. Cover with sweet cream, place a layer of grated rich American cheese on top; bake twenty-five minutes in moderate oven. Garnish with sliced cucumbers.

Pineapple Custard—Make a custard, taking two eggs to two-thirds of a quart of milk, one-third cupful of sugar. Season with nutmeg. Put in glasses, set in a pan of water and bake thirty minutes. Cover the custard, which should about half fill the glasses, with pineapple to a depth of one inch or so, using the canned pineapple and cutting in small pieces. Fill up glasses with whipped cream. Serve cold.

Chicken Boudins—Put into a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, one gill of stock, and two tablespoonfuls of stale bread crumbs; stir until boiling; add one pint of cold cooked chicken chopped fine, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Take from the fire and add two well-beaten eggs. Fill into small greased molds, stand in hot water and cook in the oven fifteen minutes. Serve hot with a cream sauce made from rich milk, thickened to the consistency of cream.

...ell, you shall hear of two or three of her pranks, and then judge as to whether or not Judy was a rogue.

For some time, one summer, there had been hardly any eggs found in the hen-shed; and at the same time Judy's appetite had decreased, to the notice of everybody.

At last Mr. Lemond's children, early ...morning, hid behind a barrel, ...a large heap of egg-shells had ...found the day before. They had ...been long in their hiding-place when Ju... sneaked in. Yes, sneaked in! Firs... she looked around in all directions. ...en she put one paw over the threshold, and sniffed as though she would say, "There is something strange in the air!"

But I dare say ... was very hungry for her breakfast. ... any rate, Judy was soon near one of the nests; and, stretching herself up to it, with a sharp whack she opened a nice warm egg, and licked up the delicious contents with great relish. She was just about lifting her paw for a second whack on a second egg, when the children burst from behind the barrel; and off went Judy, not to return until late afternoon, when she brought up the cows in a very proper way, and came for her usual cracker to the side door, just as though nothing had happened but what was good and right.

The next day, too, Judy appeared at the side door at the right hour for her cracker.

"Have you brought home the cows?" questioned old Hannah, as usual.

Judy wagged her tail. But that tail did not seem to Hannah to stand up joyfully, as it did when Judy felt she had honestly earned her cracker; and Hannah thought it well enough to have a look into the barn, and, sure enough, the cows were not there.

"You naughty dog!" Hannah scolded. "You go right down to the pasture and fetch those cows!"

Off Judy ran. Do you think she knew she had told a falsehood? And in a very short time there was such a stampede toward the barn that every one ran to see, and there was Judy, bringing in the cows at full speed. And then she camagain, with her tail very joyfully waging for her cracker.

One cold day in the winter Mr. Lemond was ...she well, as usual, to give the cows water. The path from the barn was very slippery; and it was very icy, too, about the pump, and it was slow business. After all had drank, Mr. Lemond spoke to Judy.

"Take the cows into the barn."

Judy at once barked, as she did in the pture, which meant "Go!" and the cws started. Judy let them all pass along, in line, as cows ought. Then she followed; but she did not wal quietly, as a dog in charge ought to alk. Oh, no! She seized hold of the last cow's tail, and had a beautiful ride to the barn, down the long, slippy path.

After Judy had indulged herself in these slides a few times, the cows became very nervous about going to the well; and she was given to a friend, and had to go away a long distance to live. But I dare say she found ways to amuse herself in her new home.—Helene H. Boll, in Little Folks.

The Legend of the Gentian.

Once the Queen of the Fairies was caught in a shower. She ran to a Gentian and asked for shelter. "Who are you, that you disturb me so late at night?" asked the Gentian. "I am the Queen of the Fairies, and I ask only for shelter," said the little stranger. "Go and ask my sister over there to take you in, and leave me to sleep," said the cross Gentian. The poor Fairy Queen turned sadly away, but a sweet voice called to her, "Poor little lady, come in and I will shelter you till morning."

Looking around she found that it was another Gentian that called to her, so she gladly accepted the invitation. At early dawn the Fairy Queen rose and said to the friendly Gentian, "I am the Queen of the Fairies, and I can repay you for your kindness. You and your children shall hereafter have the power to open your pretty fringed eyes to the sunlight, but your selfish sister's shall remain forever closed."

Qualities of a Good Wife.

The qualities given to constitute a good wife have been stated many times, but by no one better, perhaps, than the poet Burns, who divided the scale of good wifeship into ten parts: Good nature, four; good sense, two; wit, one; personal charms, one. The remaining two degrees covered fortune, education, family, blood, etc.

...OF...

Professor Hast... of the Minnesota station, puts it well in saying that it has become necessary to feed concentrates in connection wth roughage, because the dairy cow has been developed into an artificial animal. Had she remained in her original state, when she yielded only enough milk to nourish her young, she would find enough nutriment in what coarse feed she could eat and digest to produce the amount of milk required for that purpose, but since her mammary functions have been developed more than her feeding capacity, we must establish an equilibrium between supply and demand for nutriment needed for the production of the milk, and to this end we must use some food that contains a larger percentage of digestible matter than is found in coarse food.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR MUTTON.

It is agreed upon by nearly every one interested in supplying the meat market of the world that the demand for mutton is steadily and surely on the increase, and the reason for it is that consumers from all parts are forming a great taste for mutton every year.

Many farmers are beginning to see this and are starting flocks so as to have a "finger in the pie," for they fully realize that the growing of mutton sheep would afford profitable employment for every acre of grazing land in the country, the greater part of which, at the present time, is worthless to the farmer, as he does not make any use of it whatever. There is no use in allowing such land to lie idle when sheep may be kept on it just as well as not, and especially when we realize that these sheep, with ordinary care and attention, will turn in a handsome profit at the end of every year.

TOTAL NEGLECT IN THE ORCHARDS.

From the School of Horticulture of Nova Scotia comes a statement that last spring, before the apple trees bloomed, there was so much wet weather that many orchardists failed to spray their trees, but did spray two or three times after the blossoms fell. In nearly every such case where no early spraying was done, the apples were badly ...ed, no matter how many times ... were sprayed after blossoming. ...t those who sprayed early enough ...ad apples very free from black spots, even though they sprayed but once after the blossoms fell. The wet weather was just the most favorable time for the growth of the fungus that causes the black spot. This may explain why some have reported great success from spraying, while others who sprayed no more, but sprayed earlier or between showers later in the season, report good crops of clean fruit. This is as applicable in the United States as in Nova Scotia. Keep the spraying up during the wet weather if you would keep down the black spot, and we think it as applicable to the pear cracking fungus, and to some of the rusts.

THE OLD WAGON AND LOW WHEELS.

Within the last two or three years low-down steel wheels have been put on to a great many ... and with economy, too. It often happens that the wheels to the wagon become used up while yet the rest of the wagon is comparatively good, and therefore a set of steel wheels can be put on and a very good wagon had at much less expense than an entire new wagon can be purchased for. It then becomes the very best thing the farmer can do to procure a set of broad tired steel wheels. This is just what has happened to a wagon I am now using. The tires are six inches wide and I like this width very much. It avoids cutting up the fields, and indeed, in passing over them, acts in a measure as does a roller. It is low, and for hauling manure, stone, and most everything else on the farm, is more convenient than the high-wheeled wagon, saving, as it does, a great deal of lifting. Possibly it may haul a little harder, and if this is the case, you can afford to load a little lighter. In hauling hay I use my high-wheeled wagon, as I pitch off by hand, and so find it more convenient, especially when pitching up high. But there is a place for the low-down wagon on every farm, and it should be possessed. The farmer who has never used it scarcely realizes the convenience of it. I will

Last year ... to convince many farmers ... silo was essential for correct feeding. By raising corn for ... they made provision against any accident to the summer crops, and ...abled them to carry their animals along successfully, summer or winter, through any kind of weather. Consequently more silos were probably filled this year than ever before. Silos built large enough will not only carry the cattle through winter, but they will have surplus enough to make up any deficiency in the summer crop. Of course cattle do not take to ensilage when they can get green grass and fodder corn, but they much prefer it to the poor pasture that many animals have to put up with in midsummer.

The natural accompaniment of the silo for summer feeding is a good soiling crop. With these two properly raised the stock raiser or dairyman is entirely independent of the weather, and a drought does not affect him at all. Fodder corn can be planted early in the spring for a soiling crop, and when dry weather comes there will be food in abundance. The cows then instead of hustling for a living in bare pasture fields can eat good meals in the cool, quiet, shady parts of the fields or barnyard. What a difference this makes in their milk and butter production, also in their general health! And yet the extra labor and cost required to do this is insignificant. It is something that a dairyman must do if he would make money in these days of competition and comparatively small profits.—W. E. Farmer, in American Cultivator.

THE second prohibition meeting at Clanton last Friday night was was well attended and the same interest manifested as at the first meeting. Rev. F. M. Woods was again in the chair. The meeting adjourned until Friday night, January 4, 1901.

As Mr. Oliver disclaims having introduced any bill for the repeal of the prohibition law of Chilton county we congratulate our prohibition friends on its maintainance without further effort on their part.

THE Stock and Road Laws are still open for discussion and we have on hand a large amount of correspondence on these questions, which we are endeavoring to publish as early as possible. At the same time we would urge the people ple to attend their Beat meeting and send full delegations to the county convention at Clanton, on Jan. 12.

A Grateful Poet.

"Twenty years ago I wrote a poem of considerable length," said a caller in a newspaper office.

"Yes," said the editor.

"I brought it to this office, and you refused to publish it."

"Very likely."

"I remember that I mentally put you down then as an idiot who didn't know enough to poetic when hurt."

"Naturally."

"Well, sir, I looked that poem over again the other day and made up my mind to come and see you about it."

"Yes."

The city of Buffalo, having alone a population equal to more than quarter that of the entire state of Alabama, is within a night's ride of the homes of more than 40,000,000 people, of more than half the population of the United States. The Pan-American Exposition, whose gates are to be opened on the 1st of next May, is the first great Exposition in the eastern part of the country since the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia 25 years ago. It will be the first opportunity that Alabama has had to curry an object lesson, such as it now can offer, to the people of the north.

Governor Joseph F. Johnston, in his inaugural address on Dec. 1, 1896, made the assertion that "there is no territory of like size in the known world so prolific in the variety of its resources" as Alabama. He said further that "were a wall to be erected around the state, cutting off all access with its neighbors, the people could produce within their borders everything necessary for the comfort and convenience of man." But the policy of Alabama is quite the reverse of this. The mines and forests and agricultural lands of the state are being developed as never before, and still less than one-third of the productive area is touched, and the mineral wealth of the state is still undeveloped. There is opportunity for every one who is prepared to take up the task of developing a business enterprise under the most favorable conditions that any state can offer. With nearly 5,000 miles of railroads traversing the state in every direction and navigable rivers affording an unusual means of transportation from points untouched by railroad, with abundant water power in almost every section of the state, with a climate that permits its inhabitants to follow outdoor employment without discomfort almost every day in the year, with a population earnestly devoted to the pursuits of peace and sustaining loyally a just and economic system of government, Alabama has indeed much to offer and should be proud to make her resources known wherever opportunity permits.

The purpose of the Pan-American Exposition are, first of all, the promotion of trade and commerce and the dissemination of knowledge of commercial and industrial possibilities among all the people of the western hemisphere. It is distinctly a Pan-American enterprise, the prefix "Pan" having the meaning of ... and the exposition being for all the Americas. There will be no exhibits from the old world. Nearly all of the central and South American countries will be represented, some of them having very large and wonderful exhibits of their resources. It is expected that all of the states will also be represented either by state exhibits or by the exhibits of individuals in various divisions of the Exposition. It is to be hoped, therefore, that Alabama may have an exhibit that will be to her credit and such a one as to surprise people who are unfamiliar with the boundless resources of which this state can boast.

I was glad I made the hard trip to Luxor. I repaid me. Like the happy daddy of a large family who debated with himself at which time he was the happiest, at the birth of his first born, or at the time he was sure this one was the last born. I too was in a quandary as to the fact, was I not happier to leave it behind me. So after another sit to with the Arabs I succeeded in getting into the train on my return journey. They left the water here out of the canals by the same method we did in primative time by a long pole balanced on another pole laid across two upright posts; the bucket being swung on the end of the long pole, descends into the water and a ball of straw or mud makes the balance on the other end.

First,-Because the proprietors have always been most careful in selecting the various ingredients used in its composition, namely; the finest Cod Liver Oil, and the purest Hypophosphites.

Second,-Because they have so skillfully combined the various ingredients that the best possible results are obtained by its use.

Third,-Because it has made so many sickly, delicate children strong and healthy, given health and rosy cheeks to so many pale, anaemic girls, and healed the lungs and restored to full health, so many thousands in the first stages of Consumption.

I was much amused at an Englishman on the train with me, who he called out in Arabic for a water jug from a water seller who passed along the train selling water in small jugs. Pour some of it out, he said, so I can see if it is good (that is clear,) there is really no good water anywhere outside of America and England. It proved clear, the Englishman paid him, and sat it uncorked under his seat, he explaining to me that they would sell you the muddy Nile water if you did not watch them. After some minutes he concluded to eat his lunch and reached for his water jug, took a drink with an oath, finding to his dismay, the scoundrel had swapped jugs on him, and given him a muddy water jug after all. At next station I tried my hand buying water for us both. I watched closely so he could not exchange them on me. But he got me after all, selling me one that leaked, and my water soon leaked out. I brought the jug along with me and will carry it home as a souvinir. The scoundrel knew well enough there was a hole in it when he sold it to me.

Wages are low in Egypt. Strong railroad hands, 15 cents per day; carpenters, 30 cents; blacksmiths, 75 cents. It is simply wonderful the number of languages the people of these cosmopolitan cities like Cairo acquire. The daughter of our hotel man, a little maid of nine and a half years, speaks six languages, and all the hotel's staff speak from four to seven languages. You simply have to learn these four to get on in the East - Arabic, French, Italian, Greek, or you can't get paying positions.

As far as I have been and as many countries as I have seen, I have not yet been where I did not see the virtues of the Singer sewing machine, New York Life Insurance Company, sunlight soap and Coleman's mustard. Dr. King and I went around to the hall of the American missions in Cairo. I never had the ... service that can be but had an old fashioned prayer-meeting in a private house. Something I had not attended since a boy. It made me feel a good deal at home, opened up my heart to the memory of happy by-gone days. I know it did me good, for before I knew it I had put a pound in the hat, and if that sins that were in my heart I have lost my bearings since I left my native home.

Blindness is prevalent all over the east. Suppose it comes from the causes—first they wear the fez with no shade for the eye ... Second, the barrenness of the desert, the bright sun making an awful glare on the sands and ... Third, the lack of water and cleanliness as to their eyes; sore eyes among the children being the rule and not the exception everywhere. We saw some of the famous banyan trees at Cairo.
